GERMANY MODIFIES SHIPPING RULES

LABOR REFORM PROPOSED BY U. S. QUIZ BODY

EXTEND ERDMAN ACT.

New York, Feb. 6.—Establishment of a federal labor bureau, with branches in every postoffice in the United States;

Extension of the Erdman conciliation act so that a federal commission will have power to tender mediation in all industrial disputes in industries which do an interstate business;

Suggestions that all corporations establish welfare boards in their organizations and make it easy for an employé with a grievance to present the same to a responsible official for consideration.

These are the reforms, it was learned today, that the federal commission on industrial relations will recommend to congress as a result of its investigations held in this city.

Divided on Weighty Issues.

The commission will be unanimous in the suggestions. But on the weighty questions like labor's demanded share in profits, for representation on boards of directors, public ownership and control of utilities, and the like, the making of the report will find the commission divided.

It was announced today that the commission would hear all the witnesses subpœnaed for the present hearing at a session to be held either in New York or Washington about April 1.

Dr. Frederick A. Cleveland, director of the bureau of municipal research, was a witness today. Dr. Cleveland vigorously denounced the commission for alleged unfairness.

Sees Bureau Wronged.

Dr. Cleveland declared the commission has assailed the motives of the bureau of municipal research in intimating that it had changed its policies because John D. Rockefeller gave it $20,000. He assailed Dr. W. H. Allen, the University of Wisconsin expert, who has made an investigation of the various foundations for the commission, as "prejudiced and unfair." Allen was formerly head of the bureau and his friends have claimed that he resigned because of undue Rockefeller domination.

Chairman Walsh resented the imputation and demanded that Cleveland prove his allegations, which he promised to do in a supplementary statement to be filed with the commission later.

Charges More Domination.

Robert W. Hebbard, secretary of the state board of charities and formerly commissioner of charities of New York, charged specifically that the American Social Hygiene association was influenced in its work by Rockefeller domination.

Hebbard declared that Dr. Charles W. Eliot of Harvard, as president of the association, in naming the executive committee of the organization put thereon three Rockefeller lieutenants.

Hebbard said that when he threatened legal action Dr. Eliot called a meeting of the directors and legalized the appointments.

Even Union Label Barred.

"The association is absolutely dominated by Mr. Rockefeller's lieutenants," said Hebbard, "and as a result of the insistence of Jerome D. Greene, secretary of the Rockefeller foundation, even the union label was removed from the literature of the association."

Before the commission adjourned Samuel Untermyer furnished a statement requested by the commission in support of his assertion that J. P. Morgan & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. dominate a majority of the railroads of the country. In this statement he declared that his claim was founded on "provable facts" and was supported by the findings of the congressional committee which investigated the so-called money trust.

SECRET STILLS IN RUSSIA.

Prohibition of Vodka Leads to Refining of Shellac to Be Used as Drink.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6.—During the half year since the sale of vodka has been prohibited there have been discovered 1,000 secret distilleries. Many of them have been engaged in refining shellac and converting methylated spirits into alcoholic beverages.

Gayest Colors, Not War Shades, for Spring Men

None of the Sad Hero Costumes for America, Tailors Decide.

SHOW OPEN THIS WEEK

In vain will the visitor seek at the convention of the National Merchant Tailors' association at the Congress hotel next Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday for those chic military effects. The American man of fashion who had hoped to look handsome and heroic in quasi-military tailorings this spring and summer is to be disappointed. Every suit is to be cut soft and low; its lines symbolical of peace. Every garment is to be white light, the colors of gayety and freedom from sorrow.

Europe is at war; her people are garbed in misery and in mourning. America is at peace; her people should wear the vestments of good cheer. America being the greatest neutral country, her people should avoid suggestions of war in their tailorings—neutral shades for neutrals. The dove of peace is white; therefore the seaside young man on a peaceful outing will, if he wears high priced tailored suits, appear in white.

Sign Treaty of Peace.

Not a garment shown during the tailors' convention at the Congress hotel will suggest that the designer had ever seen or heard of Europe and its work. Militarism first lifted its hydra-head among American fashions with the Bulgarian silks. Later, since the general outbreak of hostilities, have come the Russian overcoat with its high collar, the German coat with its high shoulders and straight cut front, the brass buttons and the trouser braids. But there are to be no more. The national association tailors have signed a treaty of peace and all spring and summer styles are to breathe of meadows and sunshine.

Forget European War.

"The American man will visit American scenes this year," said John E. Spann, style master of the convention; "therefore, as he is not going to Europe, he should forget Europe and its gloom. All the spring and summer suits to be shown this year will be white or light and gay in color.

"That the degree of white for men's wear should have originated in Chicago is an interesting comment on the evolution of this metropolis from the smokey city of popular fancy. Ten years ago the idea would have been greeted with derision; today our well dressed men are clamoring for it."

Conventions for the Week.

Chicago this week will become the Mecca of American construction interests. Half a dozen national conventions of lumber, cement, and affiliated industries will be in session and the city will be filled with contractors, engineers, material men and others interested in constructive enterprises.

CHARGE $135,000 SHORTAGE TO MISSOURI BANK CASHIER.

Cape Girardeau Institution Sues Surety Company Which Furnished Bond.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 6.—A shortage of $135,000 in the accounts of L. S. Joseph, former cashier of the First National bank of Cape Girardeau, Mo., is charged in suit filed by the bank in the federal District court here today. The suit is directed against the surety company that was on Joseph's bond.

Joseph resigned recently as cashier of the bank and the bank now is suing the surety company for $53,000. The attorney for the bank said the directors made enough deposits in the bank to prevent a crash. Joseph had charge of the bank's loans.

WILSON MEN PLAN OPENING 1916 CAMPAIGN

Original Backers Summoned to Conferences in Washington.

ILLINOISANS ARE FIRST

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Although President Wilson formally denied on Tuesday that there is any movement on foot to obtain his renomination in 1916, it developed today that Chairman McCombs of the Democratic national committee and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo have arranged for a series of conferences with the original Wilson men from various states who were active in organizing the Wilson campaign in 1912.

The first of these conferences was held here yesterday and today with the group of original Wilson men from Illinois. Those in the conference were Judge Clarence Goodwin, Irving Shuman, William Brown Jr., and Dixon C. Williams. These four, with William C. Niblack, receiver for the Lorimer banks, constituted the "original Wilson committee" in Illinois.

Rewards Are Not Lacking.

Of the four, Shuman and Brown have been rewarded with federal positions. Goodwin is a receptive candidate for a federal judgeship and Williams is an active candidate for postmaster at Chicago. Shuman is subtreasurer at Chicago and Brown is a naval officer.

It is apparent that Secretary McAdoo and Chairman McCombs have decided to test the Wilson sentiment in the various states of the country before starting their actual campaign to get votes for the president's renomination. Inasmuch as Democratic conditions in Illinois are chaotic today, they decided to start in on that state in an effort to discover just where the sore spots are and just what balm is needed to heal them.

The conferences also indicate that the president's managers are going to depend largely upon the organization they built up in 1912 to obtain the nomination for him in 1916.

Seek to Appease Sullivan.

In Illinois there are several distinct lines of cleavage. Roger C. Sullivan, defeated candidate for United States senator, feels that the administration is largely responsible for his defeat in that President Wilson declined to indorse his candidacy. Mr. Sullivan was beaten only a few thousand votes by Senator Sherman, who was a candidate for reëlection.

Mr. Sullivan also feels that even if the president did not want to indorse him publicly he might have given assistance by recognizing the candidate to some extent in the distribution of Illinois patronage. Up to date Mr. Sullivan has been unable to land a single place for his large army of followers in Chicago and downstate.

The announcement that Edward N. Hurley of Chicago is to be appointed to the trade commission, however, is significant in that it indicates that the administration is attempting to appease Sullivan now.

Reason for Appointing Hurley.

Hurley is a Sullivan man. He was one of Sullivan's delegates to the Baltimore convention. The position on the trade commission is the greatest that has been tendered to Illinois, with the exception of the place on the federal reserve board, held by Frederic A. Delano. Delano, however, was not appointed because of political influence.

Peculiarly, Mr. Sullivan's leading opponent in the Democratic primaries is also down on the administration now. He is Congressman at large Stringer, who retires from the house on March 4. Stringer was indorsed by the Bryan-Lewis-Dunne faction in Illinois during the primary, but at such a late date that it did him little good. He is inclined to hold the administration responsible for his defeat at the hands of Sullivan because of its late indorsement.

Illinoisans Not Enthusiastic.

Democratic members of congress from Illinois are not overenthusiastic about Wilson right at the present time. Those who were defeated for reëlection blame the president because he kept them in session until a few days before election day. Those who were reëlected blame him for reduced pluralities.

One member of the delegation in a recent talk with Secretary McAdoo is understood to have said that the country was tired of hearing the plea: "Stand behind the president," but wanted the president to get behind some things for which the country could stand.

Marshall Field III. and Miss Marshall Wed in New York

Only Immediate Relatives Present; Ceremony Is Simple.

PLAN TRIP SOUTH

New York, Feb. 6. [Special.]—Marshall Field III., grandson of Chicago's greatest merchant, and Miss Evelyn Marshall, daughter of Mrs. Charles H. Marshall, were married at noon today at the home of the bride, 6 East Seventy-seventh street.

The ceremony was performed by Bishop Patrick J. Hayes of St. Patrick's cathedral. Mr. Field is a Roman Catholic.

Only the immediate relatives were present. Miss Marshall had no bridesmaids and was attended only by her mother. Mr. Field's cousin, Stanley Field, was the best man. Others present were Mrs. Marshall Field, grandmother of the bridegroom; Mrs. James Lenox Banks, grandmother of the bride, and Charles H. Marshall, Miss Marshall's brother.

Flowers in Profusion.

The ceremony was performed before an improvised altar in the drawing room. There was a profusion of flowers about. Miss Marshall wore a dress of dark blue silk and chiffon. Her head was bare.

The announcement of the wedding will come as a surprise to the friends of both Miss Marshall and Mr. Field. Although they had obtained a license to wed as far back as Dec. 26, no date had been set for the wedding. It was expected, however, that it would take place before Lent.

Bride Recently Grippe Victim.

Recently Miss Marshall was taken ill with a severe attack of the grippe. This, it was thought, might interfere with her plans for the wedding. Mr. Field had been living since he came here from England at the Biltmore. A few days ago, however, he left there and went to live at the home of his fiancée.

It was said at the Marshall home that the young pair would leave probably today for Hot Springs, Va. After a stay there they will go to Florida and pass much of their time on the houseboat Everglades.

INTEREST HERE IN WEDDING.

News of the marriage yesterday noon of Marshall Field III., 21 year old heir to the Field fortune, and Miss Evelyn Marshall of New York City will be of vital interest to Chicago at large.

During the last ten days, since young Mr. Field gave his farewell bachelor dinner at the Blackstone and departed for the east, there have been various conflicting dates announced for the wedding.

The departure of Stanley Field, son of the late Joseph Field of England, who represents the Field interests in Chicago, for New York precipitated a premature announcement of the wedding day as that of Feb. 13, which happens to be the day set for the wedding of Cyrus McCormick III. and Miss Dorothy Linn. Following the denial of that day as the correct day by Miss Marshall's family, Feb. 4 was rumored as the day for the event.

A telegram received by Mrs. Henry Dibblee, who is Mr. Field's grandaunt and a sister of the late Marshall Field Sr., announcing the illness of the bride caused the statement to be widespread that the marriage was postponed.

As it happened Miss Marshall was suffering only temporarily from an attack of grippe and the wedding plans, though unannounced, went steadily on.

IOWA TAKES CROP PRIZE; ILLINOIS SECOND IN LIST.

Texas Loses as Banner State, Due to Smaller Value of Cotton—Kansas Lands in Fourth.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—Iowa has wrested from Texas the title of banner crop state, the thirteen principal crops grown there last year being valued at $351,450,000, according to the Agricultural Outlook, issued today.

Illinois' crops were worth $319,656,000, while Texas comes third with $288,335,000. Decrease in the value of cotton was the cause of the smaller value of Texas crops.

Kansas, with $287,662,000, is fourth; Nebraska, with $210,099,000, fifth, and Ohio, with $207,337,000, sixth. Other states in order of value of the thirteen principal crops are:

All other states were less than $100,000,000.

STOCKYARDS IN 9 CITIES CLOSED

Chicago Pens Get Clean Bill of Health in Drastic Order from Washington.

The Chicago stockyards were given a clean bill of health in an order issued by the director of the bureau of animal industry at Washington yesterday, which closed nine other stockyards. The following message was received by Dr. S. E. Bennett in charge of the federal bureau at the Chicago yards:

"You may permit interstate shipments from Union Stock Yards under provisions of order 232. No stock to remain in yards more than forty-eight hours after time of arrival. If not removed quarantine against interstate shipment. Stockyards at Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, Columbus, Pittsburgh, Jersey City, Baltimore, Buffalo, and Bannings closed today."

Report Local Yards Closed.

Early in the afternoon reports came from Washington the department of agriculture had decided to close the Chicago yards against the receipt of cattle, together with the other yards.

The arrival of the message from Washington at Dr. Bennett's office brought great relief to packingtown.

"We not only may continue to receive live stock for slaughter here as heretofore but the quarantine against shipments out of the Chicago yards has been raised by this order," said President A. G. Leonard of the Union Stockyards company. "We will open the north section of the yards on Monday. All of this has been completely disinfected. No cattle have been in it for the last ten days.

Will Start Cleaning Up.

"Just as soon as we get started on Monday morning with cattle in the north section we will begin at once to disinfect the south section of the yards. It will not be long now until the whole yards will be open to receive stock."

The first report from Washington that the Chicago yards had been closed along with the others excited the thousands of employés. It would have meant the indefinite closing down of all the work in the large packing plants within a few days.

GIRL SLAIN BY SUITOR AFTER REFUSAL TO ELOPE.

Helen Weiss Shot Three Times at Hotel by Electrician She Spurned —He Escapes.

Until a few months ago Vincent Charlow, an electrician, roomed at a hotel conducted by A. B. Servoss at 1137 Washington boulevard. While there he became infatuated with Miss Helen Weiss, another roomer. He proposed marriage, but was refused.

At 7:30 o'clock last night Charlow entered the hotel and went to the door of Miss Weiss' room in the rear on the first floor. He forced the door and demanded that she elope with him. A quarrel ensued. Charlow whipped out a revolver and fired five shots. One of them struck Miss Weiss in the neck, another in the right side, and a third in the shoulder. The man then flung his weapon to the floor, opened the window, and leaped out. He escaped through an alley in the rear.

Miss Maud Bishop, a close friend of Miss Weiss, who occupies the adjoining room, ran into the room. Miss Weiss was dead when she reached her side.

The police were notified and detectives were scattered throughout the neighborhood. The Greek saloons on the west side were searched in an effort to find the slayer. Persons at the hotel were unable to furnish the police with Charlow's address. Miss Bishop was taken to the station and questioned. It was said she heard the quarrel which preceded the shooting.

Miss Weiss was 29 years old.

U. S. Inspector to Guam, P. I., to Quiz Postoffice—Takes Wife for "Second Honeymoon."

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—After having enjoyed for a period of seven years the undisturbed administration of the postoffice of Guam, P. I., and his salary of $125 a year, Postmaster Duarte is about to be inspected by the postoffice department.

The inspection, which will require about half a day's work, there being no charges against Postmaster Duarte, will involve for Inspector E. P. Smith a trip of 25,000 miles and about three months' time. Accompanied by Mrs. Smith, the inspector will sail on a government transport from San Francisco to Manila and from that point succeed on a small interisland steamer which makes monthly trips from and to Guam.

Mr. Smith says it will be a "second honeymoon" for him and his wife.

LUSITANIA FLIES AMERICAN FLAG

Captain Explains He Had Neutral Mails and Passengers; Safe at Liverpool.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The Cunard line steamer Lusitania crossed the Irish sea flying the American flag. The Lusitania sailed from New York Jan. 30, arriving at Liverpool today.

An American passenger said the captain claimed the right to fly the American flag because he had neutral mails and neutral passengers aboard.

Act Can Be Condoned?

While the British foreign office will make no formal statement regarding the action of the Lusitania until the matter is presented in definite form, a prominent British official today said that inasmuch as the British government grants ships of other nations the privilege of using the Union Jack to escape capture, it naturally feels that a similar privilege would be granted to its ships in a similar emergency.

Permissible by British Act.

The British merchant shipping act passed in 1894 contains the following paragraph:

"If a person uses the British flag and assumes the British national character on board a ship owned in whole or in part by persons unqualified to own a British ship, for the purpose of making the ship appear to be British, the ship shall be subject to forfeiture under this act unless the assumption has been made for the purpose of escaping capture.

PARLEY LIKELY TO RESULT.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—Officials read with interest unofficial reports that the British ship Lusitania had entered Liverpool flying an American flag and it was considered probable that the entire subject of the use of neutral flags by belligerent merchantmen might be discussed in diplomatic channels with both Germany and Great Britain as a result of the charge made by Germany that a British order was in existence permitting such changes of flag.

BERLIN SAYS SELF-DEFENSE FORCED PLAN

RELIEF IN WASHINGTON

War News of Last 24 Hours.

German official report tells of repulse of three attacks made by French troops.

GERMANS issue statement saying blockade of British isles was act of self-defense against starvation.*

[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Feb. 6.—The admiralty tonight made public the text of the memorandum concerning the retaliatory measures to be taken by Germany against Great Britain.

The statement places the responsibility for Germany's drastic action upon her enemies. It declares that Great Britain has assumed the right to dictate to neutral shippers and has violated international law in regard to blockading in an effort to "starve Germany out." Germany's action, it asserts, is to be taken in self-defense.

The statement accuses Great Britain of having misused neutral flags to protect its shipping and says that because of this misuse, neutral ships must beware of the restricted zone as they may be damaged under the mistake that they are British ships.

Modification Made in Rules.

The statement makes some modification from the terms laid down in the first proclamation. It says that Germany "does not intend to molest or seize American vessels laden with foodstuffs for the civilian population of enemy countries."

It also declares that navigation routes to the north of the Shetland islands and the eastern part of the North sea, as well as a strip of thirty nautical miles along the Dutch coast, are not in the danger zone, but that only the waters directly around Great Britain and Ireland comprise the prohibited areas.

The first statement did not make exemption of these routes. The exemption of the sea lane to the north of the Shetlands gives American shippers passage to Scandinavian ports.

Back Is Against Wall.

Germany will regret if her naval activities bring about international complications. This is frankly admitted in official quarters tonight. But it is pointed out that Germany is fighting with its back against the wall and that it cannot sacrifice its own population to a "whim of sentiment."

These officials say the open, defiant attitude of England in refusing to permit ordinary traffic with neutrals, and the boasts of the British sea lords that Germany is to be starved out, demands that Germany essay reprisals. And, while every effort is being made, and will be made, to respect neutral shipping, it is realized that the British position must be met with a degree of firmness which will prevent the economic life of Germany being crushed.

"We must fight fire with fire," Grand Admiral von Tirpitz has said, "and that tonight is Germany's attitude."

Text of the Statement.

The statement issued by the admiralty follows:

"Since the beginning of the present war Great Britain has carried on a mercantile warfare against Germany in a way that defies all of the principles of international law. It is true the British government has announced in a number of decrees the declaration of London concerning naval warfare is binding on her naval forces, but in reality she has renounced the declaration in its most important particulars

"Although her own delegates to the London conference on naval warfare had recognized its conclusions to be valid as international law, the British government has put a number of articles in the list of contraband which are not, or at most are only indirectly, useful for military purposes, and therefore according to the London declaration, as well as according to the universally recognized rules of international law, may not be designated as contraband.

Seized on Neutral Ships.

"Inasmuch as she has declared subject to capture all articles of relative contraband intended for Germany without reference to the harbor in which they are to be unloaded or to the hostile or peaceful use to which they are to be put, she does not hesitate to violate the London declaration, as her naval forces have seized on neutral ships German property that was not contraband in violation of her own decrees.

"She has further taken from neutral ships numerous Germans liable to military service and has made of them prisoners of war.

"Finally she has declared the entire North sea to be an area of war and, if she has not made impossible the passage of neutral shipping through the sea between Scotland and Norway she has made it so difficult and so dangerous that she has to a certain extent effected a blockade of neutral coasts and neutral ports. This in violation of international law.

"These measures have the obvious purpose, through the illegal paralyzation of neutral commerce, not only to strike at the German military strength but also at the economic life of Germany, and finally, through starvation, doom the entire population of Germany to destruction.

Neutrals Really Aid Britain.

"The neutral powers have generally acquiesced in the steps taken by the British government or at least they have not succeeded in inducing the British government to restore the German individuals and property seized in violation of international law.

"In certain directions they have also aided the British measures which are irreconciliable with the freedom of the sea in that they have obviously, under the pressure of England, hindered by export and transit embargoes the transit of wares for peaceful purposes to Germany.

"The German government has in vain called the attention of neutral powers to the fact that it must face the question of whether it can longer preserve in its strict observance of the rules of the declaration of London if Great Britain is to continue its present course and the neutral powers are to continue to acquiesce in the violations of neutrality to the detriment of Germany.

Appeal to Vital Interests.

"For her violations of international law Great Britain pleads the vital interests which the British empire has at stake and the neutral powers seem to satisfy themselves with theoretical protests. Therefore, in fact they accept the vital interests of belligerents as a sufficient excuse for every method of warfare.

"Germany must now appeal to these same vital interests. To its regret it sees itself forced to military measures aimed at England in retaliation against the English procedure. Just as England has designated the area between Scotland and Norway as an area of war, so Germany now declares all the waters surrounding Great Britain and Ireland, including the entire English channel, as an area of war. We will thus proceed against the shipping of the enemy for this purpose beginning Feb. 18, 1915.

Will Destroy All Possible.

"Germany will endeavor to destroy every enemy's merchant ship that is found in this area of war without its always being possible to avert the peril that thus threatens persons and cargoes. Neutrals are therefore warned against further intrusting crews, passengers, and wares to such ships. Their attention is called to the fact that it is advisable for their ships to avoid entering this area, for even if the German naval forces have instructions to avoid violence to neutral shipping in so far as they are recognizable, in view of the misuse of neutral flags ordered by the British government and the contingencies of naval warfare their becoming victims of torpedoes directed against the enemy's ships cannot always be averted.

"At the same time it is specifically noted that shipping north of the Shetland islands in the eastern area of the North sea and in a strip at least thirty sea miles in width along the Netherlands coast is not imperiled.

"The German government gives such early notice of these measures that hostile as well as neutral ships may have time accordingly to adapt their plans for landing at ports in this area of war. We may expect that the neutral powers will show no less consideration for the vital interests of Germany than for those of England and will aid in keeping their citizens and the property of the latter from this area. This is the more to be expected as it is to the interest of the neutral powers to see this destructive war end as soon as possible."

Urged to Sink Transports.

"Sink England's transports," was the cry taken up by the German press today. Aggressive action was urged upon the admiralty in lengthy articles that approved all the steps taken by Admiral von Tirpitz and his staff.

Thousands of English troops are being moved across the channel daily in preparation for the spring campaign in Flanders and northern France. Spies brought word here today that fresh English regiments are being concentrated near Boulogne.

The exploits of the U-21 in the Irish sea have aroused the greatest confidence here in the ability of the newest German submarines. The newspapers demanded today that a submarine flotilla be sent into action in the English channel at once to stop the troop movement that has been under way since the middle of January.

Britain Waits an Attack.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Another combined overseas, underseas, and aerial raid by Germany is imminent. Advices from the German naval and aerial bases tonight report great activity on the part of the Germans. Their great fleet of warships, safe under the protection of their fortified land bases, are reported to have steam up and all men aboard. The big aerial hangars are humming like beehives with activity. There is no doubt felt here that all of the larger submarines are already in such positions as to be useful when the expected emergency arises.

Officials of both the admiralty and the war office admitted this tonight. They expressed their delight and confidence. Every precaution has been taken to cope with any emergency. In their hangars along the coast the British aviators, their armored air craft in readiness, wait the signal to repel the Zeppelins.

Along the coast of the North sea the great armored ships of Admiral Sir John Jellicoe's fleet wait the signal of the mosquito fleet of fast armored cruisers which spin their spider webs in front of the German naval bases ready to steam at top speed to the coast with the word that the enemy is out.

Close Guard Over Army.

England is aroused to a realization of the grave danger that impends. Across the channel, erecting solid walls of steel between which the troop ships are moving, is a line of cruisers, battleships, and destroyers protecting the new army of Earl Kitchener, which is being pushed to the front for active service. It is realized that the chief object of the German submarines is this fleet of transports and no precaution has been overlooked to protect it.

Germany will find England prepared to protect its troopships and its foreign commerce from either visible or invisible blockade. This was the bold declaration made by the chiefs of the admiralty tonight and voiced by the first sea lord, Sir John Fisher.

The wireless dispatches from Berlin declaring the intention of Germany to protect herself from starvation by destroying all British commerce has caused no alarm. Shipping circles are confident that the proposed blockade cannot be effectively carried out. That some vessels will be lost is expected, but because of the precautions taken officials believe the number will be negligible.

NEW NOTE PLEASES U. S.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—State department officials tonight were gratified to learn of the modifications made by Germany in the memorandum concerning the action the kaiser's navy would take against shipping of Great Britain and France.

The optimism was further increased by the statement given out by the German embassy which declared that American ships laden with foodstuffs for the civilian population of Germany's enemies would not be molested, and expressed the hope that Great Britain would not, by seizing the American steamer Wilhelmina, carrying food supplies to Germany, make necessary the adoption of a different policy.

It now is probable that if German naval commanders will take care to verify the real character of vessels flying neutral flags, and assure the American government that every effort possible will be made to save passengers and crews of vessels which may be carrying contraband, little ground, if any, for protest against Germany's action, in advance of any specific violation, will remain.

Statement Made by Embassy.

The statement issued by the German embassy said:

"The German ambassador has not received instructions regarding the decision of the German admiralty, but according to the text of the decision the following seems clear:

"There is nothing new in the communication made on Feb. 4 by the German admiralty with respect to the attitude of the German imperial navy toward ships of the enemy or toward neutral commerce.

"It is absurd to describe this as the proclamation of a paper blockade of the British isles. The communication is simply a statement of what has been since the beginning of the war the attitude of the navies of all of the belligerent powers toward ships of the enemy.

British Closed North Sea.

"A few months ago the English admiralty proclaimed the closing of the North sea, the waters of which are essentially neutral. Germany does not profess to close even the English channel to neutral commerce and she does not intend to molest or seize American vessels laden with foodstuffs for the civilian population of enemy countries; it is to be hoped that England will not make necessary a reconsideration of this attitude by seizing American ships like the Wilhelmina.

"Germany does, however, announce to the world that it intends to continue to destroy ships belonging to the enemy, and it adds the notification to neutral powers that on account of the fact that British ships are employing neutral flags, according to secret instructions now known to have been issued by the British government, bona fide neutral vessels may actually be endangered.

Reply to British Prize.

"Although, according to well understood and universally accepted usages of warfare, naval vessels are perfectly justified in destroying merchantmen of the enemy, the German government now sees fit to issue simply a general reminder to that effect, stating the actual radius of operations of the German submarines.

"The warning may also be taken as in the nature of an answer to the offer of a prize of £500, made in England, for the first British merchant ship that should succeed in ramming and sinking a German submarine, an offer calculated to revive the long abandoned practice of privateering."

No Information for Dutch.

The minister from the Netherlands, acting on the first published reports concerning the closing of navigation along the Dutch coast, inquired of Acting Secretary Lansing regarding what the attitude of the United States might be, but learned that no decision had been reached in view of the incompleteness of the information available here.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, asked Mr. Lansing regarding the difference between the official text and published reports, and, inasmuch as the state department is caring for the diplomatic interests of Germany and Great Britain, the proclamation probably will be formally transmitted through its channels.

In the informal discussion of the possibilities of injury to neutral shipping, irrespective of future action by the United States, state department officials recalled tht the record of the American government in sinking ships which endeavored to run the blockade during the civil war contained some cases in which innocent lives were lost.

As the German proclamation does not prescribe a blockade, there is no warrant for sinking any neutral merchant ship, in the view of many officials here, without first determining the character and destination of the vessel and taking off passengers an dcrew.

COMMENT BY BERLIN PRESS.

BERLIN, Feb. 6.—The Berlin newspapers today point out that the blockade measures which the German government has announced it intends to put into effect not only will serve as Germany's own defense but also will "liberate the neutral powers from the tyranny of Great Britain, which is threatening international law with sovereign contempt."

"The German declaration does not encroach on the international liberty of the high seas," says the Tages Zeitung, "but is confined to enemy coast waters, while Great Britain some time ago declared the whole of the North sea in the war zone, thereby recklessly injuring neutral shipping. The declaration of the British coast waters as a war zone is not a blockade. Therefore it is warfare not bound by the rules of international law on blockades. Germany has systematically prepared and organized means for a submarine trade war and has completed the encircling of Great Britain."

Says Neutrals Are Injured.

ROME, Feb. 6.—Commenting on German measures against neutral ships, the Tribuna declares Germany does not take into account the rights or even the dignity of neutrals, while Great Britain gave satisfaction to protests made by the United States and Italy granting the latter the right to maintain the distinction between absolute and conditional contraband. Continuing, the paper says:

"Germany can be assured that some neutral powers will refuse to accept its ruling under which the established custom of the examination at sea of neutral vessels is abandoned and peaceful neutral ships are put in the same category as hostile vessels. This will evoke protest from some neutrals. If Germany finds that it has been damaged by certain British measures it should answer with reprisals damaging to Great Britain, but not striking at neutral powers in the movements of their ships or the lives of their subjects."

Swedish Press Is Angry.

STOCKHOLM, via London, Feb. 6.—Indignation is expressed by the Swedish press because of Germany's proclamation relative to a blockade of the British isles. The belief is expressed that it will result in the government making a protest to Berlin.

The Dagens Nyheter, which is in close touch with the foreign office, declares England's regulation in regard to neutral shipping in the North sea caused annoyance, but that it guaranteed traffic would be safe on certain routes. The paper says that while Swedish vessels suffered severely from German mine laying the latest order "beats the record by declaring the most extensively used waters a closed sea and threatening neutral ships with torpedoes."

FIX 100 "BELGIAN DEPOTS."

Relief Commission Arranges for Inland Assembling Points in U. S. for Contributions.

New York, Feb. 6.—Arrangements for 100 inland assembling depots throughout the United States, where donations for the noncombatants in Belgium may be brought together and reshipped in carload lots to the most desirable seaports, have been perfected by the commission for relief in Belgium, the commission announced tonight.

Through the establishment of these depots each state is given facilities for assembling, free of cost, small lots of food or clothing and consolidating them into shipments to one of fourteen points whence chartered vessels may transport them to Belgium.

The commission has sent shipping instructions to all the states making donations.

RUSSIA TAKES OVER TRADE.

Declaration of Government Monopoly on Tea, Tobacco, Oil, and Matches.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6.—The ways and means committee of the duma today unanimously recommended that the government declare a monopoly on tea, tobacco, oil, matches, and insurance of all kinds. The recommendation virtually assures the passage of the bill by the duma, it is stated. In Odessa and in Nikolaiev, on the river Bug, the government has sequestered all the property of German stock companies, including factories, car lines, hotels, and tenements.

TURKEY FACING A FAMINE.

Dispatches from Odessa Assert That Ottoman Empire Also Is Lacking in Cash.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6.—The Rech has published a dispatch from its special correspondent at Odessa, who declares that according to news reaching that city from Turkey, a famine of corn is imminent in the Turkish empire; and, furthermore, the government is urgently in need of funds.

GERMANS FEAR STAB IN BACK FROM BELGIANS

BRUSSELS, Feb. 6.—"The Belgians," said Gen. von Bissing, the new German governor general of Belgium, in an interview today with a representative of the Associated Press, "are politically undisciplined children. They believe their liberation from German rule may come at any moment, and they are strengthened in this belief by the French newspapers, as well as by some neutral newspapers which continually are smuggled in.

"When as frequently happens a favorable wind brings the sound of cannon to the city, the Belgians believe the longed for day has come. On several occasions the very date for the return of King Albert has been set and no number of disappointments seem to crush the hopes of the people."

Just But Severe.

Gen. von Bissing is 71 years of age. He is somewhat above the middle height, spare and wiry, and with features and demeanor of one who is just but severe. He strengthened this impression by his answer to the question whether the Belgians had attempted to throw obstacles in his way.

"Only in petty ways," he replied, "by pin-pricks here and there. Undoubtedly they would like to, but they know if they did I should immediately adopt drastic measures."

"What has been the attitude of the Belgian government officials toward the German government?" the governor general was asked.

"The municipal officials," the general replied, "generally coöperated with us from the beginning. The higher officials took a divided standpoint, while some absolutely refused to have anything to do with us. Officials of the department of justice, on the other hand, realizing the importance of a proper functioning of the judicial branch of the government, worked loyally with the military government from the first.

Belgians Still Patriotic.

"We have had much trouble with the postal and railway officials. The former are being gradually won over to coöperate with us, but the latter, feeling that the railways are an important adjunct of warfare—a conception which is quite true and justifiable—generally have refused to do anything to help us. they feel it would be unpatriotic and disloyal to assist us, even indirectly, in carrying war against their own land.

"The Belgian civil courts still exist, and they try ordinary cases of breaches of the law of the land. All crimes against soldiers or the military government are tried by so-called field courts, which are military courts presided over by German judges."

"It has been asserted," the correspondent said, "that the Belgians were misled and betrayed by their own government and even that they have, without their knowledge, come under the complete control of the British and French financial world. Does your excellency believe this to be true?"

Gen. von Bissing's answer to this was the paragraph quoted in the foregoing to the effect that "the Belgians are politically undisciplined children."

What inference was to be drawn from his answer the general did not indicate.

Gen. von Bissing added that conditions in Belgium on the whole were "as good as could be expected in the circumstances. We are bettering them as rapidly as possible. In some directions we have not yet accomplished what we hoped, but in others we have succeeded better than we expected."

Invasion of Belgium Necessary.

Gen. von Bissing at first made only emphatic gestures when asked whether in view of all that had happened it was not a political and military error to have invaded Belgium.

"Not to have marched into Belgium would have been a grave mistake," he replied. "If we had not done so France and England would. Events long before the war made it apparent that some sort of an alliance existed between Belgium and France and Great Britain.

"The last named two would perhaps have found some pretext to make it appear that they were coming as allies and that they were not violating Belgium's neutrality, but they would have come. Germany then would have found herself in a position of great danger."

Speaking of American relief in Belgium, in reply to a query whether such help really were needed, Gen. von Bissing said:

"It was and still is necessary in the highest degree."

"There have been suggestions," said the correspondent, "that the German army has been using some foodstuffs sent to Belgium by Americans. What has your excellency to say to that?"

"Such assertions must be denied absolutely. We are not even using any Belgian products at the present time, but are drawing the entire food supply of our soldiers from Germany. It was only during the first days of the occupation that we lived off the country in any degree. As for the American supplies, it is highly important that they keep coming regularly. We are working harmoniously with the American commission, and the report that the German government ever placed obstacles in the way of the American relief workers is false."

Wife of British Premier's Son Given Military Commission.

Mrs. Raymond Asquith, wife of the British prime minister's eldest son, Raymond, who has just been granted a commission in the Queen's Westminster Rifles, is tall, stately, and typically "English." Mrs. Asquith was formerly Miss Cecily Horner, a direct descendant of "Little Jack Horner," the nursery hero, who, of course, was a historical character. Of late she has helped energetically with the organization of Queen Mary's Work for Women Fund. All four of the sons of the prime minister, who are of military age, have now taken up arms in defense of their country.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRL HONORED FOR BRAVERY IN BATTLE.

Dressed as Man, She Joins Volunteers and Is Wounded Twice While in Service.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6.—Natalie Tychnini, a high school girl of Kieff, has received the decoration of the Order of St. George for distinguished service at the front. Under a heavy fire at Opatow in the campaign against the Austrians, the girl carried ammunition to the trenches and attended wounded men. She was wounded twice.

The girl arrived at the front with a detachment of volunteers, dressed as a man. After being wounded she was left lying on the field when the Russians retired, and was attended by Austrian Red Cross workers.

When the Russians retook Opatow she was discovered in a hospital there and sent back to Kieff.

TURK SUEZ LOSSES 3,000.

Casualties 2,400, with 600 Captured—Machine Guns, Camels and Ammunition Taken by British.

CAIRO, Feb. 5.—Turkey has sustained losses of at least 3,000 men in the recent fighting along the Suez canal, it was stated here today. The British captured 600 and the Turkish casualties are estimated at 2,400. Three machine guns, ninety camels, and a large quantity of ammunition and stores were taken by the British.

GERMANS CHECK THREE ATTACKS MADE BY ALLIES

Official Statement Issued in Berlin Says Troops of the Kaiser Repulsed Enemy.

BERLIN, Feb. 6.—The official statement issued today tells of the repulse of three attacks made by the French against the positions held by the Germans.

"Two new French attacks against positions taken by the Germans north of Massiges remained unsuccessful," it says. "A French attack in the Argonne also failed.

Denies Claims of Allies.

"Especially from the British, but also from the French side, the allegation is repeated continuously that the Germans, to commemorate the emperor's birthday, made attacks on a large scale, which were attended throughout with heavy reverses for the Germans. All German official reports of events on the days in question prove that this allegation was invented, with perfidous intent. Of course, such fighting manners cannot touch the emperor's person, but the German army headquarters could not fail to expose their baseness to shame."

French Official Statement.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The French war office this afternoon gave out a report on the progress of the fighting, which reads as follows:

"Efficient fire was maintained by our artillery in Belgium and in the valley of the Aisne, and slight progress was made by our troops in Champagne to the north of Messiges.

"In the Argonne and in the Woevre district French artillery yesterday dispersed convoys of the enemy and set fire to a convoy train of twenty-five wagons.

KAISER OFF TO RUSS FRONT AFTER NAVAL INSPECTION.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—An official announcement received here today from Berlin says that Emperor William, after completing his inspection of the German naval base at Wilhelmshaven, left for the eastern war zone by way of Czenstochowa, Russian Poland.

A telegram sent by the emperor to the troops which participated in the attack on the heights at Craonne is given in a Berlin dispatch as follows:

"Warm congratulations for your fine success, which is to be ascribed to the wisdom of the commanding officers, as well as to the great bravery of the troops, whose month-long activity in trench warfare could in no wise diminish their attacking power."

BRITISH TRADE HARD HIT.

War Causes Decrease of Imports for Month of $3,000,000 and Loss in Exports of $97,000,000.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The effect of the war on British trade again is apparent in the figures given out by the board of trade for the month of January.

These show that in this month imports were decreased by $3,020,000 and that exports were decreased by $97,790,000.

Food imports increased $36,250,000, but this was offset by the decline in manufactured articles and raw material, in which cotton showed a decrease of $17,500,000.

In exports the decrease of coal amounted to $8,750,000, and in manufactured articles the decrease was $85,000,000. Of this last mentioned amount $30,000,000 is found in cotton textiles.

BELGIANS WORK; 40 CENTS A WEEK

Women Now Running 1,000 Sewing Machines; More Material Needed.

LETTER FROM HEDGER.

Typhoid fever among the already starving and freezing Belgian women and children is adding to the work of the American commission for relief which is sending over food and medicines. Dr. Caroline Hedger of Chicago, who was sent by the Chicago Woman's club to aid in caring for the needy, has just written the committee in Chicago that she has had a call for 3,000 more vaccine treatments.

Dr. Hedger is now in Rotterdam assisting Charles Jenkinson, formerly of the American Red Cross, but now representing the commission for relief in Belgium at Rotterdam. The destitution among the refugees is shown by the work Mr. Jenkinson is doing—forming sewing schools among the Belgian women, whom he pays 40 cents a week for their work. He furnishes the material, and of the finished product one-third goes to the refugees in that town, the rest to other places.

1,000 Machines Running.

So many women are destitute and glad to get work, even at this price, that he will have 1,000 machines running in a few days more, and is asking for all the material possible to keep them busy.

"We need dress goods of all kinds, cotton, apron materials, and yarn—always we need yarn," writes Dr. Hedger. "I have long been wanting to write you, but was in Belgium, where no man can mail or carry out a letter. Mr. Jenkinson wants me to work on the typhoid situation at Flushing, and Brand Whitlock may need me later in Brussels."

New Funds Begin Coming In.

Almost before the committee of Chicago business men had begun their work of raising the additional $100,000 urgently needed in Belgium, and before any appeal had been made, funds began coming in. Yesterday they reached a total of more than $4,500, including $240 which is pledged in monthly installments. The subscribers are:

RUSSIAN FLANK MOVE MENACES GERMAN FORCES

Czar's Troops Storm Position Across Bzura River; Repel Main Assaults.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 6.—The latest reports from the front in Russian Poland bring some brief details of the important Russian victory on the Bzura river.

While the Germans, with three-quarters of their forces along the Bzura, continued to hammer at the Russian line, the Russians seized this opportunity to throw their forces across the Bzura at Kamion, near the junction of the Bzura with the Vistula, and captured the German fortified position. At the same time they drove the Germans across the Bzura at Pakhosa, which is close to Sochaczew.

At Kamion the Russians captured a quantity of steel bullet-proof shields which they immediately utilized. They also took a number of quick firing guns and in this district and also on the upper Rawka river they captured a good many German outposts.

Furious Battle at Bolimow.

Near Bolimow the Germans were unrelenting in their attack, and the Russians countered with equal ferocity, repulsing all the German frontal attacks. The German forces repeatedly made use of armored motor cars on which machine guns and quick firers had been set up. A hail of sharpnel from the Russian lines, however, forced them to retire.

Between Skierniewice and Bohinoff, the Germans threw a bridge made of barrels across the Rawka. Russians concealed in entrenchments on the opposite bank allowed three German infantry companies to cross. Then they charged from their earthworks and decimated the German ranks.

Russian military authorities are of the opinion that the desperation evinced by the Germans in Russian Poland is a shield for the removal of forces toward the western front, and they compare these attacks with those delivered by Gen. von Hindenburg in the early weeks of the war, when six corps of German soldiers were rushed toward France.

Fighting Lags Farther South.

From Skierniewice southward to Radom and Kieloe there have been scattering artillery engagements. Further south of this line Austro-German forces have attempted to take the offensive at Shernike, which is sixteen miles to the southwest of Kieloe, and also at a point near Rembov, which is twelve miles further south on the River Nida.

At Shernike the Russians, anticipating an attack, destroyed the bridge over the Nida and shelled the enemy from the opposite bank, forcing him to retire. At Rembov also the Russians report a victory.

At Shabno, which is just to the north of Tarnow, in Galicia, the Austrians made an attempt on the Russian fortifications on the left bank of the Dunajec river. They endeavored to approach by means of an elaborate system of trenches, but they were driven out from these shelters at the point of the bayonet.

In the Carpathians, from Bukla pass to Uzsok and thence fifty miles directly south of Przemysl, the Russians report a continued advance in which they are pushing the enemy to the south. Three thousand prisoners are reported to have been taken in the actions of the last three days.

Allies Watch Poland Struggle.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The Russian counterblow on the massed assaults of Gen von Hindenburg's men is, to British observers, the most interesting development of the struggle in the east. It is taken in some quarters to indicate that they have ceased playing the rôle of merely holding their lines to the west of Warsaw and determined on an effort to expel the invaders.

The Russians, having pressed forward across the Bzura river, are seriously threatening the Germans with an outflanking movement. The issue is still undecided. but the Russians claim that the initiative has passed to them, although further furious German attacks are expected.

The more complex and, strategically, the more important struggle in the Carpathians is dragging on without any decisive turn.

German Official Statement.

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—German army headquarters today issued the following statement:

"Russians yesterday attacked on the East Prussian frontier and south of the Vistula against the German front from Humin to the Bzura river. All attacks were repulsed. The Germans made 1,000 prisoners and took six machine guns."

AUSTRIA CLAIMS SUCCESSES.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—Capture of three villages in Bukowina by the Austro-Hungarian troops in a renewed offensive was announced today in a wireless message from Vienna to the embassy here.

The dispatch says in Bukowina after a retreat of the Russian forces toward Kimpolung and Moldawa there was quiet for a short time, followed by new attacks by the Austro-Hungarian troops, which, in spite of most difficult conditions and bad weather, occupied Iswor and Moldawa and Breaza.

BATHING SUITS TO REFUGEES

Ethel Roosevelt Derby Tells of Varied Contributions for Belgians —Appeals to United States.

New York, Feb. 6.—Even women's bathing suits are to be used to clothe the Belgian refugees flocking into France, according to Mrs. Richard Derby, formerly Ethel Roosevelt, who has just returned from Paris, where her doctor husband is helping care for the wounded.

"Several boxes full of bathing suits and old opera cloaks came in to relief headquarters one day," she said today. "We turned the skirts of the bathing suits into petticoats for the children and the upper parts we converted into underclothing."

Mrs. Derby made an appeal for further contributions from America.

Spiritualists in Meeting.

Representatives of thirty-six auxiliary societies of the Illinois Spiritualists' association attended a meeting in the Auditorium hotel yesterday and listened to addresses and demonstrations. Spirit messages were delivered by Frank Joseph, Mrs. Hattie Wegner, Mrs. Marguerite Henry, Mrs. Clara Schwahn, and Mrs. Amanda Kauffman-Flower.

BERLIN TO CURB SALE OF FOOD

Tickets to Be Issued Weekly Calling for 4 Pounds of Bread or Flour.

BERLIN, Feb. 6.—Bread tickets on which a weekly quota of bread or flour can be drawn will soon be a feature of life in Berlin. The municipalities of greater Berlin today voted unanimously to adopt this measure. The tickets, which will be issued weekly, will be provided with coupons permitting the holder to purchase bread or flour in amounts up to 4.2 pounds.

Greater Berlin is the only city in Germany where a limitation on consumption has thus far been adopted.

Famine Prices in Hamburg.

HAMBURG, Feb. 6.—The price of maize has risen here to $2.50 a bushel, wholesale. Germany's supply heretofore came chiefly from the United States, Argentina, and Russia, all of which are now inaccessible. Moreover, the government has not fixed a maximum price as in the case of wheat and rye.

The price of maize, thus left to natural forces, has risen to almost double the price of wheat before the government expropriated the latter. Oats are now $1.04 a bushel, wholesale.

How to Classify Crime.

It is not possible to classify crime and criminals except through a study of individual cases, Dr. William Healy of the Juvenile court psychopathic institute told the members of the Associated Jewish Charities at their weekly luncheon yesterday.

WISCONSIN MAY REMOVE BAN PUT ON SUNDAY AMUSEMENTS

Bill Offered in Legislature to Permit Theaters, Parks, and Baseball Grounds to Keep Open.

Madison, Wis, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The ban will be removed from the Sunday theater, the amusement park, and the Sunday baseball game if a bill introduced in the legislature today by Assemblyman John B. Heim of Madison is enacted into law.

During the last year there has been a wave of strict law enforcement in this state. In some cities only the saloons have been closed on Sundays; in others the closing of the saloons resulted in the closing of the theaters and the ball games. The bill of Assemblyman Heim is to relieve theaters and games and amusement parks from the old law, unless it contravenes a city ordinance.

In the senate a bill was received codifying the election laws of the state. The senate adjourned until Monday morning and the assembly until Tuesday afternoon. Both houses received a report from State Superintendent of Public Instruction C. P. Cary advising the establishment of an agricultural school on the Oneida Indian reservation.

SLAYS ANGRY STEPFATHER.

Fred Phillips Holds Fainting Mother in One Arm and Repels Hatchet Attack with Gun.

Clinton, Ind., Feb. 6.—Holding his mother in his arms, Fred Phillips, 23, shot and killed his stepfather, Cobb Johnson, 43, here today. Mrs. Johnson fainted when she saw her husband start towards her son with a hatchet. Holding his mother with one arm, Phillips drew a revolver and shot.

HE SAVED PARIS; NOW DYING IN A GERMAN PRISON

Gen. Leman, Hero of Liege, in Appeal to Be Exchanged to Perish at Home.

BY WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS.

[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WITH THE BELGIAN GRAND ARMY HEADQUARTERS, in Belgium, via Paris, Feb. 6.—The man who saved Paris is dying in a German prison camp. The one hope of his last days is that he may be exchanged so that, when death does comes, he can meet it on the soil of his home land, even though that soil is only a strip.

He is Gen. Leman, governor of Liege, captured on Aug. 14 last, when Fort Loncin, in which he had taken refuge, was demolished by the German "Black Marias."

Although the German military authorities admit it was his heroic defense of the Liege fortifications that disarranged their plans and permitted the massing of troops south of the Marne to save Paris, they have shown him none of the courtesies ordinarily extended a valiant wounded foe.

No Trace of Surrender.

A high staff officer of the Belgian army, one of King Albert's personal aids, today showed me a letter from Gen. Leman, which was smuggled through the German lines. There was no trace of surrender in it. The general simply recited his condition and expressed the hope that he may finally be exchanged under the proposals which are now being circulated by the vatican.

"I am wounded unto death," he wrote. "The damage done to my foot when we lost the last of our defenses at Liege cannot be repaired. I have had two operations performed. The last removed most of the foot. Yet a blood poisoned condition continues. I am also suffering from diabetes and other complications, which make it impossible for me to leave my bed.

"Don't Forget Leman."

"Of course I am not despairing. The fact that I am certain to die does not depress me. I am a soldier of Belgium. I am satisfied that I have done my duty. Yet I hear that there is a chance that the plan suggested by his holiness for the exchange of the worthless among the prisoners—those so maimed that they will never again be worth anything for 'cannon fodder'—will be carried to fruition. If so I hope that you will not forget poor old Leman when the exchange begins.

"I cannot sleep at night when I think of the possibility of dying on the enemy's territory without a single friend to soothe my last hours or to close my eyes for the last time. I would like to have friendly faces about me when I pass on, even though I were compelled to die in a field hospital or in one of our own trenches.

"But do not forget poor old Leman."

Appeal Steels Men's Hearts.

The appeal of the veteran general, one of the idols of the remnants of the Belgian fighting force, has been quietly circulated throughout the army. The effect is apparent in the determination with which the Belgian forces, now back on the very front of the firing line, carry out their assaults against the Germans.

"Remember Leman and Liege," is a slogan that has been used with telling effect in the fighting in the north during the last few days.

It is realized that Leman will probably die where he is; that the suggestions of exchange will never fully be carried out, and his comrades in arms intend to revenge him as much as possible.

Chicago Women Will Send Kits to Men Suffering in Trenches.

A La Fayette fund committee, similar in scope and purpose to that one which has been active in New York, has just been organized in Chicago by a group of well known women and men. The Chicago committee has established offices at 122 South Michigan avenue, room 1201. Mrs. Caroline M. Ely is treasurer.

The purpose if to furnish La Fayette kits for the immediate relief of the unavoidable suffering of the men in the trenches. The committee announces that "$2 provides, and by arrangement with the French authorities, dispatches to the trenches a kit of American made goods."

Here's What Kit Contains.

Each kit contains the following articles: Fleece lined shirt, fleece lined drawers, two pairs woolen socks, one pair woolen gloves, abdominal belt with six safety pins, a dark heavy muffler, a colored handkerchief, and a small cake of soap. The name of the contributor will be inclosed in each kit.

The Chicago committee includes the following names:

Mrs. J. Ogden Armour,	Mrs. Bryan Lathrop,
Mrs. John C. Black,	Mrs. Frank Lowden,

Goods Reach Munich.

Acknowledgment of supplies received at the American Red Cross hospital in Munich comes from Dr. Sofie Nordhoff-Jung. The supplies consisted of fifty bales, or 5,000 pounds, of absorbent cotton, two boxes containing a total of 4,000 yards of gauze, four boxes containing 1,000 pounds of roller bandages, and ten large cases containing medicines, blankets, shirts, pajamas, etc.

She was particularly glad, she declares, that the rolls of bandages were of cambric and not gauze, as they can be washed and sterilized and used over and over again. Soft and warm Canton flannel, which is unknown in Munich, "caused a great deal of admiration and appreciation on the part of the soldiers."

"When the carload drove up to our hospital we were overcome with the generosity of the shipment," says Dr. Nordhoff-Jung.

"In unpacking the boxes of supplies, the comfort bags, bed socks, and nightingales excited a particular interest in some of our nurses, who had never seen them before.

Queen Divides Goods.

"The queen told me of the great lack of cotton and bandaging material, which is felt especially in the military hospitals of the two fronts. Therefore, she decided to divide it evenly and have it sent where it is most needed. In the local hospitals they are using sterilized gauze bags filled with sawdust, moss or lint instead of absorbent cotton.

"Countess Bernstorff (the wife of the German ambassador to the United States, who is one of the patronesses of the American Red Cross hospital in Munich) comes frequently to see the hospital. Everything is gratefully received, but no amount of money could give us the pleasure which this generous shipment has given."

JAP CRUISER "IN NO PERIL"; NEUTRALITY POINTS ARISE.

Mexico May Intern Asama Crew—U. S. Cannot Aid in Salvaging Vessel.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—The Japanese cruiser Asama, aground in Turtle bay, near Port San Bartolome, lower California, "is in no danger," according to a report to the navy department today from Rear Admiral Howard, commanding the Pacific fleet in Mexican waters.

An interesting question in admiralty procedure has arisen over the wreck. Under a strict interpretation of the neutrality laws Mexico, it is pointed out, has a right to intern the officers and men of the Asama who landed on Mexican soil until the expiration of the European war.

At the same time United States ships or ships of other neutral nations may assist in the saving of life from the wrecked Japanese cruiser, it is said, but they can render no assistance towards salvaging the ship or gear without violating the neutrality laws.

REPORTS ON WAR RELIEF.

Executive Committee of Prince of Wales Fund Shows $65,000 Subscribed in Chicago.

More than $65,000 has been collected and sent to the Prince of Wales war fund for the relief of British soldiers' and sailors' families by British-American societies of Chicago, according to a report of the executive committee of the western British-American committee of the Prince of Wales fund at a meeting in the Auditorium building yesterday. Of this amount the following sums were contributed:

Western British American committee..	$27,000
Order of Sons of St. George..........	25,000
Order of Scottish Clans...............	10,000
Various British ladies' auxiliaries.....	3,000

The report, which is signed by John Crerar, chairman of the executive committee, states that about $20,000,000 already has been subscribed to the fund, of which one-third has been expended.

SEES IN "TRIBUNE" PICTURE BROTHER IN GERMAN ARMY.

Oak Park Girl Had Not Heard of Him Since He Enlisted in Seventieth Regiment as Gunner.

Through a picture showing a group of German soldiers in the forest of Argonne, printed in THE TRIBUNE on Monday, Miss Freda Bredtschneider of 131 Wesley avenue, Oak Park, learned her brother, Fred, was alive.

Miss Bredtschneider received a letter from her brother at the beginning of the war. He was a machinist and had enlisted in the army. He was assigned to the Seventieth regiment as gunner. That was the last she heard of him.

Monday morning she picked up THE TRIBUNE. Her brother was shown with several other soldiers clearing a path through the forest for the passage of the heavy siege guns. A heavy growth of beard almost disguised him.

Denison Alumni to Dine.

The annual banquet of the Chicago alumni of Denison university of Granville, O., will be held at the Hotel La Salle next Friday evening. Dr. Daniel B. Purinton, president emeritus of the University of West Virginia, who was president of Denison from 1890 to 1900, will address the gathering, as will Prof. Francis W. Shepardson of the University of Chicago, Denison, '82.

EMBARGO EDICT BY KAISER IS BIG EVENT OF WEEK

Mason Doubts if Extensive Damage to British Shipping Is Probable.

BY J. W. T. MASON.

[Written for the United Press.]

New York, Feb. 6.—Germany's declaration of her intention to sink British merchantmen after Feb. 18 without necessary regard for the lives of civilian passengers and crews is the most significant war news of the week. That extensive damage can be inflicted on British shipping by a submarine blockade of the British isles is improbable.

Even supersubmarines such as Germany probably possesses, capable of a 7,000 mile radius of action, are easily demolished if they appear too much in the open. Their maximum carrying capacity is only twelve torpedoes, and after firing them, return must be made to a home base for new supplies.

New Serb Invasion Near.

On authority of M. Pachitch, premier of Serbia, it became known during the week that 400,000 Austrians and Germans are massing for a third invasion of the little Slav kingdom. The base for the new offensive is understood to be near the northeast corner of Serbia. The selection of this point is a strategic move of much importance. It commands the principal railway near the Roumanian border leading to Bucharest and serves as a pivot on which the Austro-Germans can turn to deliver a flank and rear attack against the Roumanians.

Fighting in northern Hungary, along the Carpathian mountains, assumed new importance during the week because of the arrival of heavy German reinforcements to support the Austrians. This marks the first appearance of the Germans as defenders of Hungarian territory and is undoubtedly the direct result of Magyar discontent with the previous subordination of their national interests to the needs of Germany's Poland campaign.

Russ Lose in Carpathians.

The Russians have lost ground during the week in the eastern Carpathians, and they also have been compelled to give some ground before Warsaw. The new German offensive toward the Polish capital by Gen. Mackensen's army probably will be continued. The kaiser is now on his way to Marshal von Hindenburg's headquarters, and an effort to duplicate in the east the recent Soissons exploit may be expected.

The Russians have made no progress during the week with their movement toward Koenigsberg.

No important changes in the western war area have occurred during the week. Both sides seem to be waiting for the arrival of the new British army, which is to give the signal for a renewal of the battle of Flanders. In Alsace the French have suddenly halted their offensive without giving any reason.

WOMAN TYRANT; THAT'S WHY GIRLS SHUN HOUSE JOB

So Says Dora Wells, Who Wants Domestics Given Regular Hours.

There's no longer any mystery about why girls shun work as domestics. The girls are not to be criticized or condemned—it's the mistresses who are to blame, for they are "time tyrants."

So says Miss Dora Wells, principal of the Lucy Fowler Technical High school. She spoke yesterday before the vocational conference at the La Salle hotel.

"I am looking forward to the day when the household duties will be so standardized the girl who works in the kitchen will no longer suffer a loss of dignity any more than a nurse or maid does now," she said.

"Women don't like domestic service because their mistresses control their time too absolutely. Servants should sell their labor and not their time. They should have a certain hour at which to go to work and another at which to close, like most employés.

Leisure for Servants.

"If the work of the home be properly organized there will be leisure both for mistress and servant."

Discussing the opportunities for girls and women, Miss Wells said:

"Any woman who can cook, if she has any kind of a business head, can make a fortune. I would like to see the service of women and of mothers given to the state recognized as high a servic as that of the father, brother, or son who shoulders the rifle for his country."

Farming Needs Dignity.

Edward J. Tobin, county superintendent, discussed the need of agricultural training in the public schools.

He said in part:

"Nothing needs dignifying more than the scientific tilling of the soil. Nothing dignifies a subject like giving it a place in the school course.

"All rural pupils over 10 years of age should be required to cultivate a plot of land as part of their regular school course. Our system of rural education needs to be revolutionized. There seems to be a universal demand for a change that will connect the training more closely with life and the work of the people; a change that will bring the school to the home and tie together the book learning of the one and the doing of useful things of the other."

Opposes Dual System.

Arguing the need for separaton of the vocational schools system from the regular schools, George Landis Wilson, vice chairman of the committee on education of the Chicago Association of Commerce, gave his reasons in part as follows:

"The necessity for separation of vocational education is founded on many reasons, most of which are purely psychological, growing out of the history, conditions, and precedents of education.

"In regular school circles vocational education is regarded as a heresy. There is a temptation to provide first for those teachers already in the system who deserve advancement.

"The present problems of the regular schools tax the financial resources, physical capacity, and ingenuity of those responsible for them to the limit. Why add more problems?

"The public schools for years have been a practical monopoly. The absence of competition develops inertia. Any exterior stimulus will be a good thing."

Wants Ordinary Board.

Miss Agnes Nestor of the United States vocational commission advocated an advisory board of individuals engaged in the occupations in which the schools give vocational training. She asserted the point of view of these practical employés and employers in close touch with developments in their fields was essential to the maintenance of vital life in the vocational work.

What the business and industrial world expects of the product of the public schools was outlined by Lewis Atherton, head of the educational department of Swift & Co.

"The schools ought to keep the boy until he is 16 years of age," he said. "The complexity of technical knowledge demanded by the various industries and in commercial life makes it necessary for the corporations to establish their own schools. The school cannot be expected to give its pupils this specialized information."

Slaps "Hire and Fire" System.

"The 'hire and fire' system of employment which is so common in our industry today entails enormous economic losses," declared Raymond Booth of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

"The cost of advertising, interviewing of applicants, supervision of new workers, spoiled work, small production, and low efficiency during the training period are a great burden to industry. These conditions should be obviated.

"The large number of 'floaters' among adult workers is largely due to a wrong start as young workers entering industry and business. We must work with the growing child before he enters his work in order to achieve permanent results.

"By establishing a great central clearing house between the schools and the employers the product of the schools can be assimilated to mutual advantage. The ranks of the unemployed will be lessened by the fitting of the right workers in the right place and coöperation between the schools and the employers is a vital factor in solving the problem."

CINCINNATI IN FLOOD'S GRIP.

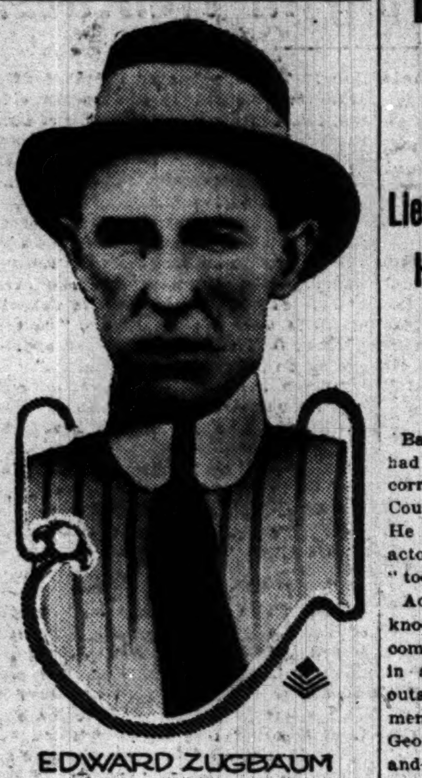
Cincinnati, O., Feb. 6.—The Central Union railroad depot, the tracks of which are inundated by the flood, was vacated late today and the various lines operating out of there were forced to seek stations on higher ground.

The flood reached the stage of fifty-five and four-tenths feet late today and continued to rise at the rate of one-tenth of a foot an hour. The crest will be reached some time tonight or early tomorrow morning with a fifty-six foot stage.

The flood waters have inundated the low lying sections of Newport and Covington, Ky., across the river, and hundreds of families have been forced to vacate their homes.

Has Farm and Auto, but Wants a Wife.



EDWARD ZUGBAUM

Edward Zugbaum is 30 years old and lives on a farm only five miles from Valparaiso, Ind. Although he has a Jap housekeeper and plenty of help, he admits he is looking for a Chicago girl to share his joys and sorrows. Incidentally Edward is the proud owner of an automobile that can carry him from his little farmhouse to the busy streets of Valparaiso in less than fifteen minutes.

Yesterday Edward wrote a letter to THE TRIBUNE asking for assistance in finding a wife. A sympathetic reporter read the epistle. Here it is:

I am 30 years of age and live in Valparaiso, Ind. I own a large farm. I am mighty lonesome at times. I would like to meet some nice girl who would be satisfied to live in the country if she has no work to do. I have a housekeeper, a Jap, who looks after all the housework, and plenty of help on the outside. The town is just five miles away and with my car I can make the trip in fifteen minutes. Let me hear from you.

JUDGE DENOUNCES BAILIFF WHO SEIZED HER FURNITURE

Mrs. Nellie Strang, Home Looted While She Was at Work, Says She Had to Sleep on Floor.

Mrs. Nellie Strang of 1652 Grand avenue told Judge Caverly yesterday she and her 6 year old son, Donald, slept on a bare floor the night of Jan. 29 after a Municipal court bailiff had removed all her furniture that day while she was away at work. She was the complainant in a charge of larceny against Charles T. Mutzelberg of 5 North Carpenter street. She told the court the goods were removed on a writ of replevin, but she had not been served with the writ.

"Why didn't you serve the writ on this woman?" the judge asked of Deputy Bailiff Edward Rada.

"We do that every day," was his answer.

"Well, you won't do it again, if I can prevent it," said the judge. "I wish I could send you and Mutzelberg to jail."

Mrs. Strang said she formerly was housekeeper for Mutzelberg. She said she took certain articles from his flat in lieu of payment of six weeks' wages, but that not only those articles, but her own furniture was removed by the deputy bailiff. The judge said it would be necessary for her to start suit against Mutzelberg before recovering the furniture.

NOYES PREDICTS POETRY ERA

Says World Is on Edge of Another Period of Genuine Inspiration.

Alfred Noyes, the poet, presented an optimistic view of the future of poetry in a lecture on that subject yesterday before the Cook County Teachers' association in Fullerton hall, Art institute. He said he believed the world is on the edge of another period of genuine poetry. He dealt in his lecture with the religious quality in poetry as one of its most essential elements, citing as one example "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam" as having the feeling of God in it. The future poetry, he said, will continue with the emotional feeling of the poet in touch with the eternal qualities. Mr. Noyes read several of his own poems after his lecture.

Lieutenant Governor's Pride Is Hurt by Story He Lost Fist Fray in Court.

Barratt O'Hara denied yesterday he had been knocked down in a fight in the corridors outside of Municipal Judge Courtney's court on Friday afternoon. He admitted he was one of the principal actors in the altercation, but denied he "took the count."

According to Mr. O'Hara, he was not knocked down, but on the other hand was compelled to defend himself and did so in such a creditable manner that two outsiders who had mixed in the argument he had with Attorney Calvin M. George were put down "for the count" and he was declared the "winner" by most observers.

"When a young man in St. Louis I trained at the same gymnasium with Tommy Sullivan. When I came to Chicago I took delight in working out with Abe Attel and other boxers of my weight. I have always taken pride in my boxing prowess.

Lets Friend Tell Story.

"That story in THE TRIBUNE hurt my pride. But through modesty I will refer you to a friend, Attorney Richard H. Colby, who saw the fraças, for the rest of my story."

Attorney Colby's story indicates the lieutenant governor has not forgotten his early training with Abe Attel. This is his story:

"Mr. O'Hara was talking in the corridor outside of Municipal Judge Courtney's court with Attorney Calvin M. George about a case that had been called before the court. There was a difference of opinion which developed into a heated argument. Some one rushed up and said: 'Don't strike that man; he is a fraternity brother of mine.'

Struck in Defense.

"Then some one struck at Mr. O'Hara, but missed him. The crowd pushed around him and he struck out to defend himself. Two men, we afterward learned were bailiffs, were knocked down by O'Hara. It looked as if he could clean up the whole crowd. Some one mentioned he was lieutenant governor of Illinois.

"'What—you Barratt O'Hara?' asked one of the bailiffs as he arose from the floor.

"'That's the lieutenant governor,' put in some one else."

"There was a sudden change in the attitude of the bailiffs. They excused themselves to Mr. O'Hara and offered to help locate the man who had struck at him.

"You may print it for a fact Mr. O'Hara was not knocked down, and he did not strike out until he had to defend himself."

CLAIMANT TO MILLIONS DIES.

T. S. Earl, Who Offered Will of F. A. Ogden in Court, Found Drowned in Texas.

Houston, Tex., Feb. 6.—T. S. Earl, who claimed the estate of the late millionaire, Francis A. Ogden, formerly of Madison, Wis., by virtue of a holographic will, was found drowned early today in a water tank at his home. Earl was a proofreader. About one week ago the Probate court had rejected the will he offered, but his counsel was planning an appeal.

Ogden was the aged recluse who died in a cheap hotel here last June under mysterious circumstances. Four "wills" have appeared for this property. All the documents were presented by comparative strangers to Ogden, and only one will, Earl's, ever was probated.

A number of relatives of Ogden came here and claimed his estate. They have vigorously prosecuted the owners of the alleged wills. Earl's paper had been under fierce attack from private detectives employed by the relatives.

EVIDENCE TO CORROBORATE STORY OF MURDER OF EIGHT.

Bottles of Anaesthetics Said to Belong to Confessed Slayer at Yonkers Home Given to Coroner.

New York, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Important evidence tending to corroborate in some details former Orderly Frederick Mors' amazing story that he murdered eight aged inmates of the Yonkers German Oddfellows' home "because they were getting peevish" was placed in the hands of Coroner Dunn of Westchester county tonight.

Sergt. Willemse of the New York police department brought to the coroner three jars, one filled with ether, one filled with chloroform, and the other empty, he said he found in a closet used by Mors at the home. Willemse also says he found a coat, the pockets of which were stuffed with absorbent cotton, folded in the shape of cones, a method used by physicians in administering ether and chloroform.

Alwin Menze, acting superintendent of the home, who succeeded Supt. Adam Bengert when the latter was arrested, brought in a box filled with medical instruments, bandages, several rolls of absorbent cotton, and three small bottles containing unknown liquors, which, he said, Mors turned over to him.

20 LEGISLATORS FORM HARRISON "BOOSTER" CLUB

Chicago Democratic Assemblymen Organize to Aid the Mayor's Campaign.

Democratic members of the general assembly from Chicago districts have organized to promote the campaign of Mayor Harrison and to further in the halls at Springfield such local legislation as the mayor wants, particularly bills aiming to give the city home rule.

Twenty of the twenty-eight representatives and senators from this city met at the Briggs house yesterday and formed a political and legislative club. Representative M. L. Igoe of the Fifth district was elected president. The other officers, all representatives, are: Vice presidents, Joseph Placek, Ninth district; Joseph A. G. Trandel, Twenty-seventh district; James H. Farrell, Twenty-ninth district; secretary, Dr. George U. Litschultz, Second district; treasurer, Henry F. Schuberth, Eleventh district; sergeant at arms, Frank J. Ryan, Eleventh district.

After indorsing the candidacy of the mayor the lawmakers pledged themselves to advocate the policies of the mayor in legislation at Springfield, and the promise was made that a bill will be introduced at once to prevent city and county officials from arbitrarily deciding the order in which the names of candidates shall appear on the official ballot.

Answers Financing Charges.

John J. Sloan, chairman of the Harrison campaign committee, replied to the charge of Frank S. Ryan of the Sweitzer headquarters that the railroads are financing the mayor's campaign.

"Mayor Harrison can honestly explain the source of every dollar expended in his interest, which is more than the Sherman house crowd will do," said Mr. Sloan. "The offers of money, of political positions and payments for services to secure assistance by the remnant left to Mr. Sweitzer indicates the desperateness of their position. They have been losing ground for the last ten days. Even their so-called Italian organization blew up this morning and half the members enrolled themselves here at the Briggs house.

Accept Mayor as Issue.

Mr. Sloan also said the friends of the mayor are willing to accept him as the issue in the campaign, although he explained there are issues to which the personality of the candidates is merely incidental.

"In the first instance," said Mr. Sloan, "Carter H. Harrison, now as in the past, stands for purity in politics, and that in itself explains why ex-police officers who have been discharged from police service during the last four years, either for cowardice, crookedness, or corruption, are against him.

"Mr. Harrison stands for the sanctity of society. Mr. Sweitzer, if he be judged by some of his political followers, stands for party plunder. The respectable elements of society are with Harrison; every roughneck, every grafter whose perfidy has been exposed, is against Harrison."

GARY GETS SECOND "JITNEY."

Flood Damage to Power House Leads to New Bus Line Into Steel City.

Gary, Ind., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Freezing weather has checked the rising Calumet river, but a six inch rise has resulted in the flooding of the $5,000 cofferdam of the Gary Heat, Light and Water company. Dissatisfied with the traction service residents of Tolleston have started a motor bus line to Gary. This is the second "jitney" line in the city.

WAR CUTS OFF ALIEN INFLUX

ROADS LOSE PROFITS.

Immigration statistics gathered by the railway bureaus show that there was a falling off of 20,140 immigrants entering United States ports during January, 1915, as compared with the corresponding month last year. The total number entering all eastern ports during the January just past were 3,765. Last year's figures were 23,905.

December statistics show a falling off to 12,383 in 1914 from 100,473 admitted in that month of the previous year. Railway managers estimate that there will be a decrease of more than half a million the current year as a result of the European war.

With the beginning of hostilities, immigration from the Scandinavian peninsula was cut down, and it has steadily decreased, until the last month, when no arrivals were listed at all. The movement is now restricted to the Mediterranean countries, Naples being the heaviest contributor.

Estimates have been made that some of the eastern railway lines which are heavy carriers of immigrant business westward from New York will suffer losses amounting to $1,000,000 annually.

WHITE GIRL WEDS NEGRO.

Black Evangelist Under Voliva Makes Bride of Mae Mitchell, Despite Protests.

Zion City is stirred over a marriage which took place in Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva's colony last Monday night. Roderick Toomes, a negro evangelist for Voliva, married Mae Mitchell, a white girl who has been doing evangelical work for the overseer for several months.

The wedding took place over the protests of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Mitchell of Zion City, parents of the girl. The parents have been residents of Zion City for many years and the wedding of their daughter and the negro is said to have been a severe shock to them.

"We tried to keep our daughter from marrying the negro," Mr. Mitchell said on the telephone last night, "but he seemed to have her completely in his control."

It is the one instrument that is adequate to the task of reproducing their voices with absolute fidelity.

If the Victrola could play nothing else besides those lovely violin airs by Fritz Kreisler, it would be worth a place in your home. But the Victrola plays everything in the realm of music.

SHIP BILL FIGHT BEGUN IN HOUSE; BRYAN REFUTED

Temple Cites Proof That Vessels Bought Would Be in Danger of Seizure.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Administration leaders made no progress today in their efforts to line up a majority of senators in favor of the shipping bill. When the senate reconvenes on Monday the administration forces will either continue their filibuster or submit to defeat. Undoubtedly they will attempt to prolong the agony just as long as possible.

The opening guns of the fight on the measure in the house were fired this afternoon by Congressman Temple of Pennsylvania. Mr. Temple took issue with Secretary Bryan's statement that the declaration of London is not in force. He proved by a decision from The Hague that that tribunal during the Turko-Italian war upheld the declaration in a dispute between Italy and France over the seizure of a French mail steamer containing Turkish reservists, although France had not subscribed to the declaration.

Temple Presents His Proofs.

Secretary Bryan in the fourth paragraph of his letter to Senator Stone said that the declaration of London is not in force.

"I have here," said Mr. Temple, "the royal proclamation and orders in council instructing British prize courts to follow the declaration with certain exceptions. The order is dated Oct. 29, 1914. The exceptions have nothing whatsoever to do with article 56, which deals with the transfer of belligerent merchant vessels to a neutral.

"Now, then, if we should dispute the justice of any decision in the British prize court and, if we could induce Germany to submit the question to arbitration, it would go to the international tribunal at The Hague. This tribunal has already recognized the declaration of London.

"In the late war between Turkey and Italy an Italian cruiser stopped the French mail steamer Manouba, which was bound from Versailles to Tunis, both French ports.

Declaration Upheld by The Hague.

"After some delay twenty-nine Turkish passengers were taken off and made prisoners of war. France demanded their release. Italy declined to release them under article 47 of the declaration of London. By agreement the case was referred to The Hague for arbitration and the decision of May 6, 1913, was that the Italian government was within its rights in removing passengers from the French vessel.

"There was a case of a dispute between a neutral that had not ratified the declaration of London and a belligerent that was carrying it into effect, which dispute was carried to the international tribunal of arbitration at The Hague. The international tribunal sustained the belligerent that was enforcing the declaration of London. We should avoid any controversy of that kind with any power."

Cannot Purchase German Ships.

Mr. Temple told the house that the United States could not purchase the interned German vessels, even to use them in coastwise trade, without danger of their seizure if they got outside of the three mile limit. He said that, all arguments to the contrary, the declaration of London would be followed by The Hague in any dispute which might arise if Great Britain should care to permit disputed cases to go there.

Senator Simmons of North Carolina, one of the Democratic leaders in the senate, called at the White House today to tell the president that if the ship bill fight is carried on another week an extra session will be necessary.

Desperate efforts were made by the administration leaders today to get Senator Smith of South Carolina to return to Washington. He is understood to have informed them that if he does return he will fight the bill.

Nurse Who Sues Hotel for $10,000.

MISS MILDRED LLOYD

Miss Mildred Lloyd, professional nurse residing at 4236 Kenmore avenue, has sued the New Morrison hotel and Dr. J. J. Davis, house physician, to recover $10,000 damages for an alleged attempted attack on her by N. C. Bellcock of Cedar Rapids, Ia., employed as traveling salesman for Belding Bros. & Co., Chicago silk dealers. Attorney Covey F. Grider, representing Miss Lloyd, charges Dr. Davis directed the employment agency to send him a "young, good looking nurse." The employment agency corroborates it, but Dr. Davis denies it. The physician also says Miss Lloyd denied at the time anything unusual had occurred. All interested parties say Bellcock was a "souse patient."

POLICE FIND SUPPOSED AUTO THIEVES' TOOL KIT.

File for Defacing Number, Shears and Dies Reported Discovered in Blodgett's Room.

John Blodgett, arrested as the supposed head of the alleged "automobile thieves' trust," continues to assert his innocence while the police continue to question him and try to trace the whereabouts of numerous stolen machines.

The police believe they strengthened their case against the suspect yesterday when they recovered from his room in North La Salle street two sets of dies, a file, and a pair of tinners' shears. The police assert the shears were used to cut off and cut up license plates, the file was used to erase the manufacturers' number from the engine, and the dies were used to make a new number. The police say these things constitute the "first set of automobile thieves' tools on record."

Blodgett and his wife have resided at 819 North La Salle street for some time, but the tools were found in a room across the street which the police say Blodgett recently rented.

Postpaid Rate Rise Hearing.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—Hearings on the proposals of western railroads to increase freight rates, which were to begin in Chicago before the interstate commerce commission, have been postponed until March 4 by agreement between the railroads, the interstate commerce commission, and the state railroad commissions affected.

COSTS RAILROAD $111,000 FOR STREET VACATIONS.

Baltimore and Ohio Must Pay City That Sum for Public Thoroughfares Taken for New Yards.

The council compensation committee yesterday decided to charge the Baltimore and Ohio railroad $111,304.77 for the vacation of streets and alleys and other privileges granted in the ordinance providing for the new location of the railroad's yards between Wood, Lincoln, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth streets. The removal of the yards from the present site at Twelfth street is necessary to permit the construction of the new west side terminal. The compensation committee put a value of $91,224.12 on the streets and alleys vacated. The other item is a charge for overhead space, which will be occupied by bridges and viaducts, amounting to $20,080.65.

FEDERAL EXPERTS DOUBT SOAR IN MEAT PRICES.

WASHINGTON.—Authorities in the agricultural department are inclined to doubt recent statements predicting higher prices for meat. They call attention to the fact that the number of live stock in the United States, Jan. 1, as shown by the annual estimate of the department's statistician, is 7,712,000 greater than a year ago, this being the first increase in a number of years.

COL. ALEXANDER GIVES BOND ON 'SLAVE' CHARGE

Providence (R. I.) Magnate Denies Guilt and Discusses Business Conditions.

Col. Charles A. Alexander, banker and steel magnate and grocer of Providence, R. I., surrendered himself in Judge Carpenter's court yesterday on the indictment charging violation of the Mann act.

His bond of $10,000 was given before Clerk Charles A. Buell. It was signed by William A. Bond, a real estate dealer, and Lucius G. Fisher, owner of the Fisher building. Mr. Bond scheduled $15,000 worth of property at Cottage Grove avenue and Oakwood boulevard. Mr. Fisher scheduled $20,000 worth of South Chicago dock property.

Col. Alexander appeared to be in high spirits. He was accompanied to the federal building by his two bondsmen and his counsel, William Hayes of Providence and Alfred S. Austrian.

Colonel Is Mum.

"I have nothing to say at present, except that I am not guilty of this charge," said the colonel. "At the proper time I may have a statement to make.

"As to general business conditions, I may say that the prospect is good for a revival of prosperity. The war in Europe is going to bring us good times. I look for a big business revival within ninety days."

Wielded Poetic Pen.

He is accused of transporting Miss Jessie E. Cope of Los Angeles from Los Angeles to Chicago and New Orleans for immoral purposes. During their travels, according to the government, Col. Alexander wrote much poetry and addressed it to Miss Cope as "the great big girl of the golden west."

Miss Cope is also under federal indictment charged with attempting to bribe government officials by offering to split $50,000 with them if they succeeded in extorting this amount from the colonel.

Japs Seize Norwegian Ship.

TOKIO, Feb. 6.—Japanese warships have seized the Norwegian steamer Christian Bors on the allegation that they found some irregularity in its papers. It has been turned over to the prize court at Sasebo. The Christian Bors sailed from Shanghai Jan. 27 for San Francisco by way of Japanese ports.

GERMAN LEADER GREAT IRISHMAN

Prof. Kuno Meyer Tells Chicago Club of Beauties of Gaelic Language.

Kuno Meyer, professor of Celtic languages and literature at the University of Berlin, was dubbed the "greatest living Irishman" at the Irish Fellowship club yesterday following an address on Gaelic language.

"I must have been an Irish barb or an Irish fairy must have rocked my cradle at birth," said the professor in explaining his lifelong devotion to Celtic literature, which he declared in Germany is on a plane with Germanic and Romance studies.

"Celtic language was the earliest voice out of the dawn, and needs a lifetime for study in all its rich and varied aspects," he continued. "I am rejoiced that here in Chicago your university has taken it up."

Takes Slap at England.

While declaring he "must eschew politics at this hour when the fate of nations is trembling in the balance," the professor took occasion to slap England by asserting England had smothered Celtic culture and "made the world and the Irish themselves believe the English myth that all the civilization the Irish have was given them by England."

In declaring that Germany was the true seat of Celtic learning in modern times he said:

"I had returned to Germany as a student of Irish literature, and the works of Zeuss and Prof. Windisch were the sources to which I went. Today the German universities have placed Celtic literature and history on the same bases as Germanic and Romance studies."

Olson Irish in Sweden.

Chief Justice Harry Olson in a talk on "Courts" said that when a boy he played in a band in a town where the Irish predominated, and used to attend all Irish gatherings where the woes of Ireland were preached.

"So Olson is a robust Irish name in Sweden," said the judge. "If I am robust it is because when a youngster I had to lick four Irish boys while three of them were licking me."

Judge Olson stated that the Municipal court of Chicago is the greatest civil court in America, if not in the world. He asserted that this court handles $500,000 more in civil suits annually than do all the other courts of Illinois outside of Chicago.

Daughters of Isabella Meet.

The midwinter reception and card party of Auburn Park court, 205, National Order Daughters of Isabella, was held yesterday in the Hotel La Salle.

CHICAGO POSTAL MEN'S PAY CUT TO MAKE 'PORK'

Madden Assails Administration's Extravagance on Public Building Work.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Postmaster General Burleson and the Democratic administration were denounced in the house today by Representative Madden of Chicago for reducing the pay of Chicago postal employés to obtain money for pork barrel public buildings appropriations.

Senator Lewis of Illinois went to the postoffice department today to protest against the demotion of 350 letter carriers. The senator served notice on the department he would carry the fight in their behalf to the floor of the senate if they are not reinstated at their former grades immediately.

Provides 36 New Buildings.

During the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill Mr. Madden called the attention of the house to the fact that appropriations were included therein for beginning work on thirty-six public buildings throughout the country, the cost of which will run from $50,000 to $1,000,000 each.

"We have before us an item to appropriate $1,000 to begin the construction of a building at Globe, Ariz.," he said. "The cost of the buildings and grounds is to be $115,000. The population of Globe is 7,500; the postal receipts are $21,000. The interest charge on such an expenditure at 3 per cent will amount to $3,450 per annum. The janitor service not less than $600, and repairs, heat, and light probably not less than $1,200, or $5,250 per annum in all.

Can Save by Renting.

"A building can be rented to transact the business of Globe for not to exceed $1,200 per annum, and it will be better fitted for the service than the building which will be erected at a cost of $115,000.

"There are a hundred items, and more, of similar character in this bill, but not one of them justified. It is the most extravagant waste of public money that I have ever seen. No wonder we have to tax the people on their necessities to find the money to maintain the government with this kind of reckless extravagance going on.

"Every building that is put up in a town of this size adds to the cost of operating the postal service. It takes the money out of the public treasury; it imposes additional taxation upon the people.

Chicagoans' Pay Cut.

"Today I am told that the revenues of the postoffice department will run behind $20,000,000 during the present fiscal year; that economies of every kind are necessary to keep the expenses within the receipts and that 350 letter carriers in Chicago have been reduced from $1,200 to $1,000 a year, and more yet to come, notwithstanding the fact that the annual revenues of the Chicago office are $20,000,000 more than the expense.

"Mad Rush to Spend."

"I protest not only against the continuation of such appropriations, but I particularly protest against the reduction of the salaries of the men who do the work in the postoffice department in order that you may continue on in your mad rush to empty the treasury."

Mr. Madden served notice on the house that he intends to fight every appropriation for public buildings in cities of less than 25,000 inhabitants during the consideration of the sundry civil measure next week.

DEALERS FIGHT WAGE EARNERS' EXEMPTION LAW

Wisconsin Merchants Demand Legislature Cut $720 a Year to $480 Sum.

MADISON, WIS.—The wage exemption question is coming up before the Wisconsin legislature again with more force than in many years. Although repeated attempts have been made to reduce the wage exemption in Wisconsin, they have always signally failed. The Wisconsin Grocers' association, assisted by several other retail associations, demand a reduction of the wage exemption. In former years bills for the reduction of wage exemptions received a legislative recognition, and both Gov. La Follette and Gov. Davidson vetoed such measures.

The argument of the retailers is that wage exemption is in favor of persons who do not desire to pay their honest debts, and they always bring statistics and figures to show the great losses which they suffer under a credit system. As a matter of fact, however, it hardly seems right to reduce the exemption of a wage earner from $180, covering a period of three months, to $120 for the same period, when the farmer and real estate owner is allowed an exemption of property valued at $5,000 and the retailer himself also enjoys an exemption under the federal bankruptcy act.

Protects Wage Earner.

The whole theory of wage exemption is that it protects the wage earner who is in financial difficulties at a time when he needs protection from his creditors, and in support of the wage exemption it is always argued that it is a strong factor in giving wage earners who have suffered financial reverses, or in fact any one who is on a salary, a protection in support of the family as against creditors. The wage exemption extends only to married men, and is given only as a protection to their families. The bill will undoubtedly be of great interest in the larger cities, for it is from those cities that the demand for a reduction comes. People of smaller towns have a closer acquaintance with each other and know what the financial standing of their neighbor is. Credit is rarely given beyond the mark where the indebtedness remains unpaid.

While retail dealers' associations push the bills for the reduction of wage exemptions, unquestionably the real demand for the reduction in wage exemptions generally comes from the collection agencies, who feel that they would have a stronger weapon in their hands for the collection of debts from wage earners if there was not such a large exemption allowed.

Labor Opposes Slash.

Opposition to the reduction of the wage exemption always comes strongly from the heads of union labor organizations. Economic workers and persons interested in the distribution of charities in large cities are also generally opposed to the wage exemption reduction, alleging as a ground for their opposition the fact that they believe a material reduction of the wage exemptions would be an injury to the workingmen. Representatives of labor unions and of charitable organizations will unquestionably come before the legislature in opposition to the wage exemption reduction bills, of which there have been several presented to the legislature.

Hearings on the bills reducing the wage exemptions will probably be before the judiciary committees of both houses, as they are the committees which have charge of bills affecting legal action in the state.

There are always powerful home influences upon the members of the legislature in support of bills reducing the wage exemption, as the retail associations have more or less power in their fight for measures in which they are interested. These associations promise a strong and active support for the bills reducing the wage exemption pending before this legislature, and they seem confident that the bills are likely to receive recognition.

Assemblyman Hart of Oshkosh will be one of the members who will probably oppose the bills, because of his labor affiliations. The Social-Democratic members from Milwaukee will also be strongly opposed to any reduction being made in the wage exemption.

THE DRINKER DEFENDED and Fortified

By Hon. James E. Bruce

Every man who drinks—much or little—every person interested in a practical solution of the drink problem in the home, in business or in society, should read this remarkable book by a remarkable man.

Senator Bruce talks to the business and professional man and politician from the standpoint of his thirty years' experience and observation as a lawyer, banker and public servant—to the working man from the standpoint of his own experience as a "hired man" on an Iowa farm, and to the people generally from the standpoint of his experience in the practical and effective international temperance work of the "Neal Way" which he has caused to be established in 60 American and foreign cities during the past five years. In this book Senator Bruce fully explains how easily, quickly and effectively any one can MAKE DRINK LEAVE THEM ALONE by the "Neal Way" in the privacy of the home, hotel or club, or in a fine private room at the head Neal Institute, No. 811-T East 49th Street, Chicago. QUAKERS DROP FIGHT; AID PEACE

"Hicksites" and "Orthodox" Meet for First Time in Eighty-seven Years.

SCHISM MAY HEAL.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—A very significant historic event happened recently in this city. For the first time in eighty-seven years the two great branches of the Society of Friends, the "Hicksites" and the "Orthodox," have met together in a common meeting, for a common purpose, and are now planning still further union gatherings, not to reconcile their theological differences, however, but to promote the cause of universal peace. Nowhere else in the whole of the United States has such a coöperative meeting been held between these two bodies of the Quakers except in Philadelphia, and now that the movement has begun here, it is spreading to other parts of the nation where the Friends are located.

The first meeting of this significant coöperation was held recently in the meeting house at Fourth and Arch streets, and the others to follow will take place in the twelve Friends' meeting houses throughout the city.

Prime Mover in Reunion.

William I. Hull, president of the Pennsylvania Peace and Arbitration society, was one of the prime movers in the matter, and in extending the invitation wrote as follows: "We may be assured of a cordial welcome back to the old home meeting of the society in Philadelphia by Friends of the 'other branch,' and we may be assured that 'our' Friends will respond heartily to the invitation in the spirit in which it is extended." Invitations were sent out to 3,225 Hicksite Friends and to 1,942 Orthodox ones, which shows rather closely the relative proportion of one branch to the other in this city.

Although this "getting together" has scarcely any influence on the religious differences between the two branches, it may mean the total destruction of the old time bitterness of feeling that in these latter years has been softened down between them.

Hicks Backer of Faction.

"The term "Hicksites" was at first hurled at the seceders as an epithet, but it has remained as a name for that section of the Friends who are more liberal in their theology. Elias Hicks himself was a widely known and powerful Quaker preacher, who for fifty years traveled between Maine and Maryland, delivering his sermons and organizing new meetings.

In 1817 he went to Baltimore and spoke against the adoption of the orthodox creed designed to effect a closer union with the Friends in England. In consequence of his efforts the creed was rejected and the schism between the two branches of the Quakers dates from that time, although it was not complete until about 1827.

BISBEE'S THIRSTY THRONG RUSHES TO TEST 'VINEGAR'

Large Shipment Suspected to Be J. Barleycorn Under an Alias.

BISBEE, Ariz.—And now we have the "great vinegar party mystery, or what is Bisbee going to do with sixty-one barrels of salad dressing?" This is a question that has been bothering the amateur prohibition Sherlocks of the town for some time.

The root of the trouble lies in the fact that a carload of the acid, wrapped in sixty-one wooden skins, is accused of traveling in a freight car under an alias. It was suspected that the real name of the fluid contained in the barrels was J. Barleycorn.

"Dry" Orator Starts Inquiry.

The mystery originated when William B. Cleary, attorney for the dry workers, impromptu prohibitionist orator, and well known in Bisbee, received a communication from G. F. Rinehart. The letter follows:

> William B. Cleary, Bisbee, Ariz.—My Dear Cleary: Southern Pacific car No. 89077, containing sixty-one barrels of vinegar routed from San Francisco to Bisbee via Tucson and Southwestern, has gone through Yuma.
> The consignment is alleged to be from Cote Brothers Vinegar company and is billed prepaid to Frank Wilson. Find out who Frank Wilson is and why he needs so much vinegar and if it is at all suspicious notify railroad officials, as the law is very strict about interstate shipments with false labels. Let me know the result. Fraternally yours,
> G. F. RINEHART.

Cleary, upon receipt of the above letter, looked up A. R. Buckman, the field representative of the Prohibition party, who has worked in Cochise county and the state of Arizona for some months. Buckman, taking the letter, went to Frank Wilson.

Frank Wilson is one of Bisbee's well known transfer men. When approached by Buckman he declared that he was entirely in the clear and that no trouble was expected with the shipment.

Naturally it was impossible to decide what really was in the barrels, and so Mr. Wilson agreed to have a committee of his friends act as testers. They were to taste the liquid contained in the barrels and judge whether it was vinegar or something somewhat more enlivening.

"Boyhood Friends" Gather.

Immediately Mr. Wilson discovered that the Bisbee people are among the most friendly of any in the country and have some of the longest memories. Men that he had never seen before showed their friendliness for him in a most decided manner. Others, men he had not seen for many years, called to mind the almost forgotten fact that they had been numbered among his boyhood chums. And all of them announced that they were willing to act as members of the testing committee.

As a matter of friendship they wouldn't charge him a cent for their services.

When the evidence in the matter is all before the public it will probably be found that a representative of a vinegar factory called upon the various business men of Bisbee and the Warren district and solicited their orders for vinegar. He made up a carload shipment, and in order to get the benefit of the carload freight rate had the fluid shipped to one man.

It would seem that the joke is upon Frank Wilson, for it appears that he is the innocent bystander.

But what is even yet bothering a lot of persons in Bisbee, granted that the barrels contain vinegar, is, what is so much vinegar doing at one time in the city?

KANSAS WILL INTRODUCE CLERGYMEN TO THE HOE.

TOPEKA, Kas.—The Kansas board of administration is planning a summer course at the State Agricultural college in practical farming for preachers. It is not intended to teach clergymen how to farm. The plan is to teach them how to live and be successful ministers in a farm cummunity.

The state is dotted with rural churches abandoned for lack of interest by farmers and their families. It is noted that:

The average country preacher, fresh from college and divinity school, is learned in culture, doctines and schisms, history and science, but doesn't know a disc harrow from an ensilage cutter—he doesn't understand problems of farm life. Therefore his sermons have not the sympathy and interest of his flock, and they dream to the tune of Greek allegories. It is proposed that the rural pastor:

Doff the modish suit and don overalls and jumper; hoe beans instead of reading tracts; learn to pitch hay and wheat bundles; mix with the country folk by assisting at farm labor and learning their likes and dislikes; help them to solve their problems; talk in "Kansas language."

STEEL WORKERS' PENSIONS OVER MILLION AND HALF.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The fourth annual report of the pension fund of the United States Steel corporation and the Carnegie Steel company shows that since Jan. 1, 1911, when the fund was established, there has been paid out to superannuated or disabled employés $1,575,021.33. In 1914 $511,969.90 was distributed, this being an increase over the preceding year of $89,152.76 and an increase of $230,510.51 over the amount paid the first year.

At the end of the year there were under review 2,521 beneficiaries, the number of pensioners being 612. During 1914 the average amount received by each pensioner was $30.40.

The fund from which the pensions are paid amounts to $12,000,000, being made up from the Carnegie relief fund of $4,000,000 and $8,000,000 set aside by the steel corporation.

WAR INCREASES COST OF HORSES

Expected to Amount to $25 to $40 by April 1 in United States.

EBENSBURG, Pa.—While the farmer is getting higher prices for his wheat as a result of the European war, the middle of February will see the beginning of an advance in the price of horseflesh which by April 1 will mean $25 to $40 more for each animal.

Northern Cambria farmers received circulars from the state's director of horse breeding in which the official advised all agriculturists to breed horses, and he predicted a general rise in horse values everywhere.

This statement was received by Ira Bloom of Ebensburg, one of the best known horsemen in Pennsylvania.

Taken Thousands of Horses.

"While there has been no advance so far," said Mr. Bloom, "the war in Europe can have but one effect, and that is the increase in the prices of horses.

"The battling nations have drawn heavily on the resources of the United States. They have taken thousands of 1,000 and 1,200 pound animals. More thousands are being bought and shipped, and still more are going in the very near future. Even the lighter horses are being taken for the use of certain branches of military service, which will mean that the animals used by livery men and grocers and so on will increase in price.

$225 to $300 Each.

"Heavy draft horses now cost from $225 to $300 each, horses of good class, but in February an advance will be noted, while about April 1 the increase will have totaled $25 to $40 a horse.

"The state director of horse breeding is giving farmers good, sound advice when he tells them to grow horses on their farms, because farmers certainly will have to take part in the expense this country is undergoing as its share of the European war cost."

Anselm B. Kirsch, an extensive breeder of Nicktown, agreed with the state official also. He declared the price of horseflesh would certainly rise as a result of the war.

"Stonewall's" Widow Ill.

BOYS RESCUE WAR HERO FROM HEN'S ONSLAUGHT.

EAST KNOX, Me.—Maj. Simon Pratt, battlescarred veteran of more bloody fields than any other G. A. R. man in Waldo county, came near ending his eventful life in a most unsoldierly way recently.

Although 78 years old and not so spry as when he led the charge at Cold Harbor, he is able to help some 'round the place. He discovered that a hen had made her nest in the bottom of a barrel in the barn. The major reached down to pull her out, lost his balance, and pitched headforemost into the barrel.

The hen was scared and was squawking and beating him in the face with her wings. Then his grandson, Lafayette Marden, 13 years old, and his chum, Roscoe D. Clewley, happened along.

The boys were not strong enough to get the major out of the barrel, but Lafayette saw that the horse hayfork rigging was still in place, the warp being rove through a block in the top of the barn. The boy quickly put a clovehitch around his grandfather's ankles, as he had been taught at the Boy Scouts' drill. Then he and Roscoe tailed on to the rope and pulled with all their might, just being able to hoist the major out.

Why No Second Hand Jeffery Cars

No argument about that, is there?

Observe then, please, the conditions that obtain today in Chicago.

Not a single Jeffery car has been traded for a car of another make since we assumed the Jeffery agency in Chicago and since the Jeffery cars were first announced by the Thos. B. Jeffery Company.

There are no unused Jeffery cars for sale except those we have from time to time—each one of which means another Jeffery in service.

A man does not keep a car which does not give him satisfaction. He does not buy another car of the same make—if either car or service leaves something to be desired.

These facts speak for Jeffery satisfaction.

They speak for Centaur service.

Any Jeffery owner will bear us out.

Ask him.

We have no competition. Analyze the matter and you will find these to be the facts: First, you may eliminate the cars selling for less than $1,000; you would not be interested in them or you would not be reading this advertisement. They cannot, in the nature of things, deliver to you all you require.

Then you will find remaining the great bulk of the cars on the market, practically 75% of all those exhibited at the recent show. This is the great, so-called "medium" class, each distinguished from the other by no particular point except the fiercest of price competition—their makers endeavoring to draw trade from each other by clipping off a few dollars in price and scrimping and scraping in value as they must to meet such fiercely competitive conditions.

Then you will find a group of the highest priced cars, gradually growing less in number; cars of unquestionable quality, but the price is too high to appeal to any one at the present time.

Then you will find The Jeffery—the economy car. Light in weight, with the high-speed, long-stroke motor which Jeffery first introduced into America; the car with all the quality of the great, heavy, out-of-date, expensive cars, yet selling at a price but little higher than the so called "medium" class. The builders of the highest-priced cars cannot compete with us in price, though we have more than matched them in quality. The "medium" class car is frankly out of the running as far as our quality is concerned, and price without quality means nothing.

Only Jeffery has been able to produce Jeffery quality at Jeffery prices.

Remember, our business is more than five times as great as it was one year ago. All the Chesterfield models are now on exhibition at our show room.

We will make an appointment with you at any time for the most wonderful demonstration you have ever seen. Let us show you a real quality car at the price of an ordinary car.

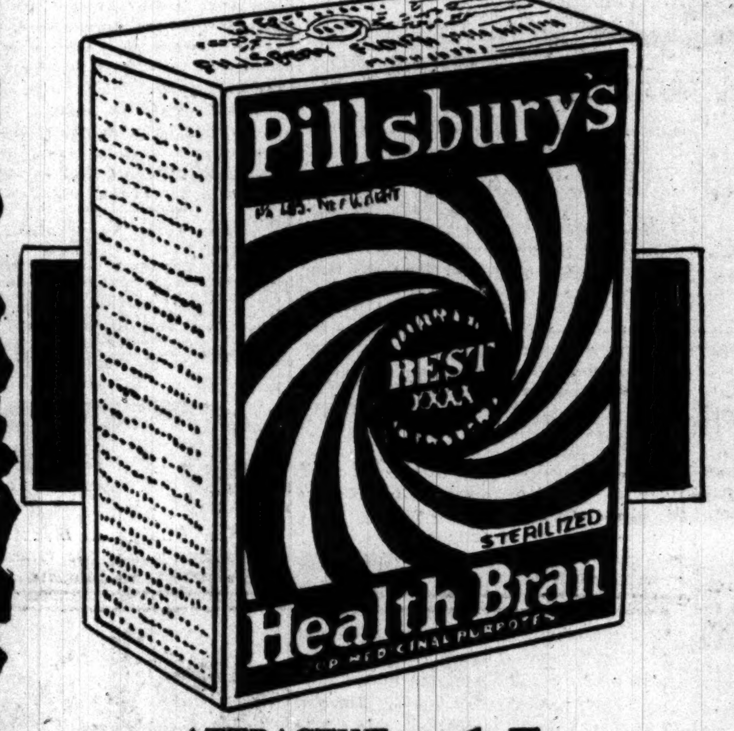
YOU CAN NOW GET A PERFECT BRAN



ATTRACTIVE BIG PACKAGE, 15c

A BRAN that is entirely different. Only the large, coarse, hardy flakes are selected from the tons and tons of wheat ground each day. Under direction of the Pillsbury laboratory these flakes of wheat are scientifically sterilized by a secret process which gives a delicious flavor to PILLSBURY'S BRAN and which makes these crisp, brown, roasted flakes a real food treat as well as the most efficient laxative known.

Pillsbury's Bran

"IT WORKS"

How "It Works"

Doctors all agree that Bran is the one natural food that prevents all other edibles from forming, in the digestive tract, in a mass or lump. And, because Bran will not readily absorb moisture, the hard, rough flakes serve as a partition in keeping separate and free the foods of finer texture during processes of digestion. These flakes also scour the walls of the intestines and by increasing the bulk of undigested matter, they induce an active movement of refuse through the intestines and out through the bowels. Just as you would shake gravel or beans in a jar or bowl to remove clinging substance from the sides, so does Pillsbury's Bran remove all obstructions from the walls of the alimentary canals.

Ask your doctor today.

The Rare Flavor

Sterilizing Pillsbury's Bran is accomplished by a new and secret process which requires that the raw wheat jackets be roasted in a tremendous heat. This toasting of the wheat flakes gives them a delicious flavor that smacks of the meaty kernel of walnuts and tempts you to eat by the handful, these rich, brown, crisp overcoats of the wheat. And this flavor that is roasted into Pillsbury's Bran by sterilizing is also the identifying feature of Bran Bread, Bran Muffins and the many delightful good things made with Pillsbury's Bran. All the flavor and goodness are kept in and all the germs and dirt are kept out by the careful sealing of the attractive big package in which Pillbury's Bran is packed after it is sterilized. It will keep indefinitely without deterioration in the sealed package.

A NEW BRAN FOOD FOR EVERY DAY

RECEIPTS are printed on the side of every package of Pillsbury's Bran. From these suggestions you can select a palatable means of serving bran as a daily diet and yet have variety and deliciousness. Bran Bread, Bran Muffins, Bran Cookies and Gems can all be made light and tasty with Pillsbury's Bran if you follow the package receipts. Pillsbury's Bran sprinkled in soups, mixed with pancake batter, prepared as Bran Tea, all offer ways of using bran that make it a desirable foodstuff and all of which means insure the proper functioning of the eliminative organs.

BLAME FOR ALL TRACTION EVILS LAID ON CITY HALL

Judge Olson Charges Bad Service Is Due to Sloth of the Administration.

Chicago's bad transportation service is laid at the doors of the city administration by Judge Harry Olson, Republican candidate for mayor, who charges the administration has failed to exercise the authority vested in it by ordinance to compel a better service. The judge said that was one of the evidences of the slothfulness of the city government.

"The traction ordinances of 1907," said Judge Olson at a meeting last night in the Harper school hall, Wood and Sixty-fifth streets, "expressly reserved to the city council plenary powers to prescribe reasonable service regulations, such service regulations, when approved by the supervising engineers, to be incontestable by the companies.

No Standards of Service.

"Up to the present time the city administration has failed to procure the passage of any standards of service for the surface lines, and this despite the fact that the necessity therefor was brought to its attention by a written communication from the board of supervising engineers under date of May 13, 1913.

"Adequate, equitable, and effective standards of service should be provided at once. I pledge myself to the task of getting the most out of the present transportation facilities and at the same time taking steps to provide for the solution of the larger problem of the future."

Talks to Irish Club.

Judge Olson early in the afternoon was the guest of the Irish Fellowship club in the Hotel La Salle, and told the members of the development of the Municipal court under his direction as chief justice.

"The establishment of the Municipal court," he said, "is the only step which has been taken in the direction of giving the city a new charter. Out of the elaborate charter scheme evolved several years ago the Municipal court is all that has survived.

"Nearly everything which could be done has been done to make the court independent of all outside influences. It can make its own budgets so that a condition hardly can arise where the court may have to make its peace with a political body like the council to get the appropriation it needs."

Politics "De Luxe" for Women.

Young men and young women first voters will be invited to the debutante reception of the Republican Woman's Harry Olson association at the headquarters, 850 Otis building, Wednesday afternoon.

"We want both boys and girls to come to our party," said Mrs. William Severin, president of the association. "We already have installed our piano, and next week we will have a music box. O, we are going to show Chicago some politics de luxe in our department. There is an electric cooking apparatus, and tea and coffee will be served in the afternoon.

"Presidents of the ward branches of the association in the Fifteenth, Sixteenth, and Seventeenth wards will be "at home" to residents of their respective wards, tomorrow afternoon from 2 to 4.

"A. P." CHIEF TAKES BRIDE.

Paul Cowles, Superintendent of Associated Press, Weds Mrs. Charlotte Wynne.

Paul Cowles, superintendent of the Associated Press in Chicago, was married yesterday afternoon to Mrs. Charlotte M. Wynne of Lombard, Ill. The ceremony, which was private, was performed by the Rev. Henry S. Brown of the Lake View Presbyterian church. Mr. and Mrs. Cowles will take a short wedding trip.

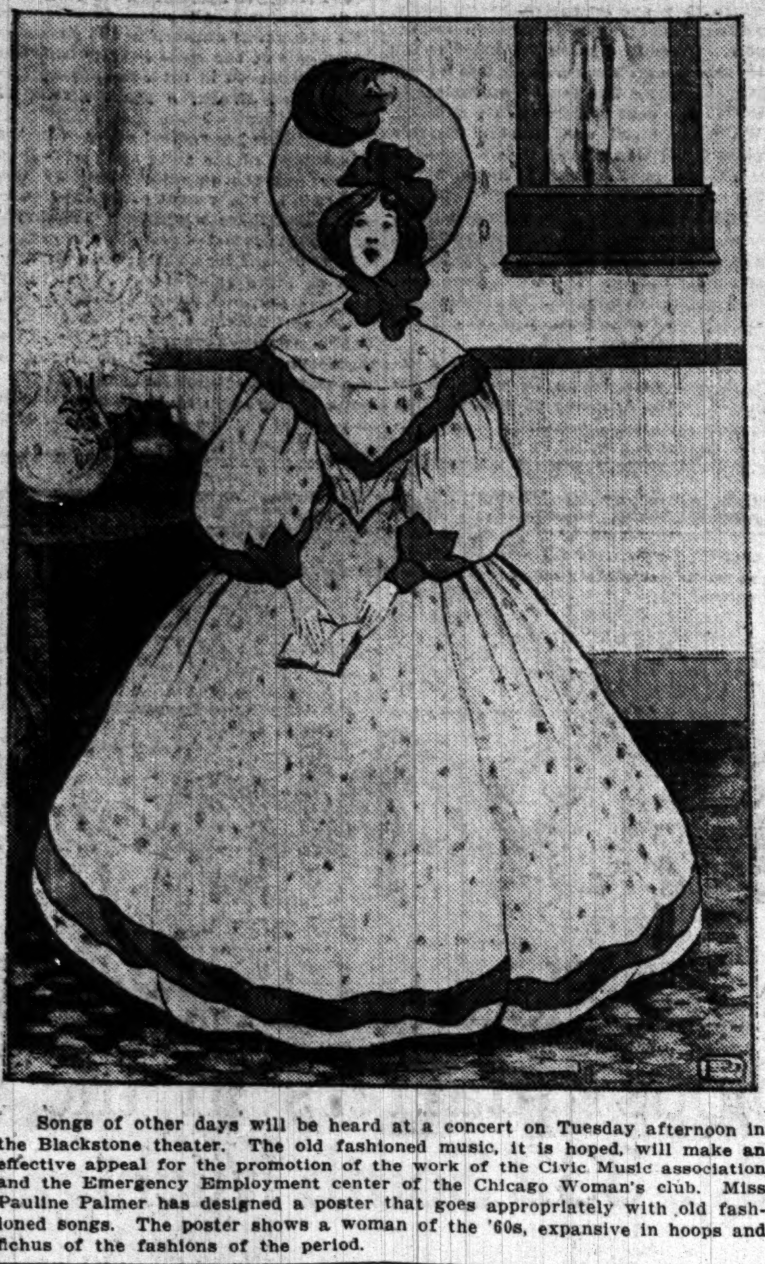
Poster for Old Time Songs Concert



Songs of other days will be heard at a concert on Tuesday afternoon in the Blackstone theater. The old fashioned music, it is hoped, will make an effective appeal for the promotion of the work of the Civic Music association and the Emergency Employment center of the Chicago Woman's club. Miss Pauline Palmer has designed a poster that goes appropriately with old fashioned songs. The poster shows a woman of the '60s, expansive in hoops and fichus of the fashions of the period.

THOMPSON CAMP IN MERRY MOOD

The William Hale Thompson forces foregathered at the Hotel La Salle yesterday and rejoiced mightily over the outlook, if noise, enthusiasm, and general hurrahing should be so interpreted.

After the speechmaking and the general felicitations Mr. Thompson repaired to his headquarters to prepare another statement attacking Judge Harry Olson, the fusion candidate.

Takes Up Bailiffs Again.

"I desire to inform Judge Olson," reads the statement, "that the question as to whether or not he obtained the $2,500 salary increase through the assistance of Anton J. Cermak in consideration of Judge Olson not opposing the discharge of deputy bailiffs for politicals reasons, is not a question of campaign thunder."

Mr Thompson then asks further questions concerning the bailiff matter and continues:

"As Judge Olson promised to answer certain inquiries heretofore made by me in his first speech and failed to do so, I again wish to propound those questions:

Asks About Support in Election.

"Will you give me your support if I am the choice of the Republican voters at the primary?

"Will you give to the taxpayers of Chicago explicit information why you took $700 from Cook county on two warrants of $350 each, deposited said warrants with the Garden City Bank and Trust company, and for the same period took $1,000 from Bureau county, Illinois, for your services rendered that county?"

DISPOSITION OF LEPER PUZZLES HIGHLAND PARK.

County Refuses to Take Charge of Lunardi and City Must Wait Word from U. S. Authorities.

Waukegan, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The city of Highland Park is puzzled as to what to do with Angelo Lunardi, who has leprosy. City officials and Dr. Bergen, who has handled the man's case, have appealed to the federal government

With the authorities of Lake county refusing to permit the city authorities to turn the man over to it and with no legal right to place him in an isolated place, the town officers face a problem. At least two weeks must elapse before word will come from federal authorities as to what it will do in the matter.

SWEITZER TELLS WHY HE WANTS MAYORALTY JOB

Sees Big Chance to Serve the People by Making Chicago a Better Place.

Robert M. Sweitzer was rescued from a mob at his headquarters yesterday afternoon, backed up against the wall, and asked:

"Why are you almost breaking your neck to be mayor of Chicago? What is the big motive?"

"Opportunity," he replied without hesitation. "Opportunity that might come to a man to do the biggest thing in his life—opportunity to do something worth while for millions of your fellow citizens.

"It would be no sacrifice for me to serve as mayor of Chicago. I am not that modest. I am willing to make any sacrifice if that's what some of my opponents term it, to be mayor of Chicago. I really want to be mayor. I will do anything humanly possible and honorable to be mayor. I'm going to be mayor, too.

Few Get the Chance.

"But you can sum it all up in the word 'opportunity.' The average man doesn't get such an opportunity. I like to think of it—the chance to do some real work for a great many of my fellow citizens.

"Now, don't get the idea that I look upon myself as a Moses or an evangelist. I am neither. I am a plain man, with business training and a big sympathy for the people of Chicago.

"Somehow, the opportunity seems to have come to me to help do the things that Chicago wants done.

"Chicago right now is one of the great cities of the world. In my opinion it is to be the greatest city in the world. I would like to have my share in helping Chicago to fulfill what I believe is its destiny.

"I want to help, in a larger way than a private citizen, make Chicago safe for her people—the streets safe for men, women, and children, so they will not go about in terror of the thug, the holdup man, and the thief.

Sees Too Much Bunk.

"I would like to see Chicago put on a business basis. We have too much bunk and hypocrisy—too much expediency, and too much trimming here and there for fear of political results. I don't care for those things. I would like to see the public work done in a businesslike way and done quickly.

"I too, love Chicago. And I would like to have the chance to use all my energy to make Chicago a place where our people would be more contented, where the people would all be working, and our streets cleared of the jobless man.

"Yes, I want to be mayor. I want to be mayor very much. It is a life-time opportunity."

New Charge at Harrison.

While Mr. Sweitzer was outlining calmly his ambition, his campaign managers were making the typewriters smoke with the "hot stuff" they were preparing against Mayor Harrison.

The latest charge is that the mayor is trying to play politics with the schools, and particularly along the line of getting the public school teachers into line for him. The basis of the charge was a meeting of school teachers held yesterday in Oakland School hall, Fortieth street and Cottage Grove avenue.

The meeting was called for the purpose of considering the proposed decrease in the teachers' salaries. According to Mr. Sweitzer's managers, it was turned into an appeal, direct and indirect, to the teachers to get out and do their level best for Carter Harrison by Mrs. John McMahon and Charles S. Peterson, members of the school board.

Hot Shots from the Political Reel.

The board of election commissioners yesterday ruled that candidates for the nomination for city offices could not run on more than one ticket in the primary. Former Judge Owens permitted them to run on two tickets in the primary but made them select one ballot for the election. The ruling hits Charles H. Sergel, fusion candidate for city treasurer, and John Siman, fusion candidate for city clerk. Several aldermen also are affected. Judge Olson retired from the Progressive ticket last week, electing to run in the primaries on the Republican ballot.

Three candidates for aldermanic nominations had their petitions attacked before the board of election commissioners. Robert M. Buck objected to the petition of Samuel Beckwith, Republican, in the Thirty-third ward. Beckwith also filed as a Progressive and his Progressive petition was objected to by David J. Harnly. The petition of James Sullivan, Democrat, Thirty-second ward, also was objected to by John P. Smith. Insufficient number of bona fide signatures was the complaint.

The first big bet on the mayoralty fuss was registered yesterday. Sanitary Trustee Thomas Sullivan put up $1,500 against Frank Carroll's $1,000. Sullivan took the Sweitzer end and Carroll the Harrison end. Appellate Court Clerk James McInerney was in the betting mood, but he refused an even money proposition. Sweitzer's folk at headquarters think the odds asked by some of the Harrison plungers is significant.

No changes were made in the relative standing of the contestants in the Eleventh and Twenty-third senatorial districts in the recount of the ballots. The canvassing committees adjourned until tomorrow. They will finish this week. Both Austin in the Twenty-third district and Baldwin in the Eleventh, Republicans, have forged far ahead of Strauss and Byrne, Democratic rivals, in the recount thus far.

William Hale Thompson, addressing business and professional men at one of his rallies, pleaded for team work for Chicago. "If I am elected mayor of Chicago," he said, "I want to say that I shall be responsible to the business men and the voters of Chicago and not to any clique or coterie. I am not making any political deals."

The retort of the Sweitzer managers to Mayor Harrison's declaration that personal and family pride impelled him to seek the nomination again is that one other great character in history had the same idea and he was the famed Pooh Bah in "The Mikado."

The Southeastern Thirtieth ward Democratic club will give a reception and ball next Friday night in Boulevard hall, Fifty-fifth and Halsted streets. Patrick E. Britt and Laura Virginia Geigel will lead the grand march.

The Twenty-eighth ward Democratic organization has undertaken to aid the unemployed of the ward in getting them civil service jobs. They are furnishing information as to all civil service examinations and urging the unemployed to take the examinations.

Twenty-five Chicago salesmen wired Robert M. Sweitzer from Houston, Texas, that they would be home to vote for him on primary day, business or no business.

City Gets 28 New Police.

Twenty-eight probationary patrolmen were transferred from the police school of instruction to various stations yesterday.

NEW JUDGE FOR FACTORY CASES

Consumers' League Induces Olson to Make Change of Court.

PAST ACTS CONDEMNED.

A different Municipal court judge will handle cases of factory law violations from now on, according to Miss Elsa Wertheim, secretary of the Consumers' league, which met yesterday in the Lake View building. The league has had a committee attending the hearing of all such cases, and the committee came to the conclusion that the decisions of the court carried an insufficient amount of "humanity" with them.

The women went to Judge Harry Olson, according to Miss Wertheim, who promised a different judge over those cases.

"When the present judge first took these cases," said Miss Wertheim, "he was not acquainted with the law in regard to them. When he learned the law, we found he was not willing to consider the cases from the humanity standpoint.

"For instance, the proprietor of a large, high class photographic studio was arrested on a charge of working eight girls eleven and one-half hours a day for a week. He said he did not know there was a ten hour law, although practically every Greek fruit merchant, every foreigner who has been brought to court on the ten hour law, has admitted he knew the law.

"The judge fined this man the minimum fine and deducted the court costs. The offense really called for fifty-six fines. It will pay this photographer to overwork his girls again. The fine was not enough to impress him with the seriousness of the matter.

"A contractor was arrested charged with failing to install certain safeguards in the school building he was erecting, with the result that three men were hurt. The firm is one which gets many city jobs. The contractor pleaded guilty, but suggested the case be directed against the secretary of the company instead of the foreman. The secretary is said to be a friend of Mayor Harrison, and I have seen their names together frequently in the newspapers. The judge then dismissed the case."

G. O. P. TO FIGHT ON TARIFF ISSUE, ASPIRANTS SAY

Two Michigan Presidential Possibilities Favor Change in Schedules.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Michigan appears to have a larger aggregation of possible Republican candidates for president than any other state at the present writing. The topliners are:

Representative Edward L. Hamilton, progressive Republican.

Senator William Alden Smith, conservative Republican.

Senator Charles E. Townsend, middle of the road Republican.

The indications are that there will be a spirited contest in Michigan between the progressive and conservative Republicans for control of the delegation to the national convention and the naming of the state's "favorite son" for the nomination. It transpired here during the week that the progressive Republicans are starting a boom for Congressman Hamilton with a view of combating Senator Smith's aspirations.

Expert on Tariff.

Mr. Hamilton is completing his eighteenth year of service in the house and is one of the acknowledged leaders on the Republican side. He is an expert on the tariff question and for that reason alone, his friends say, he would make an ideal candidate for the presidency in a campaign which Republicans generally believe will turn upon the tariff issue.

In view of the uncovering of the boom for Mr. Hamilton, THE TRIBUNE correspondent asked the congressman to give his views on public questions.

"The Democratic party went into power in 1912 through a division in the Republican party on a platform declaring that protection was the unconstitutional cause of high prices, which the Democrats said they were going to reduce 'by legislation that would not injure or destroy any legitimate industry,'" he responded.

"The new tariff law went into effect on Oct. 4, 1913, and from that time on there was a falling off of revenue derived from importations until on Sept. 4 the president came before congress and asked that an additional tax be levied upon the people to raise $100,000,000.

"The president attributed the falling off of revenue to the falling off of importations caused by the war in Europe, but the war in Europe had been in progress then only a month, and the importations for eleven months under the new tariff law had exceeded the importations for the same months the year before by more than $93,000,000.

"The falling off of revenue then was not due to decreased importations, but was due to decreased duties drawn from increased importations, 62 per cent of which were free, and was the logical result of a policy which by low duties or no duties deliberately invited foreign nations which contribute nothing to the maintenance of our institutions and which protect their markets against us to participate in our home market.

Record Congressional Appropriation

"Another reason why our revenues, derived from importations, plus internal revenues, income taxes, corporation taxes, and miscellaneous receipts, are not sufficient to pay the running expenses of the government is that the appropriations of this congress have been greater than the appropriations of any congress since the foundation of our government, notwithstanding the pledges of the last Democratic platform to reduce appropriations.

"A Mexican policy which intervenes and yet does not intervene, which takes sides and yet does not take sides, which no one understands, because there is no policy to understand, and profligate expenditures in flagrant disregard of promises of economy helped to turn the tide of public opinion in favor of the Republican party as the only party capable of dealing with national problems in a practical way.

"The people are tired of psychology, tired of theory, tired of free trade, and tired of hard times."

No Reorganization Needed.

"Has the Republican party been reorganized?" he was asked.

"The rank and file of the Republican party needed no reorganization," Mr Hamilton replied. "For two generations of the most progressive years in our history the Republican party has had the confidence of the American people because it has represented the purposes and ideals of a majority of the people.

"The change of certain convention methods and the return of thousands of Republicans to their old affiliations demonstrate the power and purpose of the Republican party within itself to make itself responsive to the aspirations of the elements which compose it."

Asked wherein he thinks the Democratic administration has failed, the congressman said:

"It has failed, among other reasons, because the conviction has forced itself upon the public mind that this so-called competitive tariff does not mean competition among Americans for American markets, does not mean more business for American business men and American labor, does not mean better markets for American farmers, but does mean competition among foreigners for American markets at prices which mean low wages to American labor; does mean discrimination against American farmers; does mean the lowering of the standard of American citizenship, and does mean hard times for everybody."

Present Vital Problems.

"What are the vital problems of government now before the people?" was another question.

"A new tariff, framed for the protection of American labor and American industry, with duties levied to equal the difference in cost of production at home and abroad," Mr. Hamilton asserted. "The restoration of public confidence, the Mexican problem, and the protection of American interests in connection therewith; the Philippine problem, involving the finishing with honor to ourselves of the task we set ourselves to perform of establishing a stable government in the Philippines; the avoidance of entanglement in the Euorpean conflict by all means consistent with our national honor and self-respect; safety at sea; the survey and charting of our coasts; sensible economy in governmental expenditures and proper national defense.

Prosperity to Be Issue.

Prosperity—plain old fashioned prosperity—is to be the dominant issue in the national campaign of 1916. So declared Senator Townsend of Michigan today. Neither the Mexican situation nor the European war nor any other problem of domestic or international affairs, in his opinion, will compare in interest with the demand for "better times" on the part of the mass of voters.

"The trend of all political events is toward that one line of action next year," he said. "I believe that the Republican party will neither follow the extreme and almost fanatical radicalism of those who call themselves radical progressives, nor will it on the other hand align itself under the banner of so-called reactionaries or extreme conservatives. Instead, it will, as it has always done when it has won a battle, take a middle course devoted to the restoration of true prosperity.

"This course involves a program which may be pretty clearly defined today. In the first place, we must adopt a strong conservation policy, learning properly to use the natural resources of the country.

"Then we must make this government of ours an efficient business proposition. President Taft undertook to do that when he sought to eliminate waste and inefficiency in the service. We must develop the work he began.

"We must, of course, restore the protective tariff, accompanied, in my judgment, by a tariff commission which shall determine the difference in cost of production of articles at home and abroad.

"As for government ownership, I do not believe that the Republicans will ever favor government ownership of anything that can be done by individuals. That is not Republican government; it is paternalistic and impracticable at best."

KENYON OUT TO PROCURE U. S. A BUDGET SYSTEM

Starts Fight to Have a Joint Commission Named to Work Up Plan.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special.]—Senator Kenyon of Iowa announced today that he would make a fight in the new congress for the creation of a joint commission of the two houses to study and report upon a responsible budget system for the national government.

He said he believed at least $100,000,000 annually could be saved to the treasury, and the time of congress could be given to more important issues of national legislation, if a budget could be worked out by a competent authority in the administrative branch of the government before the appropriations were submitted to the lawmaking body.

For a Business Basis.

"I have determined to begin the fight to put our handling of great national appropriations on a sane business basis," said Senator Kenyon. "When the new congress meets I shall submit a proposal that a joint committee—made up of not more than three members of each house—shall take up the problem at once. No one thing so demoralizes our government as the continual scramble by the members of the house and senate for appropriations of funds for their respective constituencies.

"Nobody appears to care what happens to the needs of other sections until their own are attended to. The result must necessarily be chaotic and injurious to every sense of orderly development of national interests.

"We must deal with this situation. We must study the budget systems of other governments and the financial methods available from all sources until we find a plan of dealing with our annual appropriations with a businesslike efficiency. President Taft saw the extravagance and unfitness of the old method and he appointed a commission to study economy and efficiency in the public service, but that was not the thing that most needed attention.

Task One for Congress.

"Congress, which makes the appropriations, must itself dispose of the method by which these appropriations shall come to it, and it must save its own time by reducing the amount of discussion now given in the house and senate to appropriation bills. In other words, it is wholly a matter for study and legislation by congress.

"No man could do a bigger thing during his term of service here than make the budget system a reality. It would be a patriotic service if it were now practicable for some one to go to Europe and examine carefully the means by which the finance ministers of European governments are enabled to present the financial needs of their ministries, as a whole. We should be informed upon all the details of the British system, for instance.

"Congress should be made to see that the heads of the several administrative departments can work out the estimates for their departments with a sense of full responsibility to all of the other departments; that these department heads can then, in cabinet council, harmonize their estimates and agree upon a general scheme of appropriations, to be presented by one member of the cabinet.

Economy Will Be Shown.

"Congress should be convinced after that of the economy of its own time that will be effected by having a single financial demand made upon it by the administration for the various branches of the government. If that demonstration is made by a joint congressional commission we shall get a budget system.

"I will say, rather, that we have got to have a responsible budget system whether we want it or not. Look at the condition in the senate today. Here we have been wasting day after day in fighting over a general measure of legislation and all of the big supply bills are held back. The very passage at this session is in danger. The work of the departments for the coming year cannot be properly planned while the fate of the appropriations is in doubt.

Sees $100,000,000 Saved Yearly.

"How much in money could be saved to the government if we quit this pulling and hauling and grabbing for appropriations through a dozen committees of congress? Well, I should say it would not be less than $100,000,000 a year. There are navy yards, for instance, where the water is too shallow for any use. We would soon get rid of them. There are army posts in more than one state utterly worthless to the military establishment of the country. When I mentioned that fact to one senator a while ago he accused me of referring to an army post in his own state in the far west. I agreed that I had that particular fort in mind. He answered that there was a fort in Iowa, too. I answered that the post in Iowa was no better—all of that class were an extravagance and ought to be done away with in order that the money spent on them each year might be put to better purposes. That is merely an illustration of what is true of many departments.

"We shall get rid of this impossible system of appropriations. I do not know how long it will take to do it, but you can be sure I am going at the first steps when the new congress convenes."

TEACHERS AT SHOW HIDE LIQUOR "ADS" ON CURTAIN.

REYNOLDSVILLE, Pa.—Three hundred and fifty teachers attending the Jefferson county teachers' institute instituted a vigorous campaign against the liquor traffic in a theater here.

After becoming enthusiastic over local option at their meeting the teachers attended a performance at a theater. Before they would allow the show to go on, however, several climbed to the stage and pinned several yards of cloth over the liquor advertisements on the stage curtain.

When the officials of the theater removed the cloth the teachers were indignant and immediately "retacked" the covers over the ads.

TRANSFUSES BY NEW PROCESS

Doctor Uses Citrate of Sodium to Prevent Blood. Coagulation.

NEW YORK.—Dr. Richard Lewisohn of this city announces in the Medical Record that he has found a new and simplified method of blood transfusion.

He declares that the reason that blood transfusion has been so complicated is that the vital fluid coagulates so quickly outside the body. To counteract this tendency he uses a small quantity of citrate of sodium. Experiments made in transfusing the blood of animals from one to another showed that the citrate had no ill effect.

"I used for the transfusions," writes Dr. Lewisohn, "the simplest outfit imaginable. I did not use large syringes because they are expensive, break easily, and are entirely unnecessary for our purpose. I simply allowed the blood to run through an ordinary cannula into a glass jar containing five cubic centimeters of the 10 per cent sodium citrate solution. While the blood was running into the glass jar it was stirred with a glass rod to effect a good mixture of the blood and the citrate solution.

"The blood was then poured into an ordinary glass funnel, which was connected with the other cannula by a piece of rubber tubing. The whole procedure took about five minutes. I have used the method on two patients without any untoward symptoms."

The physician says that after his experiments were begun Dr. R. Weil reported to the Academy of Medicine that sodium citrate had been used at the General Memorial hospital by him.

GRAPE MEN WANT STATE TO CONTROL THE SALOONS.

SACRAMENTO, Cal.—The Grape Growers' Protective association bill proposing to take control of the liquor traffic from city and county authorities and place it in the hands of the state government has been introduced in the assembly by Assemblyman Bruck, a grape grower of Napa.

The bill makes radical changes in the liquor laws of the state and proposes to carry out the promise made by the "wets" in the recent prohibition campaign that there would be a "cleanup" if the state defeated prohibition.

The bill calls for a state excise commission of three members to be named by the governor, each receiving $4,000 a year, with eight district commissions of three $3,000 commissioners to handle the liquor regulations. Saloons will be limited to one to each 500 population.

Bar licenses will be $1,000 a year, with 10 per cent for the state and 90 per cent for the city or county.

ASSERTS MRS. CROKER IS NOT INDIAN PRINCESS

NEODESHA, Kas.—Mrs. Pearl Perrin of Los Angeles, who denies the claims of Mrs. Richard Croker that she is the Princess Sequoyah, descendant of the highest chief of the Cherokee Indians, was a former resident of Neodesha and she often contended while here that she was an Indian princess.

Mrs. Perrin was formerly Miss Pearl McClelland of Claremore Okla., and moved to this city with her parents fifteen years ago. She eloped with and married Ed Land of a well known family, but was later divorced and obtained the custody of their one child. She afterward married Arthur Perrin, a Frisco conductor, and lived with him at Seattle, where he was killed in an engine explosion.

Mrs. Perrin recently moved to Los Angeles from Seattle. She is a very attractive woman and possesses sufficient Indian features to be noticeable.

The modern Gasparillas annually capture the city of Tampa and for five days turn it over to unrestrained merry-making of the clean but fantastic kind so fitting in the delightful climate of Florida.

Rivalling in many respects the famous Mardi Gras of New Orleans, the Gasparilla Carnival at Tampa, Florida, is the social and amusement event of the winter season in the Southeast.

Gasparilla was a legendary pirate bold, who, according to tradition, sailed the Spanish Main with his buccaneers, retiring to secluded harbors on the Gulf Coast in the vicinity of Tampa at intervals to dispose of their loot.

ONE MEMBER ILL; O'HARA CONTROLS ILLINOIS SENATE

Stewart Forced to Quit Duties and Lieutenant Governor Has Deciding Vote.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Lieut. Gov. Barratt O'Hara, armed with his constitutional powers and his little gavel, promises to be the dominant personal factor in running the affairs of the present legislature. His sudden leap into the limelight is the result of news from Aurora that Senator Thomas B. Stewart, Republican, has been forced by ill health to quit his duties as a senator and has started for California.

Even with the probable seating of the two Republicans from the Oak Park and Englewood districts, when the cases are finally decided, the absence of Senator Stewart divides the senate equally, twenty-five Democrats and twenty-five Republicans.

The lieutenant governor thereby becomes the king bee, with the power of voting upon all ties, except that of giving the twenty-sixth vote necessary for constitutional majority to pass a bill.

Means Bipartisan Combination.

The direct result of this sudden and wholly unexpected change in the situation in the senate probably will be a consummation next week of the much threatened combination between a big majority of the Republicans and of at least ten of the Democrats.

Fear of gavel rule and domination of senate affairs by the lieutenant governor will be put forward as the reason for such a combination. As a matter of fact, it has been on the fire for several weeks awaiting a propitious moment for springing it.

This combination will support for president pro tem. some other than Senator Canaday, who claims the post under the decision of Attorney General Lucey. It may cause the overturn of the present Democratic organization of the senate and the reëstablishment of James H. Paddock of Springfield as secretary of the senate, including a Republican-Progressive-Democratic cut off of the committee chairmanships and the elimination of anti-Sullivan Democrats from any degree of control.

Admit Austin Will Get Seat.

Senators fresh from Chicago today admitted that there is no chance to keep Austin, Republican, from his seat in the Oak Park district. They say that there is a bare possibility that Byrne, Democrat, can be seated if enough ballots can be put in question to warrant long drawn out arguments before the elections committee and later before the senate.

It is surmised that the Democrats will fight for time. They will contend Tuesday, it is reported, that no ballots can be counted this week because of a meeting of the Illinois commission to the San Francisco exposition to be held Wednesday here and the Lincoln centennial banquet Friday night, at which the legislature will be the invited guests of the Springfield Commercial association.

The general assembly enters the sixth week of its session. Not a wheel has been turned. Not a committee has been appointed in the senate or in the house. A solitary bill—Senator Curtis' measure for a million dollar appropriation on the foot and mouth disease affair—languished on second reading with advancement refused two weeks ago by the Democrats.

Employes Work Without Pay.

Gov. Dunne's biennial message, prepared on New Year's day, has not been presented to the two houses because they are unorganized. The joint session to canvass the November vote has not been held and State Treasurer-elect Andrew Russel cools his heels in the state house corridors waiting to be sworn in.

House members have been unable to draw their pay because they have no speaker to O. K. the pay roll. The temporary employés, clerks, stenographers, janitors, and elevator men have been working for five weeks without pay.

Succeeds Sumner as Dean at St. Paul's.

THE REV. WALTER S. POND

POND SUCCEEDS SUMNER AS DEAN

The Rev. Walter S. Pond is the newly appointed successor of Bishop Walter T. Sumner of Oregon as dean of the Protestant Episcopal cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul at West Washington and North Peoria streets. The appointment was announced yesterday by Bishop Charles P. Anderson.

Dean Pond will enter up his duties March 1. His position carries with it the superintendency of the city missionary work of the diocese.

Trained for the Service.

For two or more years Dean Pond has been priest in charge of Holty Trinity and St. Philip's mission churches at South Hamilton avenue and West Thirty-sixth street. His training for service in the church includes experience as a choir boy, acolyte, Sunday school teacher, and lay reader. He took a special course in sociology under Prof. Charles R. Henderson of the University of Chicago and he has been superintendent of Chase house in the stock yards district.

Born in Aurora.

Dean Pond was born in Aurora, Ill., thirty-one years ago. He came to Chicago when a boy. He was graduated from Shattuck military school at Faribault, Minn., in 1905 and from the University of Chicago in 1908. He was associated for five years with Bishop Herman Page on the staff of St. Paul's church, Dorchester avenue and Fiftieth street. While a student he founded St. Jude's church at Ninetieth street and Exchange avenue.

TWENTY YEAR "BRAIN TAB" TRUER THAN BOOKKEEPING.

NEW YORK.—When Philip O'Day, a coal dealer of Brooklyn, died, it was found that for nearly twenty years he had kept complete tally of his business in his head.

He had not the slightest knowledge of arithmetic, as taught, but according to his own methods was able to remember who owed him and whom he owed, down to a cent.

His sons associated with him in the business, kept a private account book, but after their father had passed away they found his memory was even better than their book. For they had neglected putting down certain sums the old merchant had reported to them.

INDIANA TRIES EXTRA SESSION TO SPEED LAWS

House Holds Saturday Meeting, but Is Swamped with Bills.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The first Saturday session of the present legislature was held today. Speaker Bedwell was responsible for the session, which was practically forced on a majority of the representatives, who favored adjournment until Monday afternoon.

The desire of many representatives to hold no meeting Monday morning was also sidetracked by the speaker and Democratic leader, John C. Branaman, when a motion to reconvene Monday morning was railroaded through despite vigorous protests.

Despite efforts to catch up with the work in the house more bills were introduced than were disposed of. Thirteen new bills were introduced, five were passed, and six were killed.

Salaries of Prosecutors.

A measure of general interest was introduced by Representative Newman T. Miller of Kokomo, providing that the salaries of prosecuting attorneys in counties having a population less than 33,000 should be $1,500 a year in addition to one-fourth of the total amount of fees collected. The remaining three-fourths of the fees should be turned over to the county treasurers.

The same bill contained another provision relating to the salaries of the prosecutors in counties having a population of 33,000 to 71,000, providing that those officials would receive $2,500 a year in addition to one-fourth of the fees collected.

New School Law Introduced.

A bill which provides that any incorporated town with more than 2,000 inhabitants can vote to abolish the school board and turn the management of the schools over to the township trustee, was passed.

The measure also provides that the town may at any time reassume control over its schools in response to a petition by a majority of the voters.

Another bill passed provides that public service corporations may provide water, gas, and electricity to persons outside of incorporated towns where the companies have been granted franchises.

Shorten Key Men's Hours.

A lively debate on a bill to provide that telephone and telegraph operators of railroads with less than one year's experience shall not work more than nine consecutive hours if their services are connected in any manner in directing the movement of trains was a feature of today's house caucus.

Several representatives argued that the measure would work a hardship on railroad companies, but Representative Fred L. Feick declared that the measure should be passed in the interest of public safety and intimated that if railroad lawyers are to fight the bill they should confine their efforts to the senate. The bill was recommitted to the railroad committee.

ARKANSAS "DRY" NEXT JANUARY

HAVE FIGHT ON HANDS.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 6.—Gov. G. W. Hays today signed the state-wide prohibition bill. The measure, as amended and passed by the senate yesterday and passed today by the house, prohibits the granting of further saloon licenses for 1915, but does not disturb those already granted.

Forestalling the effect in Pulaski county, Judge Joe Asher granted the petition of Little Rock saloon men for licenses at 10:30 a. m., forty minutes before the measure was signed by the governor. Fifty saloons opened immediately. They had been closed since Dec. 31.

The granting of the Little Rock licenses, however, will not be passed without a fight, the prohibitionists announced.

Signing of Bill Delayed.

Immediately after the passing of the prohibition bill by the house it was rushed to the governor's office. But the governor was busy, having granted audience to a representative of the liquor men, who was asking that the bill be not signed until the Pine Bluff petitions could be heard by the Jefferson County court.

This interview, aided by a filibuster which had held up the bill several minutes in the house, gave time for the completion of the court hearing.

Not until after the court announced that the saloon licenses had been granted did the bill, already passed, reach the governor.

Bill Introduced Jan. 29.

The Newberry prohibition bill, which became a law today, was introduced in the house Jan. 29 by Representative Farrar Newberry of Clark county, and fifty-two other members of the lower house.

It was read the third time and passed Feb. 1 and on the same day transmitted to the senate. Two days later, on Feb. 3 it was read the first and second time in the upper house. The following day the senate voted to amend the house measure by making the law effective Jan. 1, 1916, instead of June 1, 1915.

Another amendment to submit it to a vote of the people was defeated by two votes. Its passage yesterday was followed by its return to the house and its passing by that body today.

COL. MORRISON OPERATED ON

Born in Chicago When There Were No Hospitals, He's Now in Center of Large District.

When Col. E. W. Morrison was born in Chicago in 1836 there were no hospitals in the city. Yesterday he underwent an operation at the Presbyterian hospital, the center of the largest hospital district in the country. The operation was performed by Dr. David Graham.

Col. Morrison is believed to be the oldest living native of Chicago. He owns the site of the new Hotel Morrison, as well as other valuable downtown real estate.

Though Col. Morrison was in great pain after the operation, his recovery is considered certain. Only members of his family were allowed to see him.

IOWA FIGHT ON LIQUOR TO HAVE CRISIS TUESDAY

Call Issued for Lineup on Move to Withdraw Prohibitory Amendment.

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Twenty-six senators, a majority of the Iowa senate, signed and filed a call today for all members to be present at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday, the hour fixed for consideration of the Francis resolution to withdraw the prohibitory amendment from the committee on constitutional amendments.

This is a move on the part of temperance leaders to force every senator to go on record on the liquor question at that time. Lieut. Gov. Harding informed the senate that the call was improper, as the senate has no right to presuppose that all members will not be present on a future day. If all the members are not here at 10:30 Tuesday, then a call will be in order. Only one-fourth the members are required to make a call effective.

"Wets" Hope for Respite.

Wet leaders hope to defer action despite the fact that a majority signed the call. They will ask that the committee be given two or five days longer in which to agree on a report. They are relying on the support of dry Republicans who resent the leadership of Senator L. E. Francis. Threats are being made that the suffrage amendment will be defeated if the dry leaders insist on immediate action on liquor measures.

Senator J. T. Clarkson, author of the mulct repeal bill, introduced a resolution today to withdraw his bill from the committee on suppression of intemperance. Senator A. C. Savage objected to consideration of the resolution until it has been printed in the journal. Clarkson said he will call up the resolution Monday morning. The bill was among the first to be introduced, but was not even referred to a subcommittee until the last of this week.

Graft Quiz Near End.

The committee investigating Gov. Clarke's charge of graft in the organization of the legislature has completed its preliminary report, which will be filed early next week. It has been found that the governor made an "unhappy choice of words" when he called attention to conditions in the organization of the legislature. Use of the expression "pure unadulterated graft" was found to be "unwarranted."

Had the governor said there was "thoughtless, careless, and gross extravagance" he would have been within proper bounds, in the view of the committee.

Investigations made by the committee showed that a number of needless employés are on the pay rolls. A saving of from "$10,000 to $12,000 a session" can be made if the senate dispenses with employés found not to be needed.

Congress Memorialized.

Congress was memorialized twice and the federal animal husbandry department once by the senate today. The bills giving Col. J. L. Clem rank of major general and appropriating sufficient funds to protect the Mississippi valley from floods were indorsed. The animal husbandry department is asked to reduce the foot and mouth disease quarantine zone from five miles to three miles; to enforce an armed guard quarantine on diseased premises, and to permit shipments of fat stock for slaughter from exposure zones on inspection by federal authorities.

Representative Tucker introduced a bill requiring at least two men to operate street cars. In some of the smaller places one man does the work. Twenty other bills were introduced, but were of minor importance.

Academy Alumnae Receive.

A reception and card party for the benefit of a new addition to Our Lady of Providence academy was held in the Auditorium hotel yesterday by the alumnae association of the academy.

POWER PLANT—NONCO FARMS

To the Readers of The Chicago Tribune: Through an error on the part of this newspaper in failing to correct proof as ordered by the New Orleans Netherlands Co., the advertisement of January 3rd incorrectly announced the withdrawal of NONCO securities from the market January 15th. The Board of Directors of NONCO has not determined as yet on the date of withdrawal of these securities. The Chicago Tribune makes this correction in fairness to its readers and the New Orleans Netherlands Company. The Chicago Tribune.

YOU can be a PART OWNER of the NONCO farm factory—Share in the profits of this modern farm

By investing your savings now in NONCO securities you receive ownership certificates certified by The Chicago Title and Trust Company and share in one-half of the net profits. You are the owner of the acreage. We are your tenants. We have invested hundreds of thousands of dollars in our drainage system, warehouses, employees' quarters, transportation line, farm implements, tractors, etc. We have the most modern farm equipment in the United States constructed and installed with the one sole object of farming the land owned by the certificate holders in this farm. Our Company is officered and managed throughout by Hollanders, the world's most expert farmers. Our profit is one-half of the net crop profits; your profit is an equal amount—one-half. We divide share and share alike—the fairest and safest way for you to invest in farm land.

The Netherlands Company—the operating company—eight of whose nine directors are prominent Hollanders—selected this location for its farm, ten miles from New Orleans, after an exhaustive study of soils, climate and transportation facilities in all parts of the United States. They inspected California, Florida, the Southwest and different other sections. They determined on the present location for the following reasons:

1. Because of the rich soil of the New Orleans Delta built up from the soil wash of the entire Mississippi River drainage basin, reaching from the Dakotas on the west to Pennsylvania on the east. Analysis and production prove it to be the richest soil in the world. It requires no fertilizer.
2. Because the climate here permits of raising crops the year round—three staple crops a year, which also gives permanent employment to the men operating this farm factory. We plow and plant every month in the year. Snow and ice are unknown, so that our soil and our men are at work all the time. There are no idle days to sit around the stove.
3. Because we are only ten miles from one of the largest shipping points in the United States. We are within easy striking distance—less than a thousand miles—of forty million people in the United States. We can ship by ocean steamer to all eastern cities. Our freight rates are the lowest of any southern shipping point, lower than Florida or Texas. Early vegetables reach Chicago and all northern points by direct fast freight over one trunk line and without delays or transfers.
4. Because we have abundant rainfall all the year. Our splendid power plant—the best in the south—controls absolutely any excessive rainfall through our drainage system. Irrigation is not necessary.
5. Because we have an abundant and splendid labor market at New Orleans which amply supplies us with any extra labor required at harvesting times. Our regular labor is composed of Hollanders and skilled mechanics—tractor and transportation men—who are comfortably housed in a large $22,000 clubhouse and pretty bungalows.

Added to these tremendous advantages for operating a big money-making farm—a foodstuff factory—are the fact that transportation from the farm to the railway and steamer terminals is possible by water—the cheapest form of transportation—open the entire year. Also the fact that the feeding and fattening of cattle and hogs can be done here at a minimum owing to the splendid growth of a native alfalfa—pifine—a truly wonderful plant, and the great yield of corn and corn ensilage per acre.

HERE YOU HAVE A BIG PROFIT-MAKER AND ABSOLUTE SAFETY FOR YOUR INVESTMENT

To share in this opportunity—to own an acreage in this wonderful farm—you can stay at home, remain at your present work and on a small payment down and a small monthly payment per month own one or more acres by purchasing our ownership certificates—$125 each—certified by the Chicago Title & Trust Company, with dividend coupons attached.

One of the world's most prominent agriculturists has estimated our net profits—on an annual two-crop basis only—as being 44% per year. This also does not include return from our hog, dairy and canning departments now being installed. Everyone realizes that corporation farming—handled by the same expert and united work as a factory or other industry—with all the facilities for economical planting, cultivating, harvesting and distributing of the products, with representatives in the leading markets, all under the direction of an executive organization, keen and alert as the heads of any other industry, is sure to mean big and steady profits.

On March 2nd we will run a special inspection excursion to New Orleans and the farm. Special rates and accommodations, with a splendid opportunity to visit New Orleans, the great orange groves, the historic Evangeline country, the great NONCO plant—"the world's largest truck farm"—in all a most unique and instructive trip. Do not miss this. Write us for details.

This is your chance. NONCO securities are increasing in value and will increase in price very shortly. Hundreds have and hundreds are inquiring.

Our terms are easy—affording the man with $5 the same opportunity as the man with $5,000 to put his money into this wonderful enterprise.

Your investment will begin earning from the moment that you put it into NONCO. Every one who has taken advantage of this investment offer will thank us heartily a year hence for having offered them this chance in NONCO'S wonderful company.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Three judges of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals listened with profound interest to the plea of a negro attorney, a one-time slave, who appeared before them in the federal building here.

Probably few in the court room realized until he started his argument that a gray haired negro sitting near the front was a noted lawyer who has appeared before every United States judge in the Central district in many famous trials.

The attorney, Turner W. Bell, represented three men who are confined in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kas., serving sentences on convictions of conspiracy in the famous structural iron workers' dynamiting cases two years ago.

Crowd Realize Experience.

Bell fingered his brief as he sat listening to the argument of Assistant United States District Attorney L. S. Harvey of the Eastern district of Kansas, representing the government.

He had spoken but a few words, however, when the crowd knew that such incidents evidently were in the everyday life of the negro lawyer.

The men represented by Bell are white and were given sentence of six years at Indianapolis in December, 1912.

They were convicted of being implicated in more than one hundred dynamiting cases, including the destruction of the Times building, in Los Angeles, in half of the states of the United States. They were at one time officers of the organization of which J. J. McNamara was a member and who is now serving a life sentence in California.

Bell represented the men in the United States District court in Kansas last July and was defeated. He appealed.

Lawyer's Chief Contention.

Bell's chief contention is that the men could legally have been convicted on but one charge under the revised statutes of the United States and that the maximum penalty should have been but two years in the penitentiary or a fine of $10,000. They were charged with having transported dynamite throughout the country and with the blowing up of a bridge at Indianapolis.

Bell has been a practicing attorney in Leavenworth twenty-eight years. His hobby, he said, is appeal cases.

In 1914 he filed sixty-one appeals in the United States courts, and was successful in forty-one of them. In but two cases were his clients negroes.

Bell was born a slave in Tennessee. He was taken with his parents to Oskaloosa, Ia. when young, and earned enough money to carry him through a course in law.

The day he was admitted to the bar at Leavenworth United States Judge Hook was in the courtroom, and Bell considers Judge Hook one of his best friends.

Among famous appeals in which Bell has been successful was the case of Charles A. Stevens, a wealthy negro boy of Kansas City, who stole a mail sack containing $55,800. Stevens' sentence was reduced from ten to five years. As his fee Bell received $13,000.

TO BUILD EMERGENCY SHOPS FOR UNEMPLOYED.

NEW YORK—Elbert H. Gary announced at a meeting of the executive branch of the mayor's committee on unemployment, of which he is chairman, that $115,000 had been raised to establish emergency workshops for unemployed men and women and to form an emergency loan fund. There are now in operation thirty-four emergency shops, it was announced, which, in coöperation with other organizations, offer relief to 3,500 men and women. The plan is to relieve 10,000 persons by giving them five hours a day employment at 15 cents an hour and a lunch for 3 cents.

PLANS TO MAKE DEADWOOD GOOD

PIERRE, S. D.—Deadwood, for years known far and wide as the bad man's town of the Black hills gold mining region, is to be reformed. E. L. Senn, editor of a Deadwood newspaper, has arrived at Pierre to ask the legislature to enact a number of laws which he says are necessary to accomplish a moral regeneration of the city.

His bills are not ready to introduce, and in the meantime he is keeping their nature secret, so that the "antis" may not learn the plan of attack on the wide open policy.

Known as Toughest Town.

Forty years ago Deadwood was known as "the toughest town on earth." At that time it deserved the name and gloried in the reputation. There was a murder every morning and another one or two every night. The graveyard up the hill at White Rocks grew very rapidly and for the first two or three years of the town there were few deaths from natural causes.

Most of the toughness of the early days of gold has gone. Saloons never closed in the old days. The front doors close now at the proper time, but no man need go thirsty in Deadwood. And if he has an inclination to roll the little ivory ball, bet on the card as it comes from the faro box, play draw or stud, or try his chances at about any other game he can find a place in Deadwood where he can be accommodated.

Man with Pistol Supreme.

In the old days there were no office holders in Deadwood. The man with the pistol was the supreme agent. The first event in which office holding figures was the selection of a sheriff and there were very few applicants for that position.

To be sheriff was to antagonize one of the greatest gangs of gun fighters this continent ever saw. Seth Bullock got the job. He is still alive—in fact, he served a term as United States marshal for South Dakota several years ago. The same cannot be said of some of the "two-gun" men who lived in Deadwood. A number of these old time fighters are buried up on the hill.

There was another who essayed the job of clearing up Deadwood. That was the famous "Wild Bill" Hickok. After the mob had finished with "Wild Bill's" murderer he was buried alongside the many others whose boots were not removed after death. But that kind of work has all passed.

BELGIANS GIVE GERMANS THE "SILENT TREATMENT."

BRUSSELS.—"Silent treatment" of the German landsturm in Brussels by the Belgian people is one of the most striking features of the situation. It is spreading even to the children, who turn their heads away or cross the street whenever they see a German soldier approaching.

SAYS WARSHIP FLEET WILL GO TO THE PACIFIC

Administration Denies Hobson's Charge Canal Will Not Be Used.

WASHINGTON.—The following authoritative statement of the naval policy of the administration has been made in answer to the charge of Representative Hobson of Alabama that "Our battleship fleet will never go to the Pacific ocean under the present administration."

"After the fleet passes through the canal and into the Pacific for the Panama-Pacific celebration it will thenceforth remain in the Pacific for a good portion of each year.

"It has not been decided whether it would be advisable to divide the fleet and permanently maintain a strong force in the Pacific.

"Naval officers are inclined to favor keeping the fleet as a single unit, as it now is. But, in any event, it is the intention to make use of the canal to have the fleet frequently visit the Pacific."

Mr. Hobson suggested that the fleet was being kept out of the Pacific to avert the anger of Japan. When he made this statement on the floor of the house Secretary Bryan informed him that this was not true.

The statement adds:

"If the fleet had gone to the Pacific in March, as was at first intended, it would have remained there at least until August. However, Col. Goethals has informed the president that he cannot guarantee a satisfactory passage through the canal for the battleships in March.

"The Japanese question had nothing whatever to do with the decision. It's possible that a greater naval strength would have been permanently maintained in the Pacific, although as to any actual division of the fleet, naval experts are inclined to fear that this would interfere with practices and injure the efficiency of the fleet.

"The fleet should have 30 feet. The canal is now reported to afford passage to vessels drawing 27 feet, but the real difficulty which Col. Goethals has suggested is not that the depth today is insufficient, but that any time a recurrence of the slides may block the channels."

CEMENT SHOW TO OPEN IN CHICAGO WEDNESDAY.

Chicago will be "durability headquarters" for hundreds of road building engineers, state and county highway commissioners and authorities on cement construction from many states, for a period of eight days, beginning next Wednesday. Conferences on good roads achievements and the further utilization of cement in modern farming will take place and addresses will be delivered by national authorities on these subjects.

The Chicago Cement show will open in the Coliseum on Wednesday. Two hundred exhibits, showing a year's progress in permanent architectural and engineering construction, will be on display. The latest model cement paving machines will form a feature. These huge pavers are designed to spread concrete over a roadway forty feet in width.

Cement silos of the latest patterns will be included among the practical attractions and miniature "cement farmyards" will illustrate how the permanent material has invaded every structural feature of rural life.

President Edward M. Hagar has invited Thomas A. Edison to celebrate Feb. 11, the inventor's birthday anniversary, at the cement show. In honor of Mr. Edison's accomplishments in designing fireproof concrete buildings next Thursday will be named "Edison day" by the management.

BABY SENT IN SUITCASE DETROIT TO CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI.—A baby boy a few weeks old is being cared for at the Cincinnati hospital while city detectives are searching two states for its parents.

The baby was found in a suitcase on a doorstep in the rear of the Children's home, Ninth and Plum streets. A hole had been cut in the top of the suitcase to admit air. Two marks on the suitcase are being used by the police as clews.

On the end of the case was an American Express company tag of the Detroit office, showing the case had been shipped from Detroit. The name of "William Smith" was written with a lead pencil on the tag. The police believe the name may be that of the express agent at Detroit who handled the suitcase in transit or the shipper's.

TERRE HAUTE OFFICIALS' TRIAL BEGINS MARCH 8.

INDIANAPOLIS.—The trial of Donn M. Roberts, mayor of Terre Haute, and twenty-six others, who were indicted on charges of conspiracy to corrupt the election of Nov. 3, 1914, is to begin March 8. Judge A. B. Anderson in the United States District court here recently overruled the demurrer which had been filed in their behalf. He held that the federal government has jurisdiction over election machinery.

BRITISH SOLDIERS HAVE VOICES "GRAMOPHONED."

LONDON.—There used to be an old semi-military song in which the phrase, "Leave me a photograph—don't forget a photograph," occurred frequently. It was supposed to be sung by a soldier's sweetheart who was seeing him off to the wars.

Now, however, our soldiermen have discovered a new kind of souvenir to leave behind them with their loved ones.

A man with great experience in the gramophone and talking machine business declares that the idea originated with a soldier who heard a record made by the late Dan Leno, or some other singer of the past, and wished in case he should die in his country's cause to place his own voice on record for his family.

Most of the soldiers who have their voices "gramophoned" like to sing a verse and chorus. Some sing quite well. Such songs as "Annie Laurie," "The Old Folks at Home," "Tipperary," and "Dolly Gray" are popularly chosen.

Others who are reciters venture small essays in rhetoric or poetry. Such a verse as "Laugh and the world laughs with you" is very popular.

But not a few soldiers speak private messages into the gramophone.

ALTERATIONS MADE WITHOUT CHARGE

Help us to "down"——
——the PADDED Price-List

A GREAT Industry is threatened with Self-destruction!

More than 5000 Auto-Accessory Dealers, with some 25,000 Agents, Garages and Repair Shops, who retail Tires in U. S., are permitting a Vicious and Out-of-Date Custom to undermine Public Confidence in their Business.

This growing Want-of-Confidence is demonstrated by the growing number of Cut-price "Specialists"—as well as by the banding together of Consumers to buy Tires and other Auto-Accessories, direct from the Makers, at Normal Prices.

In practically no other line of business must this latter kind of Competition be met by Retail Dealers, in America.

The Merchant who sells Hats, Shoes or Clothes would, for instance, bitterly resent any Association undertaking arrangements to supply at supposedly Wholesale prices, the Merchandise he must make a Retail profit out of or close up his store.

But, that same Merchant will combine with others to de-price his neighbors—the Tire and Accessory Retailers—of the profits they must make a living out of or close up Shop.

Why this difference in the ATTITUDE OF THE PUBLIC toward the Tire and Auto-Accessory Retailer?

Because of—the PADDED Price-List!

THE day has gone by when the Public can be successfully and continuously bamboozled.

The average American hates, above all things, to have something "put over on him" when he isn't looking.

He resents the enormous retail profits that Tire and Accessory Price-Lists have too generally been printed UP to seemingly show.

He dislikes to find out that while one dealer may have given him a 5% Discount off the Make of Tire he favors, another Dealer would have offered him 10% off, and that one of his Friends secured 12½% off the self-same Tire and Makers' Price-List, elsewhere.

He wonders what the bottom price would be, if he had Time enough to go around the Dealers' Stores and haggle for it.

He concludes that there MUST be "outrageous" retail profits charged on Tires, when so many Dealers can so generally cut the List-Prices 5%, 10%, 12½% and even 20%, while still making profit enough to pay rent.

So—he Shops around, from Dealer to Dealer, at great loss of Time to himself, and increased selling Cost to the Dealer, ultimately perhaps listening to the Siren-Song of a Consumer Supply Dept. chiefly to protect himself against SUPPOSED EXTORTION.

But—he does this neither willingly nor maliciously.

HE knows that it is a great convenience to Autoists to find Auto-Accessory Stores, Garages, and Repair Shops, all over the Country, from which he can secure the Tire he wants, when he wants it, without waiting, Telegraphing, or Long-distance Telephoning.

He knows these Retail Dealers could not maintain Stocks, for his immediate use, without the patronage of Autoists.

He knows that there is only a relatively limited demand for Tires, among the population of a Neighborhood, and that if he, and his Neighbors who own Automobiles, do not patronize the local Tire Dealers there would soon be no Tire Dealers in that Neighborhood to patronize.

Therefore—he only buys from Sources antagonistic to the interests of the legitimate Dealer, when he feels compelled to do so, and because he resents the APPARENTLY "Extortionate Charges" of the average Tire Retailer.

Because, a busy Man resents the need for Haggling, Bargaining, and Shopping-around among different Dealers, Garages, or Repair Concerns, in order to obtain the Tire he wants, at a FAIR price, and as low as his Friends have bought it.

He would not deal at a Dept. Store, a Tailor's, Hatter's or Shoe Store, which had several prices for the same article—requiring "haggling" to get value.

So why should he want to deal at the Store of a Tire-Retailer who requires the same sort of Lost-Motion, Lost-Time and Dissatisfaction?

He doesn't.

The B. F. Goodrich Co.'s Rubber Factory, at Akron, O., is the largest in the World, producing more than 90,000,000 lbs. of Rubber Goods yearly.

Without the Convenience and Facility which Tire Retailers' Stores afford the Public, increase in Tire Sales must be hampered, and made unsatisfactory to both Manufacturer and Consumer.

Therefore WE always have, and always WILL, do our best to foster the best interests of Tire Retailers.

That is why we now tell the Public that it is NOT the Tire Retailers who are chiefly responsible, or chiefly to blame, for the seemingly Extortionate profits quoted on Tires generally at "Price-List" figures.

The Public therefore assumes that these Price-Lists are the Makers' bona fide Valuation, to Consumers, of the Tires they cover.

The Public assumes that practically all reputable Tire Manufacturers base the Wholesale price of their Tires upon what it costs to make them,

Compare these Goodrich "Fair-List" prices, showing tremendous reductions with prices you have previously paid. For instance, old price on Goodrich 34x4, Smooth Tread, $24.35. Present "Fair-List" price, $19.40. Ask your dealer for Users' Net Price List, showing prices on all sizes.

SIZE	PLAIN TREAD	SIZE	SAFETY TREAD
30 x 3	$9.00	30 x 3	$9.45
30 x 3½	11.60	30 x 3½	12.20
32 x 3½	13.35	32 x 3½	14.00
33 x 4	19.05	33 x 4	20.00
34 x 4	19.40	34 x 4	20.35
37 x 5	32.30	37 x 5	33.90

and then print the Retail price at a FAIR profit on that, for the Retailer—at a figure for which the Tire will, in their judgment, render "Value Received" to the Consumer.

This conception covers what ought to exist but, too generally, does not exist in the Tire Manufacturing field.

A LARGE number of Tire Manufacturers purposely put Retail figures on their Price-Lists that Retailers are not EXPECTED to obtain for the product there listed.

These Padded Price-Lists are printed UP, so the Dealer can offer a LARGER Discount OFF "the List-Price" than if the Tires had been FAIRLY priced at the beginning.

This is an attempt to trade on the "Bargain-hunting" spirit—instead of on a VALUE basis.

So many Tire Manufacturers adopted the PADDED Price-List System of selling Tires to Retailers (on the claim that Retailers could sell more Tires by offering large DISCOUNTS off Price-Lists) that practically all other Price-Lists became infected, too.

Responsible Tire Manufacturers insidiously "contracted the Habit" of pricing UP their Tires, so the Dealer would still have a profit after meeting the Discounts of the original "Discount Specialty" Manufacturers.

Now the Tire Retailer, especially in large Centres, having established the CUSTOM of discounting "Padded Price-Lists" thinks the public expects it of him to discount other Tire Price-Lists as well.

He has thus placed himself in such a false position toward his customers that he cannot do justice to the best (non-discount) Tires and, because his Customers being supplied through other Sources than that of the Legitimate Dealer, he finds his Trade slipping away from him.

This condition PROMPTS us to RISK a Bold Move, in a determined attempt to check the Suicidal Tendency referred to.

Here's our Move.

On 34 x 4 Plain-Tread Tires, these Price-Lists are printed to show prices (to Consumers) of $24.35, up to more than $32.00, with 10 intermediate prices.

The Retail Profits (over Net-Cost-To-Dealer), on these 15 Makes of Plain Treads, range from 30% up to more than 55%—up to $11.00—per Tire in some cases.

But, they do expect, by offering big, and maybe progressively-increased, Discounts off Padded Price-Lists, to receive a larger profit than if the same Tire was FAIRLY priced at the beginning.

Whether that "Game" succeeds or not will, in future, depend upon YOU—Mr. Tire-User.

Because—

—The B. F. Goodrich Co. will not have anything to do with the CUSTOM of padding Price-Lists, and will now fight it to a finish.

Their Tires will be dependably priced, by the Makers, at figures which will insure to Tire-Users the Maximum Mileage, per-what they cost Consumers.

The margin of Profit to the Retailer—under the dependable GOODRICH Price-list—will be FAIR, more than the averages now on Tires generally (under current Price-Cutting and Discounting conditions) but less, by far, than Padded Price-Lists make it possible for him to occasionally secure from Easy Buyers.

When—under these circumstances—a conscientious and far-sighted Dealer advises You—Mr. Auto-Owner—to buy GOODRICH Tires, you can reliably feel that he is a safe Man to do Business with—intends to give you the maximum Value for your Money—and rightfully expects you to come back again for more Tires and Accessories when you need them.

By dealing with that kind of Dealer you help US to Put "down" the Padded Price-List imposition on Tire Users.

Will you thus help along your own interests?

DUNNE WOULD WORK IDLE ON BIG WATERWAY

COST WILL BE $3,075,000.

"Put the unemployed to work on the Illinois waterway," was the keynote of an address given by Gov. Edward F. Dunne last night at the Elks' banquet in the Congress hotel.

The governor said he had recommended to the legislature the authorization of a $3,500,000 bond issue for the purpose of building a waterway to connect the great lakes with the gulf of Mexico. The expenditure of this money, he asserted would build a dam and locks in the Illinois river and thus open a waterway between Joliet and La Salle, the only portion of the larger waterway that is not now navigable.

The recommendation of the governor was based on a personal trip of inspection and reports of three engineers. He asserted the accomplishment of the project would give work to the unemployed, reduce freight rates, and stimulate commerce in the middle west.

Text of Governor's Speech.

The governor said, in part:

"One of the most important problems confronting modern society is the problem of the unemployed.

"At the present time, and during every winter in the large cities of the nation many men and women are found to be out of work. I believe that the state of Illinois is at the present time in a condition to relieve much of this distress, and at the same time carry out a great public improvement, which is absolutely necessary and essential to the further development of this state.

"Between Chicago and Joliet we have a great waterway, the sanitary district canal, fourteen feet in depth and with an enormous capacity for commerce. Between Joliet and La Salle for sixty-five miles we have a waterway available only to prehistoric canal boats drawing four feet of water. Between La Salle and Grafton, where the Illinois river enters into the Mississippi river, we have a splendid waterway.

The Only Obstacle.

"The only obstacle to a tremendous waterway commerce between Chicago and the great lakes and the Gulf of Mexico is the sixty-five miles of inadequate and undeveloped waterway between Joliet and La Salle, which acts as a stone wall in the way of commerce.

"Such being the situation, I traveled on a barge down the old Illinois and Michigan canal from Joliet to La Salle last summer, and invited four eminent and experienced engineers to accompany me on the trip.

"The engineers agreed, in a written report to me, that a dam could be built across the Illinois river at Starved Rock, near La Salle, and by the construction of certain locks in the Illinois river and in a portion of the old canal that a waterway could be successfully completed between Joliet and La Salle eight feet in depth, at a cost of about $3,075,000.

Can Complete in Two Years.

"This project they reported could be completed within two years at this moderate cost, and I have, therefore, recommended to the legislature the passage of a bill authorizing a bond issue of not to exceed $3,500,000 for the furtherance of this sane and sensible project.

"The Panama canal is open to the commerce of the world. New Orleans is 1,500 miles nearer to the canal than New York, Boston, or any other of the eastern seaports. Since the opening of the Panama canal freight rates between New York and San Francisco by waterway are found to be considerably cheaper than rail rates across the continent.

"As a result the transcontinental railroads have been compelled to cut their rates, but in cutting these rates they have confined the cuts to the territory east of the Alleghenies and west of the Rocky mountains, leaving the rates for the great Mississippi valley undisturbed. The rates in the Mississippi valley have not been lowered because we have no competition from waterways.

Gives Cheaper Rates.

"If the sixty-five miles of waterway between Joliet and La Salle were finished and open to commerce we then could transport our merchandise from the great lakes to the gulf and get even better waterway rates than now prevail between New York and San Francisco.

"In my judgment, with such opportunities before us, to fail to take advantage of them is almost criminal. In view of the fact that thousands of men are out of employment and that this work is so easy of accomplishment and can be completed at such a moderate cost within the next two years, I therefore urge with all the emphasis of which I am capable that now is the time and now is the opportunity for the development by our great state of this waterway and that it would not only give employment to the unemployed at present but that its completion will furnish opportunities for future employment in the commerce that will inevitably develop as the immediate result thereof."

SIX DIE IN MINE EXPLOSION.

Fayetteville, W. Va., Feb. 6.—Six miners were killed and 167 escaped death in an explosion in the Carlisle mine of the New River Coal company today. That so many men escaped after being entombed was due to the fact that cage and shaft were not damaged. While many were brought out by the cage, some managed to climb out through the air shafts. The explosion is believed to have been due to the ignition of a pocket of gas from a miner's lamp.

1915 BATHING SUIT

A final rehearsal of the models who will wear the gowns in the fashion show, which will open in the First regiment armory tomorrow evening, was held yesterday afternoon. Many of the gowns are the work of Chicago designers. Among them will be a unique creation, the Liberty bell or lamp shape gown, designed by the Hill Garment company, also the designers of novelties in bathing suits. A wedding gown will be exhibited by Pacyma and Jaspere, another Chicago company, which will be given away to any bride who will be married at the armory during the show. The gown is a Jaspere creation in white imperial satin, and it includes a wreath and veil. The waist is of Venetian lace.

O. K. PLAN TO LET IDLE TILL LOTS

Many Phone Municipal Director Calley, in Charge of Jobless Relief.

If you have a vacant lot, send your name to "The Tribune." The municipal director of unemployment wants to give deserving men employment, cut the high cost of living, and beautify the city. "The Tribune" will forward to Director James W. Calley the names of lot owners who desire to help Chicago and its people.

James W. Calley, municipal director of unemployment, received wide commendation of the plan to cultivate the vacant city lots to give employment to many men who need work. The plan, announced in THE TRIBUNE yesterday, is expected to make many of the weedy unsightly vacant lots into producing gardens which will supply hundreds of families with garden products at a price lower than the market offers.

In addition, Mr. Calley plans to educate not only men out of work, but school children interested in learning gardening and agriculture.

Called by Many Persons.

"Many persons called me yesterday to commend the plan announced in THE TRIBUNE," Mr. Calley said. Prof. Charles R. Henderson, chairman of the industrial commission, said the plan is the best remedy for unemployment yet proposed. THE TRIBUNE'S plan to coöperate in furnishing the names of vacant lot owners pleases me very much and I am sure that with the kind of coöperation which THE TRIBUNE gives, the plan will be a great aid to Chicago.

"The work will not be confined to small city lots entirely. I hope to get several idle tracts of forty to eighty acres in the city. I want to interest the school children of the city in the plan, because I believe it offers a splendid opportunity for an education for them.

Class in Farming.

"Many men in Chicago today are out of work. There is work for a lot of men on the farms in the country surrounding Chicago, but most of these men don't know how to work on a farm. It is my plan to educate these men in farming so they can go out into the country in the winter time and do a farmer's work if they can't get employment in the city.

"The plan offers a splendid opportunity to lower the cost of living and improve the city generally. I need the coöperation of the lot owners of Chicago, however, and I want to ask every vacant lot owner to join in the plan.

"This is something that they can join in without any expense and offers a chance for property owners to contribute something to aid the unemployed."

Bank Lends Aid.

The First National bank joined in the crusade of the city industrial commission to aid the unemployed. James B. Forgan, president of the bank, announced many men would be set to work cleaning the building at once.

"Usually we have waited until spring to do that work," Mr. Forgan said; "but there are many men out of work, and they might as well be working on the cleaning now as later in the year. We have simply done what we usually put off."

$500,000 Fund Sought.

A fund of $500,000 for emergency relief for the unemployed will be sought in a city wide campaign, it was announced. Bryan Lathrop started the fund unsolicited last week with a gift of $1,000 and R. T. Crane Jr. will pay all the expenses of collection and administration.

The fund will be raised and the problem of unemployment treated through ward organizations which the aldermen have been asked to perfect. Each ward will elect a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, and promotion committee of ten to coöperate with the industrial commission on unemployment, of which Dr. Henderson is chairman.

The business men of the ward will be counted upon as the backbone of the organization.

"The fund of $500,000 really is not large," said Dr. Henderson. "At a conservative estimate there are 200,000 unemployed heads of families in the city today. At $2 a day the fund would take care of them for only a little over one day.

No Careful Survey.

Dr. Henderson explained the estimated number of unemployed has been made without a careful survey, but he thought 200,000 conservative.

"We expect the ward committees to collect funds and to act as local employment bureaus," he said. "The problem is so great that the central bureau is unable to cope with it unassisted. We hope that by interesting people throughout the city we can obtain the desired result.

The fund will be used only for residents of Chicago. Contributions are to be sent to David R. Forgan, treasurer for the industrial commission on unemployment, at the National City bank. The fund is to be administered by the commission.

AUTO ROBBERS AGAIN BUSY; WOMAN'S HANDBAG TAKEN.

One of three auto robbers grabbed Mrs. Margaret Boland's handbag containing a check for $2.25 and some small change when she was passing 6624 South Carpenter street yesterday afternoon. Several pedestrians saw the robbers speed away in the small machine.

Mrs. Boland lives at 6628 South Carpenter street. She was returning from a store. When she reached 6624 the automobile drew up and stopped. One of the men seated in the rear seat of the machine jumped out, snatched the handbag, and jumped back.

A patrol wagon of policemen hurried to the place, but the robbers were then many blocks away.

NEW HEAD OF CHICAGO CLUB.

Edward L. Ryerson yesterday was elected president of the Chicago club without opposition. He will succeed John S. Runnels of the Pullman Palace Car company, who has been president of the club for the last nine years. Mr. Ryerson is chairman of the board of directors of Joseph T. Ryerson & Sons. Other officers elected are: William R. Odell, vice president; Arthur L. Farwell, secretary-treasurer; and Edward F. Carry, Chester M. Dawes, Frank H. Jones, William B. McCluer, Frederick H. Rawson, Edward P. Russell, and A. A. Sprague II., members of the executive committee.

STATE FREE JOB OFFICE ASKS AID

Chief Rich Calls on Public to Give Employment to Workers.

A public appeal for assistance in relieving the unemployment situation was issued yesterday by Thomas Rich, superintendent of the Illinois free employment office at 558 Randolph street. His "Appeal to the Public" follows:

"I desire to call the attention of the general public, but particularly that of the employers, to the excellent services which have been rendered and are being rendered each day by the Illinois free employment bureau. The excellent services of this bureau would be increased manifold if the general public, particularly the employers who have not as yet used the services of these offices, would get into close touch with us either by phone or correspondence.

All Kinds of Help.

"We have all classes of help available at all times right in our office and can furnish help at almost a moment's notice, and the right parties will be placed in the right position without cost to either the employer or employé.

"As an example of the efficiency of these offices we could mention that temporary positions secured by these offices have been filled so successfully that the employers have engaged the help permanently and have thanked the offices time and time again for the service rendered.

"We would appeal to the employers who we know really could use additional help to advantage to open their hearts and give us a chance to remedy the present labor situation. To our knowledge there are certain concerns having two persons do the work done by three previously, and it is to these concerns we send this appeal.

Let Work Pile Up.

"Other concerns are letting their present work pile up without putting on additional help. Both types of concerns mentioned should put on additional help at once to relieve the distress of the army of unemployed and to lighten the already heavy burden of their employés.

"We also appeal to those in need of domestic help so that they may keep in close touch with these offices. Most of the trouble at the present time in filling these positions is due to the small wages offered for housework. We have all classes of domestic help in our offices each day, but most of the positions offered carry the insufficient wage of 50 cents per day. On account of the small wages offered, we are unable to fill these positions. If the wage of $1 per day were offered we would be able to fill them.

Low Wages for Women.

"On account of the low wage offered for domestic services, the women and girls are compelled to obtain factory and office positions, instead of house work, as the factory and office positions offer at least $1 a day and the hours of employment are much shorter. Therefore, we appeal to those in need of domestic help to consider this and offer better wages and secure better and more competent help.

"The offices of the Illinois Free Employment bureau are open each day from a. m. until 5 p. m. These offices are located as follows: South side office, 732 Wabash avenue; north side office, 828 North Clark street; west side office, 558 West Randolph street.

"We trust the above appeal will receive due consideration from both the general public and the employers and that they will communicate with offices of the Illinois Free Employment bureau whenever the occasion arises and let us prove these statements."

TRIBUNE TO PRINT TONED PICTURES BY ROTOGRAVURE

Machinery Installed for Highest Achievement in American Newspaper Publishing.

SUPERIOR PROCESS IS USED.

Mechanical engineers and experts in the art of photographic reproduction have been engaged for several weeks in installing a number of intricate machines in THE TRIBUNE building. When these machines are set in motion within a few weeks, another TRIBUNE achievement will have been attained—an achievement unequaled in the history of newspaper picture work in the United States.

On Feb. 28 the first photogravure work ever "run off" of a rotary newspaper press on roll paper will be in the hands of THE TRIBUNE'S readers. This work, from an artistic standpoint, will surpass in faithful reproduction of the gradations of light and shadow and detail any pictures printed in this country except on the most expensive of book paper and will be superior in softness of tone to most of these.

German Rotogravure Process.

The method to be used—Rotogravure—is the invention of Dr. Mertens, the famous chemist of Freiburg, Germany, and the press now being installed—the only one of its kind in the United States—was made in Muelhausen, Alsace-Lorraine.

By this process four page picture supplements can be run off at a speed approximately ten times greater than that attained by any commercial photogravure rotary press in this country.

Heretofore photogravure work has been done flat on specially prepared paper, too expensive to meet newspaper demands and speed. Under the Mertens method the supplements may be printed in connection with the regular tricolor press and at the same speed at which the three color supplements are printed.

How It Is Done.

First, a negative is made from the copy and then a transparent positive is made from the negative. A carbon print is taken of this and then transferred to a large copper cylinder forced on a mandrel by 400 pounds of hydraulic pressure. The picture is then etched on the copper cylinder about one-hundredth of an inch deep with acids of varying strengths to bring out the finest gradations of light, shadow, and detail.

This intaglio, or etched-in method, is far superior to the old half tone or relief work in that under the latter system the same amount of ink is distributed over the whole surface. By the Mertens method the paper absorbs the ink to varying depths and produces a softness and mellowness without sacrificing distinctness of lines or detail.

Ink Evenly Distributed.

When the photograph has been transferred to the cylinder the mandrel is placed in the press to revolve over a fountain of ink. The ink is forced over the etching by a rubber roller and scraped off clean with a long steel knife passing over the surface of the cylinder as it revolves.

The paper is forced into the etching at a pressure of 1,200 pounds supplied by a motor operating a large spring. The paper absorbs the ink to the various depths of the etching and then passes over a large heated drum which dries the ink instantly. The finished supplements are then cut and folded at lightning speed in the same manner as the other sections of the paper.

There is another two page press for the purpose of making additional inserts under the same process.

In Several Tints.

The rotogravures may be made in blue, brown, green, black, and sepia tints. The sepia has been found to give the softest and most finished effect.

By this new process, the printing of type and pictures at the same time at high speed will be accomplished for the first time by a newspaper. The type is placed on the cylinder at the same time as the picture.

When a supplement has been printed, the cylinder may be scraped clean by a specially improvised grinding machine and another series of pictures etched on its surface. This grinding machine has four motions. As the copper cylinder revolves beneath the grinder, a special grinding stone revolves and at the same time moves back and forth and sidewise along the copper surface.

Great Expense Justified.

This machinery has been installed at great expense, but THE TRIBUNE believes its acquisition is another step forward in supplying its readers with the very best illustrations that can be produced by a newspaper and at an expense commensurate with THE TRIBUNE'S power to furnish the best service obtainable. Through this medium THE TRIBUNE'S extensive picture service will be made doubly attractive and valuable.

Imitations of the Mertens rotogravure process are being offered by other newspapers, but they have failed to equal THE TRIBUNE'S method either in quality of illustrations from an artistic standpoint or in respect to detail.

FORGERY LAID TO BOOKKEEPER

Two warrants charging forgery and uttering a forged check were sworn out before Judge Prindiville yesterday afternoon for the arrest of John W. De Lisle, 1522 Norwood street, a bookkeeper for the Federal Union Insurance company, 175 West Jackson boulevard. The complaints were signed by Theodore L. Osborn, treasurer of the insurance company, who appeared in court with Attorney Phillip H. Treacy. Attorney Treacy intimated that the amount involved may be increased by further investigation.

Asks Heavy Bond.

"I would like to have this man's bond fixed as heavy as possible," said the lawyer. "I don't believe a $10,000 bond would be any too high."

"Why do you ask that?" inquired Judge Prindiville.

"We suspect that forgeries to the amount of $20,000 may come out later on," replied Attorney Treacy. "We don't want this man to get away."

Judge Prindiville said he could not fix a bond at $10,000 in a case involving only $184, and made it $3,000 on each case.

With Company Six Years.

"Mr. De Lisle had been with this company six years as a bookkeeper," said Mr. Osborn. "He became ill about a month ago and has been away from work since that time. In his absence we discovered the forgery concerned in the two warrants. We have not yet finished an audit of his books. I can't say what will develop."

Mr. De Lisle said over the telephone:

"I got out of a sanitarium only a few weeks ago. I haven't heard a word about any warrants being sworn out for my arrest. If the officers are on the way out to my home I'll wait patiently for them. I have nothing more to say."

HOW TO LIVE THOUGH BROKE

Judge Sends Man and Wife He Abandoned Back to Her Parents.

How may a man have a home of his own without the expenditure of money? Charles Baumann of 2420 West Twenty-first street had appeared before Judge Hopkins charged with abandonment by his wife, Mrs. Lillian Baumann.

"He left me a week ago when we were living with my father at 2356 Troy street," Mrs. Baumann told the court. "He said he wanted a home of his own and intimated that my father and mother had nagged him. I would not go with him because he had no money to start a home."

Baumann consented to return to the home of his father-in-law to live. Mr. and Mrs. Baumann are each 19 years old.

DUNNE REFUSES TO SAVE SMITH

Roswell C. F. Smith must hang next Saturday for the murder of 4-year-old Hazel Weinstein. Gov. Dunne yesterday denied the prisoner a reprieve in order that he might take his case to the Supreme court.

The mother of the convicted man made a pathetic plea to save her son.

"If you hang him you hang a defective," she pleaded. "If you hang him you put a stain on the fair name of Illinois. I have watched over him since he was a baby and I ought to know whether or not he is right in his mind."

Dunne Regrets His Course.

"I regret that I cannot interfere, Mrs. Smith," said Gov. Dunne. "If I had found him to be insane I would have commuted his sentence, but the examination made by the alienists satisfied me as to his sanity and I cannot interfere. As I understand it there has been no bill of exceptions prepared in this case and now there is no way in which the case could be taken to the Supreme court."

Attorney Edgar J. Cook interrupted, arguing that the evidence introduced by the defense at the trial showed that insanity in Smith's family had been hereditary.

"Dr. Zeller of Peoria examined Smith at my request, and he found him sane in his report," Gov. Dunne said. "I am satisfied as to the man's sanity and there is nothing that I can do."

Smith Not Afraid to Die.

When Jailor Will T. Davies was informed of the governor's action he placed a death watch over Smith. Without being told Smith took this as meaning that his last hope for life was gone. Later he was visited by newspaper reporters.

"I am not afraid to die, boys," he said. "I have no recollection whatsoever of the crime. I have made my peace with God and I am sure that he will see that justice is done. He will not see a man hanged for a crime of which he has no recollection.

"I never made the confession the police introduced into evidence. If I must die, however, I will do it without flinching."

The Rev. Benjamin Aldrich, pastor of the New First Congregational church, North Ashland avenue and Washington boulevard, where the prisoner sang in the choir, and Smith's mother visit him almost every day in the jail.

SPANISH WAR DISPLAYED OUR UNREADINESS

HASTE PROVED COSTLY

"The Tribune" today publishes the second of the series of articles bearing on the subject of national defense, written by Oscar King Davis, the well known writer and war correspondent.

The present article is the first of two dealing with this country's lack of preparation at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war. The most important question before the United States today is the problem of national defense. Upon it may depend the continuation of the life of the republic. No question is arousing more earnest discussion.

The next article in the series giving the results of Mr. Davis' researches will appear in next Sunday's "Tribune" following directly along the lines of today's dispatch.

BY OSCAR KING DAVIS.

[Copyright: 1915: By O. K. Davis.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—This article is written with the honest intention of presenting a plain and wholly truthful account of the way in which the United States handled their part of the war with Spain. It is written by one who, after sharing to some extent in the events of the hurried and exciting summer of 1898, and, feeling the glamour and thrill that come from participation in the stirring adventure of war, has now made painstaking reëxamination of those events in the much calmer and less hectic atmosphere of seventeen years after.

This is a peculiarly fitting occasion for a review of the performances of the "nation in arms" in 1898. The lapse of years has softened our prejudices and given us better perspective and a wider view. At the same time the martial cataclysm that is devastating Europe has sobered the thought of the people and turned it with deep concern to renewed realization of the responsibilities devolving upon us as a result of the war with Spain, and to serious consideration of the question of what provision we have made against whatever emergency may arise from those responsibilities.

Spanish War a Skirmish.

From the point of view of mere slaughter of men and destruction of property our contest with Spain was not much of a war. Compared with the European war of today, or even with the Russo-Japanese conflict of ten years ago, the Spanish war was hardly a respectable before-breakfast skirmish. But, to paraphrase a borrowed epigram, "compared with no war at all it was a whale of a war."

It was in the effect upon our national policy and our national obligations wrought by our oversea success in arms that the Spanish war had its greatest and most farreaching consequence. For the first time in our history we became involved in territorial responsibilities beyond our continental borders. Thereby was presented a new form of contact with foreign nations in which there lie possibilities of complications never before faced by the United States.

Are we ready to meet the obligations that may spring from those possibilities?

How Soon Can We Prepare?

A large portion of our people have always clung tenaciously to the belief that no matter what unpleasant eventuality might develop in our relations with other nations, before actual warfare could be forced upon us we would surely have full time to make ample and complete preparation for it. They have believed that we could almost instantly turn our undoubtedly ample military resources into an equally undoubtedly ample military strength. Even gentlemen occupying high official place in the government have shared this belief. It was only the other day that the secretary of state was quoted as saying that a million men would spring to arms over night at the call of danger to this country.

To all such hopeful and cheerful believers in our military invincibility a careful consideration of the facts set forth in this article is earnestly recommended.

Ample Warning in '98.

This country had ample warning of the probability of war with Spain. There was no surprise about it, nothing sudden or unexpected. The initiative was on our side. Spain had given plenty of evidence that she was not at all desirous of fighting us, but she had also indicated very plainly that she would not acquiesce in our demands regarding Cuba except under compulsion. It had been made perfectly clear to this country that if we were really determined upon a settlement of the Cuban question we should have to fight Spain first.

Under those circumstances it was to be taken as a matter of course that when we did finally move in the matter it would not be until we were thoroughly prepared at every point. Army and navy would be at the highest degree of efficiency and equipment. Comprehensive plans for action would be ready. Transportation and supplies of every kind would be on hand in ample quantities, and we should go into the contest in the same manner and with the same spirit and expectation of success that a first class business concern shows when it embarks upon a new enterprise after long and careful preparation.

Trouble Long Brewing.

For the United States had been in controversy with Spain about Cuba for many years. The Cuban question had been a source of anxiety to this country for so long that there was hardly a man, woman, or child in the country who was not familiar with it and its latent menace. As President McKinley put it in his annual message to congress in December, 1897:

"For no enduring period since the enfranchisement of the continental possessions of Spain in the western continent has the condition of Cuba or the policy of Spain toward Cuba not caused concern to the United States."

In that message Mr. McKinley summed up the whole case, and he closed with fair and unequivocal notice to Spain and every one else who might be interested that this government was seriously contemplating the use of force to put an end to the intolerable conditions that had existed so long in that island.

Cause a Complicated One.

It is not important to review here the long series of diplomatic and other events that led up to the actual determination by this government to drive Spain out of Cuba. The savage course of warfare in the island, the inhuman policy of "reconcentration" adopted by the Spanish, the devastation of the fields and homes of the insurgents, the destruction of American investments in and trade with Cuba, the distress of Americans resident there, the denunciation of President McKinley by Señor de Lome, the Spanish minister at Washington, and finally the destruction of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor, with the loss of two officers and 264 of its crew, were all incidents that tended to force matters to the crisis.

Early on the morning of April 19 congress passed the resolution demanding the withdrawal of Spain from Cuba and directing the president to employ the land and naval forces of the United States to carry the resolution into effect. The next day the president signed the resolution, Spain broke off her diplomatic relations, and the war was on.

But We Were Not Ready.

But, although the course of events for many months had been such as clearly to warn both the administration and congress that war was not only possible but extremely probable, hardly a move had been made by any one in responsible position to make preparation for that emergency.

The regular army consisted of ten regiments of cavalry, five regiments of artillery, and twenty-five regiments of infantry. All were on little more than a skeleton basis, the total enlisted strength of the three arms being only slightly more than 20,000 men. There were 1,811 officers in the three arms, with 532 additional general and staff corps officers. This was a discouraging shortage of officers, very many having to be detailed from the line to staff duty, so that hardly a company or troop in the army had its full complement of officers with it ready for service in the field.

We Had Five Battleships.

We had four first class and one second class battleships. The oldest was less than three years old, the newest less than one year. We had two armored cruisers and six double turreted monitors, in which, with sentimental remembrance of that celebrated event in Hampton Roads away back in the civil war, we placed a world of confidence, just as if there had been no advance in naval warfare since Ericsson's Monitor defeated the Merrimac. Also we had thirteen low freeboard single turret iron monitors, each armed with two fifteen inch smooth bore guns, the whole outfit coming over from the civil war and bearing date of 1862. They were equipped with single screw "grasshopper" engines, and, if hard pushed, were capable of making almost six knots an hour when they did not have to be towed. We had thirteen unarmored steel protected cruisers, ranging in age all the way back to the days of the "White Squadron" that was the starter of our steel navy. Also, there were three little unarmored, unprotected, steel cruisers, comparatively new; ten unarmored steel gunboats, and six composite gunboats. We had the cranky dispatch boat Dolphin and the wonderful dynamite gunboat Vesuvius that was always more dangerous to those aboard than any others.

Our One Submarine Bad.

We had eleven torpedo boats and a submarine that wouldn't submerge. Also one wooden torpedo boat. Besides these there were five iron and eight wooden vessels carried on the navy list, ranging back to 1844 and including the old Hartford, famous as Farragut's flagship.

There is a theory prevalent in the United States, as old as the war for independence, that a standing army is a menace to our liberties and our institutions. In consequence of the prevalence of this theory the military legislation adopted by congress at every crisis in our history which has called for the use of armed forces has been consistent upon one point. It has always manifested an open fear of the standing army, and an equally open reliance upon the militia.

The experience at the close of the civil war, when that great army of a million veterans melted away without the slightest sign of menace to our liberties or our institutions, and when no one in the country was so anxious to have the soldiers get back to the arts of peace as the soldiers themselves were, has not served in the least to check this fear of a standing army.

The Army Men Know.

The regular army, comprising pretty nearly all the people in the United States who are familiar with our military history and the history of our military legislation, understands this situation thoroughly well, and if it ever numbered among its officers any who hoped that some day there would be a change of policy on the part of congress that time was long before war with Spain loomed up as one of our possibilities.

Consequently, when the army saw that war with Spain was imminent it knew of old that there was no use trying to get congress to do anything by way of substantial preparation until the war cloud had actually burst. Furthermore, the army knew that even then there would be no use trying to get congress to do anything substantial for the "regular establishment."

So there was no special flutter in the army over the approach of the war. Its whole energy was concentrated on one small measure, a bill adding two regiments to the regular artillery. All during that winter of 1897-8, when everybody in the United States knew we were marching steadily ahead toward war, the war department and the army plugged away at congress in behalf of the artillery bill. And by-and-by congress passed it—in the first week of March, three weeks after the Maine had been blown up.

That was about the only preparation that the army had for its part in the war. It did get authority to have three battalions in a regiment, instead of two, and a few additional staff officers, but that was all. There was no general staff in those days and so nobody seems to have been charged with the preparation of any plans for hostilities. Nor does there seem to have been any general supervision of the different supply departments. In the quartermaster's and commissary's offices responsibility for government property had been very thoroughly impressed upon every officer and every clerk by the long years of their service in times so peaceful that the most serious struggle was to hold the job.

The bureaus were hogtied with red tape. Everybody knew that no additional supplies beyond just those that were required for the "regular establishment" on the regular basis could be obtained out of the current appropriations. And nobody seems to have dreamed of suggesting the wisdom of taking a different allotment of funds already appropriated or of asking congress for any special appropriation.

Army Blue for the Tropics.

The schoolboys of the country knew that the war would be fought in Cuba and that Cuba has a tropical climate. The schoolboys knew that people do not wear the same clothing in the tropics that they do in this climate, or eat the same food. But so far as the records show not a man in the war department permitted such a thought to enter his head for one moment. If any one did think of these things he never succeeded in attracting any attention to his idea. The bureaucrats wanted to issue army blue for Cuban service and did issue canton flannel underclothing for the Philippines.

The Krag rifle, with which the regulars were armed, was a very effective modern weapon. But there was no practical reserve supply for arming volunteers or militia. Nor was there anything like an adequate reserve supply of ammunition. In fact, there was no real reserve of anything that would be needed by the army in war.

This was not the fault of the army itself. It was the natural result of the popular indifference to the army that had existed throughout the country for years. It had been impossible to obtain legislation from congress that would have enabled the army to attain even a partial stage of preparedness for war. The attention of the national legislature was fixed on other things.

Economy Army Policy.

Matters of more direct political consequence occupied the time of congress, and so far as the army was concerned the fixed policy was economy—cheese paring parsimony, based upon the dangerous theory that we were not going to get into war, anyway, but if we did, it would be the proper time to cross that bridge when we reached it.

Consequently, the army had been stagnating for a long time. Professional energy and ambition had been checked, and repressed, and discouraged.. Initiative was choked and the incentive to work was destroyed. The supply bureaus were manned for the most part by elderly incompetents, all snugly comfortable in the rut of regular routine and caring for nothing but to escape the censure of their bureaucratic superiors. And yet these supply bureaus are the most important feature of a successful army organization. It makes no difference how brilliant may be the staff work, how masterly the strategy; how high the spirit and how fine the discipline of the men, failure of the service corps will offset it all and endanger the success of the campaign. Men can and will fight well for a short time without food and without clothing. But they cannot sustain a prolonged campaign under those conditions, and they cannot fight at all without arms and ammunition.

Our Navy Better Off.

The navy was better off than the army. In the first place, it was much more nearly a match in number of ships and in their armament for the Spanish enemy it had to meet. To be sure the naval critics of Europe succeeded in making out, on paper, that the Spanish navy was considerably superior to ours, and in arousing great apprehension in this country in consequence.

But our navy was increasing rather than decreasing or standing still, as was the army. There was not the discouragement and stagnation in the service afloat that there was in the service ashore. Supplies were not adequate, but they were on hand in better quantity than with the army, although there was dangerous shortage in certain lines, especially in ammunition, and we were still clinging to the outgrown and suicidal black powder, when all the world knew that Spain was equipped with smokeless.

Both O. K. in Discipline.

In discipline and morale there was nothing to choose between the navy and army. Both were at the very top in both these essentials of good service. But both were woefully lacking in certain lines of training that have a most important bearing upon success in war. The army, scattered all over the country in small garrisons, had had no exercise since the close of the civil war in the movement or maneuvering of large bodies of troops. Most of the posts were of one or two companies. Here and there a battalion of infantry or a squadron of cavalry was stationed, but not a single regiment was all together at one post, and nobody ever dreamed of getting a brigade into the field at once, to say nothing of a division. In the same way there had been no fleet or squadron maneuvers sufficient to give the officers proper training in the handling of the ships in fleet formation, or adequate information as to the individual characteristics of the different vessels. But ship by ship the navy was in a high state of efficiency, just as regiment by regiment the army was.

Ammunition Lacking.

Like the army, the navy was short of ammunition, and the near approach of war saw a scramble on the part of both to secure additional supplies. One of the interesting news notes of the day records the fact that on March 19, just a month before the actual outbreak of war, "bids were opened in the army ordnance office for 2,000,000 smokeless powder rifle ball cartridges."

Just think of that! With war right ahead the army was advertising for bids for ammunition instead of contracting with every concern in the country capable of supplying the kind and quality needed. And it was calling for only 2,000,000 rounds, just about enough to supply an army of 20,000 men for one day of such fighting as occurred in front of Santiago.

Three days later the navy let contracts to three different firms for a total of 2,057 eight, ten, and twelve inch shot and shell, contracts that probably were not filled until after the war was well along, if indeed the shells were delivered before the signing of the protocol of peace.

Congress Cause of Delay.

Of course neither the army nor the navy was responsible for this delay in securing proper reserves of ammunition and other supplies. They could not buy without money, and congress was the only body that could furnish that. A small percentage of the sums appropriated by congress for public buildings in sage brush villages and for the improvement of creeks and streams that rarely float more than a rowboat would have provided ample reserves of ammunition and other supplies. But that would not have been as "good politics." There were not enough votes in that.

The first real step in preparation for the war was taken on March 7, six weeks before the actual crisis was reached. On that day a conference was held at the White House, attended by the president, the secretaries of war and the navy, and the chairmen of the senate and house committees on appropriations, naval and military affairs. At the conclusion of this conference Mr. Cannon, chairman of the house committee on appropriations, went back to the house and introduced a resolution appropriating $50,000,000 "for the national defense," to be "expended at the discretion of the president." The resolution passed the house that afternoon by unanimous vote, and the next day it passed the senate unanimously.

Try the Old Folly Anew.

This was thoroughly characteristic of congress. It was the kind of procedure taken by congress at every such crisis in our history. And every such crisis had demonstrated the folly of that kind of procedure.

But congress was not familiar with our military history, however well its members may be informed in political history. Upon the pretext of economy congress has always scrimped along with the army and navy, and waited to make preparation for trouble until the trouble was right at the door. Then economy is thrown to the winds and congress pats itself on the back for being "liberal" in appropriations. On this occasion the country rang with plaudits of the liberal congress and with general self-praise because we were able to appropriate $50,000,000 in one day out of money then in the treasury and without special provision for raising the funds.

Haste Brought Waste.

And in 1898, just as on previous occasions, the result of sudden prodigality after years of cheese paring was extravagance and waste. That was absolutely unavoidable, because congress had waited so long that haste was absolutely essential. There was no time to make careful selection, and to be certain that the best material of whatever kind needed was secured and at the most advantageous prices. The thing to do was to get something that would serve the purpose in some way, cost what it might.

It was a happy time for anybody who had anything to sell that might be of use to the government in warfare. Both army and navy started in to buy, and neither was anything like as particular as to price or quality as in ordinary times The main thing desired was quick delivery. The things they bought ranged from steamships, steam engines, and steam boilers, to clothes pins and blackberry jam.

The navy needed ships and it had several million dollars unexpectedly allotted to it from the $50,000,000 defense fund for that purpose. A special board was appointed that went to New York City on the hunt. Other officers were sent abroad. There were war vessels building in England and Germany for different countries that it was possible to purchase, and in short order we had bought three cruisers and a torpedo boat, the latter of which, by the way, was unable to make the trip across the Atlantic and so was not of service in the war.

Bought at Any Price.

The board at New York bought all kinds of steam craft; ocean liners that were refitted as auxiliary cruisers, yachts that became gunboats and dispatch vessels, colliers and supply ships, and a lot of tugs and other small craft for general use. It was no time to haggle about prices, and so the sellers got the full value of their vessels, and in Uncle Sam's ready cash, to boot.

The army, too, bought ships. It needed transports for troops, and numerous vessels for supply ships. Also both army and navy needed hospital ships. The navy had always needed such vessels, and congress had always known it. But instead of making provision when there was time to build just what was needed and at costs that would have been really economical, congress did the usual thing and waited until unsatisfactory vessels had to be purchased and refitted at whatever it might cost to get them. Both army and navy also chartered numerous vessels.

Inaction Was the Cause.

It is not meant to imply that there was graft or improper conduct on the part of either army or navy in all this. But it is meant that the procedure forced by the inaction of congress was such as to compel wasteful and extravagant expenditure in the end, and then to get inefficient and unsatisfactory results from such expenditure.

In this scramble for the necessary means of carrying on war the navy was considerably better off than the army. The character of the naval service is such that it is naturally more easily supplied than the army. The demands upon its supply department in war differ from those of peace only in degree, and it is not so likely to be subjected to breaking strain under sudden emergency as were the supply bureaus or the army under their organization of 1898.

Even before the special defense fund was available the navy began shipping supplies to Key West, where a base was established at which stores for 8,000 men for three months were kept constantly on hand. At the Mare Island station, near San Francisco, stores for 4,000 men for three months were kept, and a similar supply was maintained at Norfolk, while at New York the supply was for 9,000 men. From these stores it was always possible to make emergency shipments with plenty of time thereafter to replenish and keep the supply at the required level.

Vessel Shortage Costly.

If the navy had been prepared in vessels as it was in supplies, there would have been real economy. As it was more than $15,000,000 was spent in the purchase of all sorts and conditions of craft, most of which were worth little except for junk after the war was over. Some of them, it is true, are still in service, and some were resold for respectable figures.

But most of that was "war expenditure" pure and simple. And for the same sum appropriated in relatively small amounts over a period of years the navy would have had vessels that would have rendered better and more satisfactory service for several years instead of for three or four months.

With the creation of the special defense fund the grand political scramble that is customary with us on such occasions promptly began. That appropriation made it clear that neither congress nor the administration believed that war could be avoided.

Folly in Use of Militia.

The United States had fought two wars with Great Britain, one with Mexico, and half a dozen with Indians. In all three of the foreign wars, and in every Indian war before 1860, reliance had been placed mainly upon the militia. In every case this had resulted in prolonging the war and increasing the expenditure of life and of money. There was no exception. If ever experience had proved a case it had proved that one. Moreover, the Indian wars fought since 1860 had been handled entirely by the regular army, in all cases with promptness, thoroughness, efficiency, and economy.

Yet when war with Spain came on there was not the least doubt in the mind of any well informed person in the country but that congress would again resort to the old procedure and place its main reliance upon the militia.

Politics Militia's Bane.

The militia has always been ineffective, chiefly for two reasons. The first is constitutional and is found in that provision of our great charter which reserves to the governors of the states the right to appoint the officers of the militia, even when the troops are to be called into the service of the nation. That provision has always made the militia a nest of politics and always will as long as it is retained. Certainly there needs be no further demonstration of the terrible damage to military efficiency always wrought by political interference.

The history not only of the United States but of the world is full of cases that establish proof beyond the possibility of cavil. However, familiarity with military history is one of the last and least of the qualifications of the average member of congress. And yet it ought to be an absolute prerequisite for men who are to legislate upon the subject of highest national importance, the national defense.

Militia Lacks Discipline.

The second reason for inefficiency in the militia is inherent in the organization itself of the troops. Efficiency in soldiering is very rarely native born. It is the product of discipline and experience, and with us Americans discipline itself is the product of experience. Bravery, the mere ability to march up to the guns and stand being shot at, is a common quality. And yet plenty of brave men flinch at the first fire. It is the training, the drill, the experience together that transform a thousand recruits from a mob into a regiment, and this the militia seldom have in sufficient degree. Yet our militia never have opportunity to secure this necessary experience.

Our people and our legislators have always recognized that fact, and almost never acted upon it. Coupled with the theory that a standing army is a menace there is another theory which we have professed as a nation and never followed. It is that the regular army, maintained as a skeleton organization in times of peace, shall be expanded into fighting size during war.

Our oratorical records, especially those of congress, are full of high flown references to the way in which we intend to and do expand our regular army when the need comes. But the fact is that we never have practiced true expansion except once, in the case of the Philippine insurrection. There was a kind of half way bluff at it in the Spanish war, but that was all. The main reliance in the Spanish war, as on all other occasions in our history, was upon the militia.

True Army Expansion.

True expansion is practiced by recruiting the trained companies of the regulars up to a war maximum that is materially larger than their peace strength. Thus the untrained men are put into the ranks shoulder to shoulder with men of experience and training, and the effective fighting strength of the regiment is increased.

But the United States, under the legislation of congress, has always expanded its army in times of war by adding to the trained units of the regulars a horde of utterly untrained and inexperienced separate units of militia, and the result has been too often what it was at San Juan hill, where the regulars and one volunteer regiment went ahead and a militia regiment lay down in the road and hindered the progress of those who were trying to get into the fight.

"Dissolving Army" Dropped.

For the Spanish war, however, congress did make one distinct advance. The records of military legislation are full of provisions for the enlistment of militia to serve for "three months after reaching the rendezvous," or for six months from time of rendezvous. The result has always been to create what Washington called his "dissolving army."

The father of his country protested mightily but in vain against this practice. The things he said to the president of congress about it, and about the kind of armies the method provided were sufficient, one would think, to prevent any self-respecting congressman from ever again voting for that kind of a measure. Always provided the congressman knew what Washington said. Nowadays it is hardly to be expected that many of them do know.

Time and again in the revolution, in the war of 1812 and in various Indian wars the generals in command have been absolutely robbed of the possibility of success through such a provision. Andrew Jackson got so angry about it that he entirely disregarded congress, in one Indian war where he commanded, and enlisted a body of men on his own hook and concluded the war.

It was probably the lesson of the civil war that prevented congress from repeating this error in 1898. At any rate, in the bill creating the volunteer army congress provided that the men who joined it should be enlisted for two years. But it qualified that by adding that the men should be discharged "when the purposes for which they were called into service shall have been accomplished, or on the conclusion of hostilities."

That provision threatened to cause no small trouble in the Philippines. Some of the militia regiments out there were inclined to stand upon their right to be mustered out upon the conclusion of peace with Spain, despite the threatened and finally actual outbreak of the insurrection.

But there was one regiment in the Philippines, to its everlasting credit be it said, that did not stand on any such technicality. That was the First Tennessee. It had been ordered home for muster out and was actually aboard its transport about to sail when the Filipinos attempted to clean out the town of Cebu, where the regiment had been stationed. At the sound of the guns the men swarmed off the transport and hurried into the fight It was not until the insurgents had been soundly thrashed that the regiment returned to the transport, having suffered several casualties.

The "Manhood Service" Plan.

The act creating the volunteer army for the Spanish war opens with a provision of the highest importance and deepest significance to the entire nation. It is "That all able-bodied male citizens of the United States, and persons of foreign birth who shall have declared their intention to become citizens of the United States under and in pursuance of the laws thereof, between the ages of 18 and 45 years, are hereby declared to constitute the national forces, and, with such exceptions and under such conditions as may be prescribed by law, shall be liable to perform military duty in the service of the United States."

That is the plain recognition of the obligation of manhood service, the ultimate foundation upon which the security of the nation rests. It was first enunciated for this country in the army reorganization act of May 8, 1792, and thereafter was promptly forgotten until the stress of the civil war revived it for use in the draft. It is the declaration of the right of the nation to employ the draft—or conscription—if the necessity arises.

Politics Kept Its Grip.

Proceeding from that solid beginning the act of April 22, 1898, divided the land forces into the regular army and the volunteer army. In the volunteers army "all the regimental and company officers" were to be appointed by the governors of their states, and when any militia—or national guard—organization enlisted in a body it was to take its officers into the national service with it. The governor of any state might, with the consent of the president, appoint one regular officer to be a field officer of a volunteer regiment, But there could be only one regular officer for any volunteer organization!

Thus the hold of politics upon the volunteer army was assured even before its creation, and congress was true to the political precedents in our military history. Of course, congress denies this, and explains that this provision for the appointment of officers by the governors is part of the national constitution. So it is, when the militia is called into service.

But there is no provision of the constitution requiring the calling out of the militia as state organizations. It is well within the power of congress "to raise and support armies," to create a body of national volunteers and get the same men now in the state militia, or better. And in such a body the selection of the officers would be in the hands of the president, the commander in chief of the entire force.

Congress recognized this fact in this very law, and also authorized the formation of three regiments of United States volunteers "having special qualifications." It was under this authorization that the Rough Riders, who played such a conspicuous part in Cuba, were organized.

No one will contend that placing the appointment of officers in the hands of the president instead of with the governors will eliminate the element of politics from the organization of the volunteers. No scheme can be devised, under our form of government, that will eliminate politics entirely. But there would be a focusing and a directness of responsibility that would be bound to make for better selections and a higher degree of all around ability.

Would End the "Pull."

And the vicious element of reliance upon political pull with a governor to assist in avoiding full compliance with duty, or to evade discipline for failure or refusal to perform duty, would be practically removed. The feeling that the governor, who is a political friend, is the real chief, instead of the president—or the commanding general who represents the president—is one of the greatest hindrances to discipline and efficiency in all our militia organizations when called into national service.

Technically the nation did not employ militia in the Spanish war, but the distinction was only technical. The constitution provides that the militia may be called into the service of the nation only for the purposes of enforcing the laws, putting down insurrection, and repelling invasion. This precludes the use of militia beyond the national borders, and there have been occasions in our history when patriotic governors of states refused to support the national administration, to which they were opposed politically, and forbade their militia to cross the border. In the war of 1812 there was no small difficulty of that kind. So the legislation of 1898 did not provide for calling out the militia, as such, but it authorized the president to call out national volunteers, and provided that the state militia should be accepted as organized units whenever it chose to volunteer as such. Thus the devil was successfully whipped around the stump and the way was opened for the militia to serve beyond the border, the constitution to the contrary notwithstanding.

Immediately upon signing the act creating the volunteer army the president issued his call for 125,000 volunteers, and the war department promptly notified the different states of their quotas under the call. It became apparent at once that the prevalent belief that the organized militia—the national guard—of the different states would respond with practical unanimity was not justified. It had been the habit in congress and elsewhere to speak of the national guard as "trained soldiers," and it had been confidently expected that these trained men would come into the national service almost unanimously. That expectation, in fact, had its influence upon the framing of the law.

Guard Fails to Enlist.

But no sooner was the call for volunteers issued than it became apparent that many members of different guard regiments would not enlist in the national service. And different regiments began to raise questions about coming into the federal service. Some of them sought to make conditions, and one widely known organization never did get into the service. This was the "crack" New York Seventh, the regiment whose friends liked to compare it with the West Point Cadet corps.

National guard officers were anxious as a rule, to go, and there was a scramble to have their organizations accepted as organizations. But so many of the enlisted men either did not care to go into the national service or were barred because married, or for some other reason, that active recruiting became necessary to fill up the regiments to acceptable strength.

I went out to the Philippines in the transport that carried the Second Oregon regiment, the "crack" organization of that state. It had practically all its officers, but H company, which had the largest number of the old men, had only twenty-nine. More than two-thirds of the regiment were new recruits. The same situation existed in the other volunteer regiments that served in the Philippines.

Thus, in large measure, the chief purpose in so framing the law as to secure the services of the national guardsmen was defeated right at the start. The desire to get the guardsmen was based upon the theory that they were "trained men." That means that they were trained not only in the manual of arms and in such drills as they get on the floors of their armories, but had had experience in camp life, and knew how to take care of themselves in the field. The mere ability to go through the manual of arms is of mighty small use to a soldier in the field. But knowledge of the ration and how to make the most of it; training in the business of making camp, keeping it clean and sanitary, and making himself most comfortable under uncomfortable circumstances and with the least expenditure of nervous energy; these things are absolutely invaluable to the soldier in war.

Health Rules Unknown.

But field experience in 1898 immediately demonstrated that even the national guardsmen were not trained in these prime essentials. The reports of the inspectors general—both from the regular army and from the guardsmen themselves—are filled with comments on this and similar deficiencies among the volunteers. "All were more or less ignorant of the simplest precautions as to keeping healthy and sanitary requirements, the neglect of which caused sickness beyond ordinary calculations," is the way the one inspector puts it.

Moreover, the call to actual service demonstrated that the guard failed in another and exceedingly important matter, that of equipment. And this failure showed in some cases a very unpleasant feature, closely akin to sharp practice, and that is describing it very euphemistically. One report of Maj. E. A. Garlington, now inspector general of the regular army, refers especially to this subject.

Dumped Their Old Arms.

"It seemed," he says, "as if the states had unloaded on the regiments entering the service of the United States all the old arms, with the idea that they would be replaced by the government. I estimate that about 50 per cent of the arms were not suitable for battle." He says that many of the regiments had cartridge boxes and knapsacks that were useless for active service, and adds:

"All these deficiencies indicate a state of unpreparedness of state troops for sudden call into active service, and should teach a lesson never to be forgotten by those responsible for national defense."

Another inspector general bluntly made the suggestion of sharp practice. "The regiments brought with them," he wrote, "a great deal of obsolete, worn-out state property which the states had turned over to the United States, undoubtedly exacting full payment therefor."

These things show a radical defect in management which is chargeable only to the regular army. The officers who mustered in the militia regiments were all regulars. But it seems no provision whatever was made for inspecting the regiments and their property as they came into the national service.

Proper Inspection Need.

Proper inspection at that time would have prevented this unloading of useless property by the states upon the nation. Such inspection probably would have delayed the muster in somewhat, and certainly would have put more work on the mustering officers if they had been charged with that duty. But that was a small price to pay for the result that would have been obtained.

But haste, haste, seems to have been the chief desire at that time. Having delayed so long in commencing to make preparation, now everything must be hurried to the last limit of possibility. And waste was the inevitable result. The people of the United States talk more about economy and practice it less than any other people on earth. They are always prating economy and efficiency, and their public affairs, especially in matters military, are always proving the folly of talk that is not accompanied by common sense action.

It was not only the muster in of the volunteers that was hurried. There was a wild rush to get them concentrated in great camps whence they might be sent forward to field service. Who was responsible for this does not now appear and it is not material. The war department certainly ought to have known better, and the officers of the regular line did, whether the staff did or not.

The Common Sense Method.

The plain, common sense, businesslike procedure upon the acceptance of a state organization for national service was to send it to its state camp for thorough inspection. It should never have been moved from that camp until it was completely equipped, not merely with arms and ammunition but with all the requirements of field service, clothing, tentage, blankets, camp utensils, and all the rest. And, what is even more important, it should not have been moved forward until it was thoroughly instructed in the ways of field service and knew how to take care of itself in camp.

This instruction can be given and enforced much more easily in small camps than in such great establishments as were organized in the early days of the war. It is not only an actual saving of time and energy to give this instruction in such camps but it is a direct means of preserving health and condition for the regiments under instruction.

SEES GERMANY TRYING TO RUN UNITED STATES

Ex-Attache Interprets Formation of New League at Washington.

Ex-Attache, whose letters appear in "The Sunday Tribune," is a member of an aristocratic English family, and his views in general reflect the views held in his class and country.

BY EX-ATTACHE.

[Copyright: 1915: By the Brentwood Co.]

Germany's ambition to dominate the domestic and foreign policies of the United States through American citizens of German birth and to dictate the destinies of this great republic from Potsdam is nothing new to those who have taken the trouble to keep track of the activities of the pan-Germanist movement in Germany for the last fifteen or twenty years.

Indeed, the formation of the National German-American league at Washington the other day, with its virtual threat to defeat the administration at the presidential election next year, unless its demands are conceded, is merely the latest development of a campaign which first became apparent here on the occasion of the visit of Prince Henry of Prussia in the spring of 1902.

The purpose of his trip has never been thoroughly understood by the American people. It was not to conciliate the United States government, nor yet to pay a compliment to President Roosevelt. Nor was it to restrain Germans on this side of the Atlantic from abandoning their allegiance to his brother, the kaiser, in order to become citizens of the United States.

Prince Henry's Real Aim.

Prince Henry's real aim was to turn to political account the latent love for the fatherland which lies in the heart of all its sons living in foreign lands, even in the breast of their descendants. Of all the emigrants that leave Europe there are none who have had such educational advantages as those from Germany; none who are able to adapt themselves more rapidly and with a more enlightened understanding to the customs and institutions of the land of their adoption.

This, taken in conjunction with their proverbial thrift and industry and their talent for organization, quickly brings them to the front, and they soon become active factors in the economic and political affairs of the community in which they have cast their lot.

It was with the object of appealing to them and to revive in their hearts affectionate memories of the vaterland—for political purposes—that the prince came to the United States. While here he always preached to German-Americans loyal obedience to the laws of the land of their adoption, and his diplomacy went so far as to urge nonnaturalized Germans to become full-fledged American citizens, showing everywhere a marked preference and a superior cordiality to those who had secured the right to vote in American elections.

Congratulates the Prince.

During a conversation that I had with him at a New York hotel just before he sailed—I have known him for over thirty years and his brother the kaiser since our boyhood—I remarked to him:

"I congratulate you, sir, on your success in reviving among all the German-American citizens loving memories of the old country and in reawakening their sympathy in its destinies. Possessing votes as they do, your stay in the United States, though brief, is likely to prove of inestimable value in promoting a friendlier policy of this republic toward Germany."

"Do you really think I have succeeded in this?" exclaimed the prince with signs of marked pleasure and satisfaction. "I am very glad, more than glad, to hear you say so. That, indeed, has been the object of my visit."

Several years later the Neue Deutsche Zeitung, one of the principal organs of the pan-Germanic movement in Germany, in discussing the work then in progress for the federation of all German-American societies in this country wound up its article with the following words:

"Perhaps one day the leaders of the destinies of Great Britain and of the United States will see too late for their own good what was the real meaning of the American visit of Prince Henry—the work of federation and union of all citizens of German birth or race in the United States unter einem politischen hut (under one political hat)."

Leaders Are Decorated.

This work of federation has been in progress ever since Prince Henry's visit, the idea at Berlin being to bring all the American citizens of German birth and race into one great union for political purposes, that is to say, for the political purposes of the German empire, and those most active in the work, such as Dr. C. A. Hexamer and Richard Muller, have each of them received orders of knighthood from the kaiser and other German sovereigns.

The societies which have thus been brought "under one political hat" may be numbered by the tens of thousands. In greater New York alone there are considerably over 1,200 societies, while in Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Milwaukee, and other great cities of America, where the proportion of German-American citizens is even larger than in New York, their societies are even still more numerous.

They are organized under various pretexts; some musical, some philanthropic, some gymnastic, others literary, scientific, military, or merely social, but all bound together more or less intimately by the same aim, the cultivation of affectionate memories of the vaterland and the determination to serve the interests of the old country in the land of their adoption.

This photograph shows the two wheeled gyroscopic auto, the vehicle in use by Dr. Pierre Schilowsky, a Russian lawyer-inventor. A rear wheel duplicates the one seen in front. Small wheels at each side support the car when it is at rest.

Veteran Societies Also.

Then there are all the veteran societies, which embrace not only men who have served in the German army, but also German-American citizens who have served under the flag of the United States. There is hardly a single German sovereign who has not contributed money or other gifts to these veteran associations, while costly prizes have been given by the kaiser to the various Liederkranz societies and Turnvereins; in fact, to nearly every society that has been formed to foster in one way or another the union of German-Americans.

Indeed, the expenditure in the way of trophies and cups, in pieces of statuary, and in handsomely framed portraits of Emperor William, would have cut a deep hole into his privy purse had not their cost been to a great extent defrayed by the Pan-Germanic society, which under government direction exists for the purpose of turning to the political interests of Germany, the votes possessed by men of German race beyond the sea, as voting citizens of the land of their adoption.

Mixing in Politics.

If all these societies were to restrict their activities to the objects mentioned in their articles of incorporation no exception could be taken thereto. But from the moment that they turn their attention to political matters the situation becomes wholly different, especially if all those members who are entitled to American franchise vote in obedience to common directors from Potsdam and from Berlin.

Three years ago Dr. Hexamer boasted that his German-American National bund, then already in existence and composed of a federation of German-American societies, had on its roster nearly 4,000,000 members of the Teuton race, each possessed of an American vote and consequently a voice in the affairs of the American nation.

In those days the German-American National bund did not embrace the Union of German-American Veterans with about 1,500,000 members. It would seem that they are now amalgamated into the National German-American league, formed the other day at Washington; and that would account for the 5,500,000 votes which the league claims to constitute its voting strength.

Would Dictate to United States.

Even as far back as in 1910-11 and in the early part of 1912 the German-American National bund and the German-American Veteran union made no secret of their determination to prevent any policy on the part of the United States government that was friendly to Great Britain and consequently unfriendly to Germany.

They declared that they would not "dulden," that is, tolerate, any such policy on the part of the Washington administration. "The German-American societies"—I am quoting textually from their utterances—"will bring about the fall of every president of the United States and of every administration that does not defer to their views in this matter, or which endeavors to bring about a treaty of arbitration between the United States and Great Britain."

Subsequently President Taft was defeated in his efforts to procure reëlection. It would be interesting to ascertain the extent to which the German-Americans contributed to the victory of President Wilson, who is now in his turn threatened by the new National German-American league for failing to obey the bidding of this new and foreign factor in American political life.

Threatens the Administration.

In October, 1911, the sixth annual meeting of the German-American National bund took place in Washington for the reëlection of Dr. C. J. Hexamer of Philadelphia as its president, and for the inauguration of John Hermann of California, of Jonas Schwab of Ohio, of Theodore Sutro of New York, of Joseph Keller of Indiana, and of Dr. Leo Stern of Wisconsin, as vice presidents.

The convention remained in session for several days, and among its most remarkable resolutions was a threat of united political action against the administration unless there were radical changes in the direction of a much more liberal interpretation of the immigration laws in so far as they concerned Germans; a demand for the repeal of all state and municipal laws for the observance of the Sabbath and for the regulation of the sale of beer, and an open declaration of war upon the administration, in the event of its pursuing its policy of endeavoring to bring about an arbitration treaty with Great Britian.

Perhaps the boldest thing ever done by Germany in this connection was when the German Naval league a few years ago made use of these societies to circulate among American citizens of German birth and ancestry appeals for subscriptions toward the construction of a German navy that would give to Germany maritime supremacy, that is to say, superiority over the United States.

Invitation to Treason.

It apparently did not dawn upon those who took part in the circulation of these appeals for subscriptions, that the asking for contributions to the construction of a German navy superior to that flying the stars and stripes was nothing short of an invitation to rank treason to the United States.

One word in conclusion. Gen. Bernhardi, in his well known book, speaks of the importance of Germans resident aboard, to the vaterland, and lays stress on the political use which they are in America, to the Teuton empire. The fact of the matter is that there is no limit to the evils that the united German-American vote may accomplish in the United States under dictation from Berlin.

One of the greatest dangers by which this nation is confronted in connection therewith is that of becoming involved in complications, nay, even possibly in war, with foreign powers, at the bidding of the kaiser. It would be regarded as a great piece of successful statecraft at Berlin if Germany could through the German-American vote in the United States embroil the latter with Great Britain and with Japan.

MUST DIG OUT SLIDES, ASSERTS COL. GOETHALS.

Princeton, N. J.—"The construction of the Panama canal involved the solution of no new engineering problems," said Col. Goethals, in an address nere. "It simply means the application of known principles and methods which experience ad shown would give satisfactory results, for the very magnitude of the work precluded trying out anything new or experimental."

Regarding the difficulty which is being experienced with the slides, he declared there was no remedy except in digging. The present settling will continue until the material is entirely removed, and the only course to be pursued is to deepen the channel as it is filled up from the slides.

IF WHEAT CORNER IS FOUND THE U. S. WILL PROSECUTE

Special Agents Gathering Data on Grain Market All Over the Country.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—If the department of justice can find any evidence of a corner in wheat, whether it be in cash wheat or wheat for future delivery, the operators of the corner will be prosecuted. So much was made plain today by G. Carroll Todd, assistant attorney general in charge of the inquiry.

The investigation is being prosecuted by special agents of the department not alone in Chicago but in various other parts of the country as well. Some of these agents are reporting directly to the department in Washington, while others are working in connection with the district attorney's office in Chicago, New York, Buffalo, Minneapolis, Duluth, and other cities.

The government obtains its power to prosecute operators of "corners" in produce under the anti-trust acts. There are no federal laws prohibiting speculation or gambling in grain or other commodities.

Violates Anti-Trust Act.

In order to establish the fact that there is a corner in cash wheat, it must be shown that the purchasers have conspired together to purchase all or a substantial part of the visible supply of wheat on hand or that their purchases up to this time, which have resulted in such a material advance in the price of wheat, were made in furtherance of their plan to "corner" the visible supply with a view to forcing consumers to pay exorbitant prices.

Under section 4 of the Clayton act it will be possible for any person who is injured in his business or property by the corner in wheat to bring suit against the operators of the corner in the District court of the United States and recover threefold the damages sustained by him if he is able to prove his case. If such a suit should be brought, it is believed the government would intervene on behalf of the complainant.

With respect to the advance in the price of bread, the federal authorities are unable to do anything. Assistant Attorney General Todd said that was a matter for the state officers to look after under the Illinois anti-trust laws or for the municipal authorities in Chicago to provide against and punish.

EMBARGO N OBUGABOO.

Leaders in the Chicago grain trade are not worrying about an embargo being placed on wheat and flour. The wheat surplus is being moved out of the country at a rapid rate, but there is still much wheat available for export, and it is not believed anything will be done to disturb the contracts already made.

The general view of the embargo proposition was expressed yesterday by George E. Marcy, president of the Armour Grain company.

"If an embargo," said he, "on export shipments of wheat and flour were declared by the United States, its effect would in all probability be beneficial.

Faith in President.

"I take it for granted that congress no doubt would authorize the president to prohibit exports only at a time when he would be advised by the government statisticians that they had exported all of the wheat that could be spared until the new crop. Certainly we all know that the president would not prohibit the exportation of wheat until the surplus had been exhausted and then only until the new crop was harvested."

James A. Patten, who sees many points of similarity between present conditions and those of 1909, when he ran one of the most successful deals in the history of the grain trade, does not believe an embargo on wheat and flour exports will be necessary.

"Just how long it will be before our surplus stocks are sold out remains to be seen. Up to date, from an exportable surplus of 275,000,000 to 300,000,000 bushels of wheat, we have exported about 220,000,000 bushels.

"Clearances now are at the rate of 1,000,000 bushels per day, and leading exporters are of the opinion the exports will continue at this rate for the remainder of this month and probably through March.

Clyne Receives Reports.

District Attorney Charles F. Clyne received several statements of figures on Chicago's wheat and flour supply during the day in connection with the government's investigation of rising wheat, flour, and bread prices. The figures came from board of trade operators, millers, and bakers.

FATHER JAMES DOWLING DEAD: GRIEVED FOR KIN.

Brother's Illness Believed to Have Hastened Death of Director of Young Men's Sodalities.

The Rev. James A. Dowling, S. J., assistant pastor of the Church of the Holy Family and for the last two years director and organizer of young men's sodalities, died yesterday at St. Anthony's hospital.

Father Dowling was born in Cincinnati in 1849. He was ordained at Woodstock college, Woodstock, Md., in 1880. Later he became professor of English literature at St. Louis university and at St. Mary's university, St. Marys, Kas.

In 1896 he came to Chicago as pastor of the Sacred Heart parish. From this charge he went to Cincinnati to organize young men's sodalities. Later he went to St. Louis on the same mission. He came to Chicago two years ago to continue this work.

Some of Father Dowling's lifelong friends at St. Ignatius college said last night his death had been hastened through grief over the severe illness of his only brother, the Rev. Michael P. Dowling, president of Rockhurst college, Kansas City. Father James Dowling visited his brother about three weeks ago. He has been in ill health since returning.

The funeral will be from Holy Family church, where solemn requiem mass will be sung on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. The office of the dead will be erad tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. Burial will be at Calvary.

The secretary had decided not to send a boat to Chicago for use of the naval militia, but the Chicago congressman presented a number of urgent requests, as well as an article by Mr. Hyde in a recent issue of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, to the secretary.

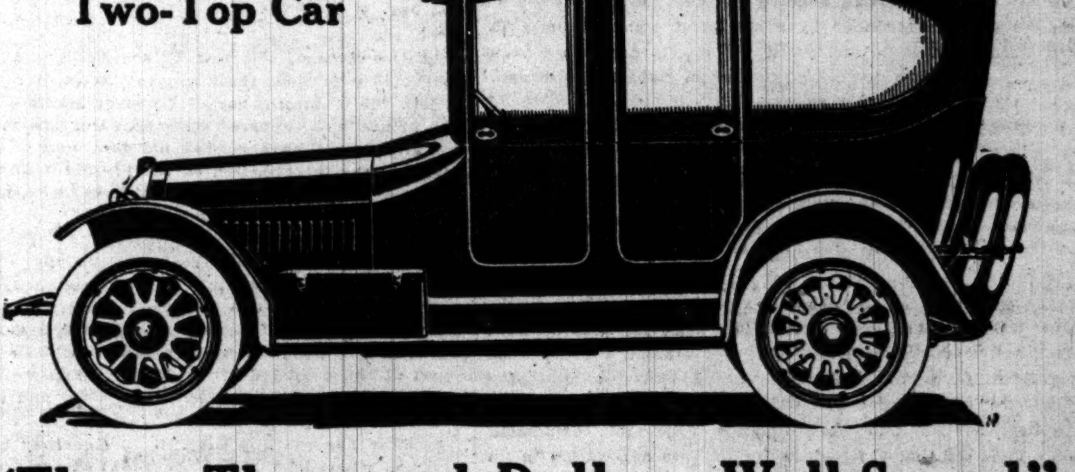
PATHFINDER
Two-Top Car



"Three Thousand Dollars Well Saved"

This was the remark of a prominent Chicagoan who bought a Pathfinder car with the detachable limousine top this week.

"I have always considered the health, comfort and pleasure of my family first," he said, "and to secure these three, heretofore I have had to purchase a limousine in addition to my touring car. Your car solves the problem very handily and leaves me three thousand dollars to the good."

The Pathfinder detachable limousine top is the biggest forward step in body design that has yet been made. Giving two cars in one, each perfect in design and quality, it does away with the needless expense of buying separately a touring car and limousine.

—Stephen Decatur.

ART IN AMERICA.

Another group of sanguine local artists assure themselves and us that Chicago may make sure of a future in art which will pale the ineffectual glories of Florence or of Greece. We devoutly hope so, and if faith will bring this about let us by all means have such faith as we can muster.

But faith, after all, without works is not likely to bring about an epochal efflorescence of art, and if we are to rely much upon continual assertion of a glorious destiny let us at least be careful not to place our reliance upon the wrong forces.

Somehow references to Florence, not to speak of Athens, are not altogether reassuring save perhaps in moments of post-prandial enthusiasm. Just why that small Tuscan town, less than twice the size of Waukegan, should have been able to lead all civilization during the greatest phase of perhaps the most brilliant epoch of modern times is a problem we are not inclined to tackle. But certainly it was not for some of the reasons which seem to figure in the usual inventory of our merits. It was not because Florence was big, or amiable, or securely prosperous. Was it because she was highly energized as we are?

A doubt imposes itself. The intensity of the Florentine very little resembles American energy. If we possess what the French have labeled for us, "la vie intense," it is a strenuousness that hardly runs to art. Our "vie intense" is the life of business, of material, objective, pecuniary achievement. The Florentines were great merchants and greater bankers, but their life was passionate, intense in a sense that our American temperament at this stage, at any rate, inhibits. Beauty is a high, if not the highest, expression of vitality, and there is a rather half-hearted response to it in our time and place. At best art is for us a decoration of life, never its most profound and significant expression, and while it remains a mere decoration it will never be the channel of great power.

Art with us is only culture. We pursue it politely when we are otherwise comfortable. It is not yet in the full tide of our lives. Until art is necessary we shall not rival Florence. Perhaps art will become for us necessary, commanding, and suddenly, inexplicably, a great epoch will come to us. But deeper forces will bring the miracle about than institutes or societies can generate.

A JITNEY AND ITS USES.

The Springfield Republican causes us to fear that the time is coming when it will be easier for a cockney to understand a Cornishman's speech or for a Venetian to be understood in Calabria than for a citizen of Massachusetts to know the spoken word of Illinois.

The Republican says:

"'Jitney' is a new word which has not yet been heard much in this part of the country, but which may be destined to become very familiar. In Russia it means a small coin; in California and other western states it is the popular name of a small and convenient motor omnibus."

Are we dividing dialectically? We thought there was such an instinct for slang in America that even where folk might not know what coin a jitney was they'd be incapable of mistaking it for a small and convenient motor omnibus. Out here we might not know precisely what a quahaug was, but we'd be sure it wasn't a hat. Is the instinct for definition disappearing, or is New England merely Brahminic and hostile to colloquialisms, to the simple phrases of the plain people? Has the Republican ever heard of a bean—not to be baked—or a plunk, or an iron man, or two-bits or six-bits?

Whither are we drifting dialectically? Apart?

MORE PACIFIST WISDOM.

President Nicholas Murray Butler is a leader of the Carnegie-Jordan school of pacifism and offers a specimen of his ripe thought on defense matters to go along with the contributions of extremist pacifism to sound statecraft. Says Dr. Butler:

> As I stated to the reporter of the Evening Post, the army and navy of the United States have a distinguished record of service in the work of police, in the work of relief and philanthropy, and in the work of public sanitation and engineering. These are the proper fields of work for the army and navy of a democratic people. Surely no one will begrudge whatever may be necessary to make them strong and effective for these ends.

Here is a liberal concession to the demon militarism and a noteworthy new definition of the "proper fields of work for the army and navy of a democratic people." As Mr. Bryan has assured us that at the call of the president the republic before nightfall would have "a million men in arms," we see no reason why Dr. Butler's proposal to make the army and navy strong and effective for everything except what they were created for is as highly intelligent as Mr. Carnegie's proposal in case of invasion "to lure the enemy as far as possible into the interior and surround them with a hundred thousand sharpshooters."

EXTENDING THE PRIVILEGES OF THE BOULEVARDS.

In the disputations concerning the motor bus and its right to traverse the parks and boulevards, there seems to be one outstanding fact. Despite our opulence of lovely avenues and spacious green places, full participation in their beauties is denied to most of us because of their comparative inaccessibility. They may be reached, of course, but complete enjoyment of their charms is restricted to the inhabitants who have motors. We are not, perhaps, as hospitable to our guests as we might be; aside from the theaters, we do not do much to ease the anguish of the pilgrim who is afar from home. Two or three hours spent in the cheap and comfortable contemplation of our finest aspect might leave the traveler in a mood less hostile to our several shortcomings.

From the hurricane deck of a motor bus this privilege can be given to us and our visitors. The important question of tariff should be reduced to its least complexity by waiving all compensation to the park boards. A ride over a loop comprising the north, south, and west side parks and drives might easily be undertaken at a cost which would come under the picturesque classification of "jitney." Though our prevailing experts in transportation reveal a dubious skill with their illiberal methods and state of mind, the more urban administrators of the park systems should be able to assign this generous enterprise to men whose passion for dividends is mitigated by a degree of civic pride and loyalty.

HENRY V. AND GERMANY.

German scholars who were asked by the Berlin Tageblatt to recommend books for war time reading put four English works at the top of the list: Seeley's "The Expansion of England," McCarthy's "History of Our Own Times," Sidney Lee's "Life of Edward VII." and "Henry V."

The internationalism of letters survived the restrictions of war, although in the case of the books recommended each has its special application to present day thinking in Germany. In the case of the historical works this application is apparent, and the German scholars may have wished the German public to be more intimately informed of British policies without believing that this intimacy would result in greater affection for them.

Edward VII., the "peace maker" when he died, is regarded in Germany as the great war maker. The encirclement conspiracy which surrounded Germany with enemies was in German conception his work, and the unescapable consequence of that conspiracy this war. German opinion did not regard the triple entente as a defensive alliance for maintenance of the balance of power, but an offensive alliance for the destruction of Germany for the benefit of England. The natural ally of Germany, Russia, was alienated, and the enemy of Germany, France, was strengthened, and the proper moment for dropping pretense and hitting was waited. German opinion may be divided some day as to whether Germany precipitated the struggle, knowing that time was an ally of its enemies, but it is not likely soon to be reconciled to any other idea than that the encirclement conspiracy existed, and that Edward VII. was its creator.

The Henry V. of Shakspeare appeals to the Germans because of the nobility of his martial ardor. His time was the golden age of England. He is now embodied in the German emperor, and these are the golden days of Germany.

"All that Shakspeare says of his Henry," says Prof. Alois Brandl of the University of Berlin, "is applicable to our emperor, and the aggressive humor with which he treats the French does particular good in these days."

German admiration for the English of the times of Henry V. does not carry them into admiration for the English of today. The English were men then of beef and iron, not sanctimonious, not conscious of their virtues, not hunting gold. Thus the Germans, and "O God of battles! Steel my soldiers' hearts!" is a cry from the kaiser as well as from Henry.

"Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more," is a living sentiment in Germany.

HIGHER PASSENGER RATES.

The reply of Gov. Dunne to the Illinois railroad men who are seeking a readjustment of intrastate passenger rates is a model document. Gov. Dunne might have played demagogic politics in this matter or evaded an issue by ambiguous language. Instead he has honored himself and the people of the state alike by a statement which assumes the good sense and justice of informed public opinion and lays down the principle of right action in dealing with the carriers.

There should be a full and fair hearing of the railroads' case, and if it be shown that the present 2 cent rate is unremunerative a proper increase should be promptly and ungrudgingly granted. The 2 cent limitation was forced upon the carriers during a period of strong anti-railroad feeling and without a thorough examination of the basis of such a rate. In our neighbor state of Wisconsin a similar rate had been fixed by the legislature, although a commission free from any suspicion of railroad favoritism had recommended a higher rate after investigation and deliberation. It is also to be recalled that the interstate commerce commission, refusing the eastern freight rate application in the decision preceding the latest, indicated its belief in obiter dictum that passenger rates were too low.

These considerations give plausibility to the railroads' application, and their representatives have done well to act as they have with openness, relying upon reason and the fairness of public opinion. They should be given an unprejudiced hearing, free from politics, and if they establish their case a remunerative rate should be granted.

Editorial of the Day.

NO PRECEDENT.

[From the Milwaukee Sentinel.]

A London paper remarks that in view of our own high handed and illegal act in the Trent affair during the civil war, we Americans might consider ourselves estopped from complaining of the comparatively moderate and not illegal British exercise of the right of search and detention in this war.

That might be a sounder argument, but for the omission of an important factor.

It will be remembered that the British mail steamer Trent was forcibly stopped on the high seas by the American war vessel San Jacinto and boarded by an armed party, who seized two passengers, the confederate envoys, Mason and Slidell, who were carried as prisoners to the San Jacinto and thereafter imprisoned in one of the forts in Boston harbor.

Certainly a most high handed act on the part of that blunt sailor, Capt. Wilkes, which has had no parallel as yet in the exercise of the right of search for contraband in the present war.

But it just as certainly forms no precedent against our government. For our government recognized the illegality of the act, President Lincoln saying: "We cannot abandon our own principles. We shall have to give these men up and apologize for what we have done."

In short, the United States government was as ready to repair the wrong it did in the Trent case as it was firm in claiming redress for the wrong it suffered in the Alabama case.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

Royalty has figured largely in the fighting which has been in progress since the beginning of the war that commenced a little over six months ago. But notwithstanding the fact that several of the reigning houses of the old world have been placed in mourning by the death in battle of some of its members, among them being the Princes of Lippe and of Hess, the Queen of Spain's favorite brother, Prince Maurice of Battenberg, and the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia's son, Prince Oleg, yet there are but two or three instances of any royal personages having been taken prisoners.

Among the only ones, indeed, who are now in captivity is Prince Francis of Hohenzollern, one of the twin brothers of Queen Augustine Victoria of Portugal and who was serving as lieutenant on board the German cruiser Emden when it was sunk off the Cocos islands. He is interned at Gibraltar.

The others are Crown Prince Emmanuel of Salm-Salm and his wife, the imperial Archduchess Christine of Austria-Hungary, eldest daughter of Archduke Frederick, generalissimo of the military and naval forces of the dual empire.

The Prince of Salm-Salm, who holds commissions of captain of cavalry in the Austrian as well as in the Prussian army, and who lives for the most part at his fine château of Rhede, in Westphalia, happened to be visiting South Africa when the war broke out.

I understand that, being on the spot, he took part in the military operations of the German southwest African colonies against the English, and was likewise concerned in the rebellion of the Boer generals, Beyers and De Wet, against the British crown in South Africa. It was in connection with these activities that he was treated as a prisoner of war, and as his wife declined to leave him she is sharing his captivity.

Both are now on their way from the Cape of Good Hope, under a strong escort and as prisoners of war, to Gibraltar, where they are to be interned along with Prince Francis of Hohenzollern until the restoration of peace. One of the two official residences of the governor of Gibraltar has been assigned to their use.

The name of Salm-Salm is familiar in the United States through the morganatic marriage of an American girl to Prince Felix Salm-Salm, who, receiving a commission from Abraham Lincoln, served through the civil war, commanded the Sixty-eighth New York regiment, and emerged at the close of the conflict with the rank of brigadier general.

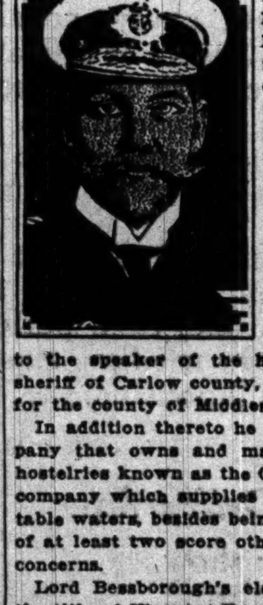
Prince Felix was a grand uncle of Prince Emmanuel and before coming to this country had seen active service in the Holstein campaign of 1849, being, however, compelled to resign his commission in the Prussian army and leave Europe on account of debts.

Prince Felix married without the consent of his family, and consequently morganatically, at Washington on Aug. 30, 1862, in St. Patrick's church, a Miss Agnes Leclercq of New York, orphan daughter of Col. Leclerq. She was staying at the time at Washington with her sister Delia, wife of Edmund Johnson, nephew of Andrew Johnson, the president of the United States. She accompanied her husband wherever possible during the war, and her services to the sick and wounded soldiers on the battlefield caused Gov. Yates of Illinois, in 1863, to grant her a captain's commission and pay.

At the close of the war Prince Felix and his American wife made their way to Mexico, in order to join the waning cause of Emperor Maximilian. The prince was captured with Emperor Maximilian and would have shared his fate had it not been for the intervention of the president of the United States, at the instance of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Johnson, at Washington.

On the prince's return to Europe his family refused to recognize his marriage or his wife. He volunteered for service in the Prussian army on the outbreak of the Franco-German war and fell at the battle of Gravelotte, in 1870, leaving his widow dependent upon a small pension of about $1,000, accorded to her by the Austrian imperial family in recognition of her own and her husband's services to Emperor Maximilian.

Finding her position difficult in Germany and Austria, where she was debarred by law from styling herself Princess Salm-Salm, she married in 1876 Charles Heneage, a one time member of the English diplomatic service and a younger brother of Lord Heneage. The union did not turn out happily and before long they separated. They were never divorced and she died as Mrs. Heneage.



King George has bestowed upon the Earl of Bessborough the blue ribbon of the Irish Order of St. Patrick, left vacant by the death of Field Marshal Lord Roberts. Lord Bessborough, who is the head of the house of Ponsonby, was one of the first members of the peerage to go into business. He is a many sided man, having been in turn an officer of the royal navy, on the retired list of which he still figures as a commander, a member of the bar, then a number of years private secretary to the speaker of the house of commons, high sheriff of Carlow county, and justice of the peace for the county of Middlesex.

In addition thereto he is president of the company that owns and manages the long list of hostelries known as the Gordon hotels, and of the company which supplies one of the most popular table waters, besides being chairman and director of at least two score other flourishing industrial concerns.

Lord Bessborough's eldest son and heir bears the title of Viscount Duncannon and is married to the very pretty daughter of Baron de Neuflize, regent of the Bank of France and head of the great Paris banking house of Neuflize.

Both Lord Bessborough and his son, Lord Duncannon, possess the good looks for which the old Cumberland house of Ponsonby has always been celebrated, and which have contributed in no small degree to the marked favor which they have always enjoyed at the English court for the last 100 years or more.

SIX MONTHS AFTER.

When the Japanese went to war with Russia they guessed that the best way to keep their army effective was to go to much trouble to protect them against typhoid. That guess was a good one. They guessed that their men could keep healthy on a slim diet composed largely of rice. That guess was a poor one, as from it there followed an epidemic of beriberi.

The Russians guessed that a war waged in Manchuria would be attended by cholera and plague. They based their preparations on that basis. They guessed poorly. Cholera and plague did not seriously disturb the plans of their army.

For a generation the army sanitarians of Europe have watched war experiences all over the world. On these observations they based a series of guesses for the present war. The war has been in progress almost six months. It has run through a part of a summer, all of a fall, and it is now in the midst of a winter. The only markedly different type of weather remaining to be experienced is the spring thaw and flood.

In the history of wars spring has not been an unhealthy season. They have gone far enough to make it possible to judge roughly as to some of the pre-war guesses. So far as cholera and plague are concerned, the guess was correct. In spite of the fact that Russia, Turkey, and the Balkan states are engaged, there has been no great disablement from cholera.

Cholera is ever present in the far east. Whenever an army is called into it there will go a large number of cholera carriers—healthy men infected with the cholera bacilli. Yet measures for the control of cholera are so well understood and so easily applied that no army within the last quarter of a century has been greatly incapacitated by cholera. Plague is even less of a menace.

The little information available is to the effect that typhoid is not proving troublesome. The world is in debt to the United States for its knowledge of how to prevent typhoid in its armies. In 1898 we taught them how not to do it. Since 1911 we have taught them how to do it. Combining what we taught them with what the Japs taught them, the warring nations of Europe have succeeded in protecting their armies from disablement by typhoid.

Many of the guesses as to wounds have gone wrong. Missiles have changed so, methods of fighting have changed so, that preconceived opinions as to wounds have not worked out. The notion was that the high speed steel jacketed bullet would bore a small, clean hole which would heal readily without infection.

Where this calculation has fallen down is that it did not take account of certain facts. There are at least two types of bullets in use by the armies. The one with the blunter nose has a greater tendency to keep nose first and make a clean hole. The one with a pointed nose has a greater tendency to whirl over and enter the soldier with its base first, or sideways, or slanting.

So much depends on the speed of the bullet. Even though a bullet leaves the muzzle at a high velocity in time it slows up. Battle lines having been moved farther apart, and close fighting not being in vogue, the wounds are being made by bullets traveling at low velocity. A steel cased bullet (so-called) retains its boring shape until it meets a hard substance. If a steel case bullet strikes a stone or any hard substance it is deformed.

Little fighting is being done in the open. As soon as a line is occupied the men dig into the ground. Men are shooting from behind obstructions and from within trenches. Only a small proportion of the wounded are struck by bullets that have not previously struck some deforming body.

From every side there come charges that the opposition is using dumdum bullets. A dumdum bullet is one with a soft nose. The theory was that clothing, skin, any obstruction, would flatten the soft nose and thus cause a tearing wound. An embankment or stone wall will do for a steel jacketed bullet what a coat did for the dumdum.

The wounds are being found to be ragged and the bullets removed are as much flattened as were dumdums. Finally, a large proportion of the wounds are being made by pieces of shrapnel. Shrapnel wounds are always jagged and irregular.

So much for the reasons. From each army there comes the same report—the wounds are infected. The two worst infections reported are tetanus and gas bacillus.

In certain districts where lockjaw has always been abundant the wounded soldiers develop lockjaw to an unusual degree. It happens that a part of the long battle line of the west lies in a district in which the soil is badly infested with tetanus bacilli. While every army reports a disproportionate amount of lockjaw, the especial complaint is from those nations whose armies are fighting along this line.

A part of this effect is the result of practices taught the common soldiers for several years past. Realizing that in the next war the wounded would be quite inaccessible, the custom has been to teach the soldier to apply a first aid treatment himself.

It is almost a custom to seal over a wound. Sometimes this is done with collodion, sometimes with a gauze dressing.

In the main this is a good practice, though some details of it will be modified before the next war. However, the wounded man with his wound sealed up frequently goes on fighting and ofttimes does not report himself as disabled or for some other reason goes for days without hospital care.

It is in these closed wounds that tetanus and gas bacillus infections are showing themselves.

Just what to do to prevent lockjaw is known, though under the circumstances it is difficult to apply the knowledge.

As rapidly as possible provision is being made to give a preventive dose of antitoxin to every wounded soldier. Where there are so many million soldiers and the wounded mount into the hundreds of thousands, it has not been possible to provide enough antitoxin to get it administered.

In the middle of September Dr. Roux reported that the Pasteur institute had delivered 160,000 doses of tetanus antitoxin to the French army. The number of doses that should have been used runs well into the millions.

To add to the difficulties of the situation, it is the custom for wounded soldiers to remain in the trenches. The first aid dressing becomes soiled in a short while. Perhaps not until the symptoms of lockjaw have started does the soldier crawl out of his underground retreat to seek aid.

Those who read Irvin Cobb's "Red Dragon," as well as the physicians who read the weekly war letters published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, will see another factor in the lockjaw situation.

Long trains of dirty freight cars, stock cars often, are used to transport the wounded from the front to the base hospitals. As the railroad is overburdened with soldier trains and supply trains, bound for the front, and as these are given the right of way, the sick trains are held for hours on sidetracks. Days elapse between the time of the first dressing near the battle line and the clean operating rooms of the base hospitals.

In consequence the wounded soldiers, as Cobb saw them roll off the trains, were in a badly neglected state, and the dressings on their wounds were filthy.

The great surprise to war surgeons has been gas gangrene. Few of these surgeons had ever seen any catch-as-catch-can surgery. They had been trained in clean surgery. Their experience had been in tiled operating rooms with complete equipment. They knew nothing about ovariotomy with a pocketknife and a tin dipper, or any other operation with improvised equipment. They knew clean wounds.

Directly the wounded began to arrive, they found themselves face to face with a new experience—gas bacillus infection, or gas gangrene. This arose from infection of the wounds by dirt.

Some of it is due to the fact that it has been the custom to leave soiled dressings on the wounds for days. More of it is due to the fact that missiles have carried dirt into the wounds to an unheard of degree.

They are treating these wounds by injecting peroxide of hydrogen into the wound and into the tissues around it.

This type of infection is causing them to treat wounds more openly. If dirt has been driven into the wound and its complete removal is not possible, it is better not to seal up the wound. Oozing will wash out some of the dirt. The gas bacillus will not develop in the presence of air. As the dirt is driven into many of the wounds where men fight in trenches, the method of treating wounds is liable to veer away from wound sealing.

Dr. Hartman says that in his experience gangrene has developed in "small tortuous wounds deep in the tissues." Therefore he treats beginning gas gangrene by opening up the course of the projectile, removing all foreign bodies, draining from end to end, and irrigating with peroxide of hydrogen.

I think it is the general agreement that the base hospitals have been established at points too far remote from the battle line, or perhaps, to put it differently, the number of hospitals close to the line has not been great enough. Before reaching these hospitals, the wounded pass through too many different hands, and some arrive in a state of great neglect.

The trend is toward the development of a motor ambulance system, by which the wounded can be transported within a few hours to base hospitals, removed far enough to escape the limitations as well as the dangers that prevail near the front, at the same time near enough to receive the wounded within less than a day after injury.

In spite of the disappointments that have arisen from infected wounds, where cleaner wounds were expected, the results are good as compared with those in previous wars. Czerny of Heidelberg reports that 37.5 per cent of those cared for at their hospitals have been cured, and many of them are back at the front. Only 6.5 per cent remain unfit for duty.

Casin reported that in a group of 158 wounded who reached the base hospital within forty-eight hours after being wounded all were cured, although the wounds in some were severe. Among the groups of men who were four or five days on trains before reaching the hospital the death rate ranged from 10 to 20 per cent.

The English report that practically every wound in soldiers transported to England has been found infected, but the infections are generally local and mild. Few show signs of general sepsis.

One of the points on which the guess was not wrong was that the mortality among physicians in this war would be very high. Disease is sparing them. The Journal has a report from Germany that but one physician at the front has been disabled by disease. But the percentage of the wounded is fearfully high.

The number of physicians killed in the German army is many times the number killed in the war of 1870-71. From all the armies the same reports come. The work of succor must be done above ground in great part. The missiles are farreaching. The indications are that no arm of the service will suffer more heavily than those theoretically protected by the Red Cross.

PICKING THE TEETH.

L. A. G. writes: "Kindly give your opinion of the nauseating habit so many people have of picking teeth before others. I lunch at a leading club, and, having a sensitive stomach, it is trying to bear this from those who should know better. Isn't it surprising?"

REPLY.

All the matter needs is agitation. Your note will cause some offenders to stop.

Dentists do not approve of it. They hold that a little time after each meal should be set aside to cleaning the mouth. Casual picking in the presence of company does not fill the bill.

PROBABLY CLOT IN VEIN.

A. M. writes: "The muscles (or something) below the calf of my right leg are hard and sore to the touch and the skin is red. Varicose veins used to be on the place."

REPLY.

It seems probable that one of your varicose veins is the seat of a clot due to inflammation of the vein wall. See your physician.

CONCERNING SIDEWALK ASSESSMENTS.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I own property facing Ninety-third street between Houston and Baltimore avenues. When I laid sidewalks in front of my property no other property owners shared the expense. Now I have a notice that a sixteen foot sidewalk is to be constructed on both sides of Houston avenue from Eighty-eighth to Ninety-third streets and the amount charged to me is $26.30. Why don't the property owners on Houston avenue pay for their own sidewalks, just as I had to pay for mine on Ninety-third street?

NELS SWANSON,
3048 East Ninety-third street.

The spread is made in accordance with the terms of a decision of our Supreme court in the case of the village of Glencoe vs. Gertrude Uthe et al., which somewhat changed the method of spreading sidewalk assessments. Prior to the decision in question the proportionate share of cost of intersections only was assessed as indirect. Under the present method a part of the cost of the sidings on corner lots is added to this indirect.

GARBAGE REMOVAL ON BURLING STREET.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is there not some way to keep Burling street clean between Diversey parkway and Oakdale avenue?

EMILY MORTON, 2922 Burling street.

There is no alley in the rear of the Morton residence, consequently garbage and ashes must be collected from street. Some of the householders on Burling street between Diversey parkway and Oakdale avenue have been negligent about removing the empty cans as promptly as they should. In order to relieve the situation the ward superintendent has assigned a helper to carry the cans in off the street when they have been emptied. This would do away with any further cause for complaint.

WALTER G. LEININGER,
Superintendent of Streets.

NO PETITION MADE FOR PARK.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me if there will be a public park in the vicinity of Wallace and Ninety-first streets. A READER.

The question of the location of a park in this locality has not been presented to the south park commissioners.

WIFE CANNOT SELL FURNITURE

Chicago, Jan. 28.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am separated from my wife and children, not legally, but contribute to their support. She moved from our former place of residence without my knowledge. Has she the right to sell or dispose of the furniture without consulting me? G. P. L.

Your wife has no right to sell furniture which belongs to you for the reason that she is living away from you.

LEASE IS AUTOMATICALLY RENEWED.

Geneseo, Ill., Jan. 28.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. I have a house leased in town for one year, which expires on March 1. It is held here that in the event I continue to live there for one month after that time, pay one month's rent, that the lease is automatically renewed for a year, that I must keep the place and the owner cannot remove me. Is this correct? 2. A man is caught stealing chickens from a chicken yard and is shot by the owner of the chickens. Can the owner be punished in case the man is wounded or killed? J. H. W.

1. Yes, unless some new agreement is made with the landlord as to your tenancy.

2. The owner of the chickens has the right to use all reasonable means to protect his property. Whether he was justified in shooting depends on the facts of this particular case. If this robber came in the night, it is probable that the owner of the chickens can justify his action.

MARRIAGE APPEARS TO BE UNLAWFUL.

Oak Park, Ill., Feb. 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is a common law marriage legal and binding in Texas? The man contracted common law marriage in El Paso, Tex., acknowledged the woman as his wife two years, left her, and contracted marriage in Indiana, and is now living in Illinois. The second wife knows of the first and has been advised to leave him. PERPLEXED.

It is possible that a valid common law marriage was contracted in Texas. However, we cannot advise as to this on this brief statement of facts. If a common law wife is living and undivorced, the Indiana marriage is unlawful.

MARRIAGE OF FIRST COUSINS.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Two cousins after marrying in Milwaukee return at once to Illinois to reside. Is such a marriage legal in the law courts of Illinois? L. T. H.

Since 1913 marriages of first cousins have been prohibited under the law of Wisconsin and any such marriage contracted in Wisconsin since that time is invalid. Marriages contracted by first cousins in Wisconsin prior to such prohibition are valid and will be recognized in Illinois.

MUST PAY INHERITANCE TAX.

Quincy, Ill., Jan. 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A man died without relatives and willed his home to a widow neighbor who had taken care of him for a number of years. Will she have to pay an inheritance tax on this property? MRS. E. H.

This widow as the beneficiary under this will must pay an inheritance tax on the value of this cottage over $500. From $500 up to $10,000 the rate is 3 per cent; from $10,000 to $20,000, 4 per cent.

ENGLAND OBEYING GERMAN-MADE LAW.

Riverside, Jan. 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Some of your readers who remember the events of 1861-5 are not much impressed with the lectures English writers give Americans now on the "duties of neutrals in time of war." They have not forgotten that while loudly asserting her neutrality England in 1861-4 built confederate privateers in English shipyards, the same being largely financed by members of the English parliament; or how these same privateers were fitted up with guns, supplied with ammunition and manned with crews, largely English, after they had passed the "three mile limit" of supposed neutrality.

If today England asserts that American export of copper to neutral ports only serves "to prolong the war," she ought to know, because her active participation in supplying the confederacy with contraband materials through the neutral ports of the West Indies kept the confederacy alive for its last two years. However, if American objectors to England's present interpretation of the rights of belligerents will only read the international agreement published less than three years ago as the "Declaration of London," they will find that all the diplomatic representatives of the European states agreed to these very methods, Germany having demanded them and England only accepting them under violent protest at home. Whatever the administration at Washington may say, England is only carrying out the plain instructions of the declaration and that, in its substance, was "Made in Germany." An hour's study in any good library will convince any doubter of this fact.

RUM AND THE STATE.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I cannot refrain from thanking you for your editorial, "Rum in Politics." Columns might be written and not say as much as the sentence, "Rum will not permit the house to organize on partisan lines, and partisan lines will not permit it to organize on liquor lines." That's the whole thing in a nutshell.

Also this sentence is very true as to the organization of the house: "Rum Republicans would be more at home with rum Democrats, and dry Democrats would be more at home with dry Republicans, but the hypocrisy of statecraft will not permit this honest division to take place; consequently we have the deadlock."

This is exactly the situation so long as the matter of organization of the house is at issue. When this is finished rum Republicans and rum Democrats in the main will work together on all questions where rum and "jackpot" interests are involved; also dry Republicans and dry Democrats will work together for the good of the state, not only on the liquor question but others as well. It becomes a question of the struggle between the good and evil forces in the state epitomized within the walls of the capitol building.

If the better element in the legislature surrenders to rum leadership, and the rum champions become the dominant element in the legislature—then heaven save the state.

WHAT THE TEST IS.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—THE TRIBUNE contains a news item that Cardinal Gibbons in a letter written in Baltimore said he earnestly hoped President Wilson would veto the immigration bill on account of the literacy test clause which it contains. Cardinal Gibbons is reported to have said: "I am convinced that it will bar the ingress of great numbers of desirable, prospective citizens who, though unable to read or write our language, may be fairly well educated in their own, and at least may possess health, strength, virtue, good sense, business ability, and a desire to succeed with high honor."

At a noon meeting at the City club the president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor stated that the literacy test clause in the immigration bill provides for the exclusion of any person over 16 years old who is unable to read forty simple words in any language which he may select. If this is a fact it would certainly not operate to exclude such persons as mentioned by Cardinal Gibbons.

INJUSTICE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY TAX.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I paid taxes recently on a personal property assessment of $8,700, which amounted to $156.63. This, of course, appealed to me as being quite excessive when compared to real estate assessments, and since then the opportunity has been afforded me to compare the two classes of assessments in an equitable manner, having been requested by a client to look into the merits of a piece of income property priced at $8,700 also. As this property has a net return of over 7 per cent after paying taxes amounting to $77.99, renting for $85 per month, and the personal property earned but 3 per cent, less taxes, which leaves about 1.2 per cent net after paying taxes, the discrepancy apparent on the face is of such a nature that it brings a thought of injustice very strongly to one's mind. Under such conditions, is it surprising that such a person exists as a tax delinquent? Not to my mind or way of thinking; only surprise that there are not more.

Talk.

By Robert Herrick.

WHATEVER else the war may have done for us, at least it has given us all something to talk about. I say this seriously, gratefully. In certain highly sophisticated circles already may be "bad form" to talk war all the time and nothing else, but in the average walk of life to which most of us are restricted the war still remains, and will remain, it is probable, for months and years to come the staple of impersonal human intercourse and intellectual exchange. It is the one overwhelming fact in our consciousness. And we needed it! Conversation among us Americans for now these many years has been a contradiction in terms; there has been little or no real conversation. Plenty of chatter, gossip, and personalities takes its place, but these are mere grunts of human intercourse, scarcely more spiritual than animal grunts.

There are obvious reasons why Americans talk without producing conversation. For one we are all so busy that we think we haven't time to waste intellectually. To talk intelligently is like playing chess for amusement; if one has to put out so much mental power in a game he might as well be doing something "useful." Another reason is that good talk bases itself on some generalization and we are as afraid of generalizations as of germs. Women don't like generalizations because they lure them into the altitude of the abstract, where they feel the cold, and practical men suspect every generalization of concealing a fallacy or of "getting them in for something." A fellow who is fond of generalizing is "an idle talker," not much of a business man surely. "Let your conversation be yea, yea, nay, nay," for beyond that lies the unknown.

The gossip habit kills conversation and also the story telling habit. I don't know which of these two is the worse. Women are more likely to take refuge from inanition in the first and men in the second. How many promising dinners or other pleasant gatherings of nimble wits have been ruined by a "good story"? Some fatuous fellow, deluded with the idea that the story teller maketh his hostess' heart glad, remarks, "That reminds me," and the occasion is ruined. It is like flinging down a gage which some other equally boresome fool will hasten to pick up. He is fatally reminded of what he ought to have forgotten, and capping stories kills conversation. There are not above a dozen "good stories" in the world, and they have been told more or less badly in every known language, tricked out with all sorts of lame inventions. After a little experience the listener can assign the "good story" to its class at the start, and the sole entertainment then to be got from the recital is watching for variants.

The easy refuge from the story telling habit is gossip, which at its best is a primitive form of psychological fiction fit only for children and servants.

Now, many of these American men who babble stale "good stories" or sit dumb and eat their food in a graceless silence, listening half contemptuously to some woman's gossip, have a great deal to tell, if they would—have within them the real stuff of conversation. They have seen much and done much of themselves. Presumably, also, they have both felt and reflected in the course of their busy lives. But of all this which they have within them they are as jealous as misers of their money. Sometimes I have said to myself, "They will relax after the women leave the table—then we shall hear some real talk." But no! With feet stretched out, cigar in mouth, coffee cup in hand, the American man sighs and lapses into silent content. Somebody then remarks, "That's a good drive you made off the ninth—what was it, two seventy-five?" or "Have you seen Jim's new car?" or purchance, "I hear Joe's boy made the team."

They are probably doing better among the women. Under the leadership of an ambitious hostess they may even venture upon a little intellectual conversation about some popular play or Shaw's latest paradox.

In years gone by, in the temerity of youth, I have dared to beard the American lion of a business man with some simple inquiry about business, usually to be rebuffed by a stony stare or a suspicious glance. Why was I trying to make him "give himself away"? Didn't I know that the first principle of the successful business man is never to talk? First, never to talk about what he doesn't know from actual experience, because he might make himself ridiculous; secondly, never to talk about what he does know, because he might be "giving something away."

Yet the best stuff for conversation is what one doesn't know about, because then the mind is freed from responsibility and gives rein to fancy, invention, embroidery of all sorts. And the next best subject is what one does know from actual experience, because this reveals the treasures of personality, the true self. These honest men of affairs secretively hid the treasures of their experience from one another. I suspect they hid their ideas from themselves. They drank their coffee and smoked in a portentous, bovine silence—or told more stories, alas!

Of course such dumb, suspicious creatures never venture on a generalization about life, and generalizations, as I have said before, are all in all the true stuff of good talk, because, like a ball of yarn, they begin nowhere and lead on and on into the unknown. Ultimately one must get below the surfaces, down to some of the vital fundamentals of belief in which we all lie bedded.

That is why the war is such an inexhaustible mine of real conversation. It is not the exciting details of battles and slaughters, of the campaigns carried on behind an impenetrable veil of secrecy. There is not much substance in the press reports from day to day to talk about. The actual events can be disposed of usually in a few words—the sinking of a ship or two somewhere, a few yards of trenches taken in Belgium, a position gained by the allies and positively contradicted from Berlin, or the last report from Petrograd of the decisive battle about to be fought in Poland. Earlier in the war there was more detail, more chance for speculation; one put faith in the ornate Russian imagination. But now the war has fallen into the routine of its business, so to speak, and in talking about it one must seek generalizations, ideas that are concerned with it.

For example, did Germany start the war? There is enough in that simple question to keep talk going for many years to come. Already a vast literature has grown up on the topic, which is accumulating each day, and this provides ammunition for endless discussion. Again, would England have declared war if Germany had not violated the neutrality of Belgium? That is better than the first, because obviously nobody knows—not even England—whether she would have felt compelled to assist France and Russia if Germany had been wise enough to avoid giving her a splendid cause for which to fight. There is no way of settling such a question except by hypothetical argument, which, as every American is aware, is the readiest means of making endless talk. Best of all generalizations, perhaps, is this: War is a permanent, necessary human institution. Here there are absolutely no limits, because few people can ever agree upon what are necessary human characteristics, and women can take part in this discussion as profitably as men. They are as well equipped to render a wise verdict as men, and naturally are even more interested than men are in the answer.

These are but a few of the best known themes that the war is offering to us. There are more emotional topics, like the various atrocity charges, the Belgian and the Polish tragedies, and the measures that might bring about peace. But the deeper themes are the more fruitful, the issues that test the minds and the characters of all.

Ideas, then, are the substance of good conversation. No matter where the stream of talk starts, if it be in the spring of a general idea it will flow down into some mighty river of human interest and carry us fruitfully on. It will make us think. It will evoke in the excitement of its evolution what we little suspect in ourselves, feelings and thoughts that usually lie hidden beneath the commonplaces of our lives.

Thus the European war has been the greatest educational impulse that this generation has had, first to realize that an important part of the earth's interests still remain outside of the United States, next to try to understand what is unfamiliar and intricate, and finally to look at life objectively, not merely as it affects pleasantly or unpleasantly our own limited consciousness.

All the reasons and issues of this world struggle lead directly to fundamentals, to our deepest fears and hopes and beliefs. Occasionally it is well to search fundamentals and look life in the face, even to talk about such things. And so I welcome all this war talk. It gets me away from dancing and sport, gossip and travel, twaddle and good stories. It gets me out into the vast and troubled sea of the world life where realities lie. And we can all pick up something worth keeping out there.

A Christmas Anti-Climax.

The [illegible] Times

An Englishman who joined the French foreign legion at the beginning of the war wrote to the London Times the following account of his Christmas morning.

I WAS on guard instantly on arrival and, incredible as it may seem, at the end of two hours I went inside a lean-to and instantly fell fast asleep, though the bullets were crashing against the walls from the German trenches and the shells bursting. I was so exhausted. The 21st. five shells fell in our orchard, two covering me with dirt; was firing all day during the five days, carefully, methodically at popping heads, but very difficult to see result through narrow loophole; two days we were shifted into another position and slept in "dugouts."

Shall I ever forget this Christmas day! My two hours ended at midnight, a bell rang in the ruined village, and instantly a great volley, preconcerted, from all our line, our way of heralding Christmas with a message of "Peace on earth, and good will toward men"; up from 2 to 4 and again 6 to 8.

Slowly dawn rose and there I was with rifle between two loopholes, the ground white with frost, and so great the contrast—I was feeding a tame robin at my feet with breadcrumbs, the only Christmassy thing on this Christmas morn.

On my left what remained of a once beautiful old church, I could see a lovely old oak carved screen and pulpit all shattered, every house ruined, a little flock of chaffinches, two bullfinches, and some sparrows joined my robin, just at dawn; suddenly I heard deep singing on my extreme right louder and louder as it passed along the line towards me; it was the stirring strain of the "Marseillaise"; we joined in with our loudest our little lot in the orchard and the French regiment took it up on our left; how wild and beautiful it sounded in the semi-darkness, then it died out, and from the German trenches came the answering "Watch on the Rhine."

My chum and I agreed not to fire that day, but, looking through the loophole, I plainly saw two Germans carrying a plank. I took careful aim and planted three shots in. I saw the plank fall—that was all!

Fight of Allies Gives Support to Erin's Cause.

BY T. P. O'CONNOR.
[FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]
(Copyright, 1915, by Central News.)

LONDON.—I am favored by American friends with extracts from some American newspapers, and occasionally I receive letters, some eulogistic, some abusive. I am driven to the conclusion that there is considerable difference of opinion among the people of my race in the United States on the present war.

This strikes an Irishman living in Great Britain as rather surprising, for among us there is no difference of opinion. There may be 100 Sinn Feiners in the 300,000 Irish people in London; perhaps twenty in Liverpool; perhaps twenty in Glasgow; but outside this infinitesimal section the Irish in their 2,000,000 are to a man and a woman for the allies.

I have addressed meetings, both public and private. I have not yet come across a single case of dissent from my views. Some of the meetings might well be called jingo, so fierce was their tone against Germany.

All of them have been crowded. What is a much more unmistakable demonstration of Irish opinion in Great Britain, Irishmen have joined the British army in great numbers, at least to the number of 50,000. In Newcastle-on-Tyne, 2,000 Irishmen joined the first weeks of the war; then came the permission to form Irish battalions there. Four thousand more Irishmen have joined these battalions.

I propose to set forth calmly, even frigidly, the reasons which have brought about this extraordinary unanimity of opinion among us. I am but writing what I have already said at these gatherings, public and private.

I have asked my countrymen to consider the issues of this war from two points of view—from the point of the principles of an Irish Nationalist, and from that of the interests of Ireland, and especially of home rule.

What are the principles of an Irish Nationalist? The first and supreme principle is, of course, the principle of nationality. That again involves respect as great for the nationality of small as of big nations. Apply that principle to the present struggle and I find that the principle of nationality is violated by Germany and defended by the allies all through Europe.

I come to the second branch of the question, namely, the interests of Ireland and of home rule. First let me call attention to the fact that the attitude of the Irish leaders from O'Connell to Parnell and from Parnell to Redmond has always been the same; and that attitude has been that if Ireland received home rule it would respond by abandoning its old position of antagonism and would become a loyal and contented member like other self-governed communities of the British empire.

Addressing a vast and enthusiastic gathering in Limerick recently, John E. Redmond recalled these words of Charles Stewart Parnell:

"If home rule be carried into law the Irish people will cheerfully accept all the duties and responsibilities assigned to them and will justly value the position they have won in the imperial system."

Mr. Redmond himself, of course, and every other Irish leader, has used similar language. Our home rule movement has always been a constitutional movement; it is not and it has never professed to be a separatist movement. We should therefore flagrantly violate all the pledges on which we have obtained home rule—and we have obtained it—if we did not give loyalty in return for liberty.

However, suppose we swallowed our pledges as easily as Germany swallowed those with regard to Belgium—what would be the consequences to Ireland and to home rule? I have no hesitation in saying that the home rule act would become a scrap of paper and that both home rule and Ireland would be drowned in blood.

England has given home rule to a friendly Ireland; it would refuse it to a hostile Ireland, and especially to an Ireland hostile when England was passing through its greatest hour of travail, and when England in addition, from our as well as the English point of view, was fighting the battle of nationality of small nations and of freedom.

It is represented by some German and even Irish writers in America that this gigantic risk would be worth taking because Ireland would be able to offset the enmity of England by the friendship of Germany.

What does this language really mean? Does it mean that Germany is to invade Ireland and conquer it from England? If it did, what then?

It is impossible that Germany should conquer Ireland from England. The British fleet stands between the Irish shores and any expedition that Germany could send to Ireland. All that would happen would be that the people of Ireland would be subjected on the one side, like Scarborough, to the German shells, and on the other side to the vengeance of the British army fighting against an enemy at home which tried to stab it in the back when it was most in danger.

Some Irishmen in America, I gather, are asking whether Ireland should forget the wrongs which England has inflicted on it in the past. My answer is that every generation must live in the conditions and in the spirit of its own time.

In the last twenty-five years there have grown up a new Ireland and a new England, an Ireland where 300,000 peasant proprietors own the soil they till and are advancing hourly in prosperity, in health, in self-confidence, and laying the foundations of a happy, contented and well to do nation; an England in which democracy has won successive triumphs over the control of England by the selfishness, the arrogance, and the cruelty of aristocratic government.

The England of today is incapable of inflicting upon Ireland the hideous wrongs that belonged to an epoch when the English democracy had as little control over the policy of its rulers as Ireland itself.

The Irish Nationalists are all democrats, and our faith is great in democracy as the force that will ultimately bring peace, freedom, and justice to mankind. We have found confirmation of these convictions in the fact that from the moment England became democratic Ireland began to advance to the light; until today it has its self-government embodied in an act on the British statute book.

We promised to make peace with the English democracy. We mean not only to keep our promise, but we also find it easy to do so in view of what our country owes during the last quarter of a century to the enlightenment and the good will of the English democracy.

In my frequent visits to America I have had the experience of hearing some of my race make speeches in which they announced that Ireland could only win home rule by force—at the cannon's mouth and on the battlefield. The men who uttered such heroic sentiments had the advantage of both ignorance of Irish conditions and their separation from the Irish battlefield by the Atlantic ocean.

If a rebellion were justifiable in Ireland—and in my opinion and in that of ever Irishman at home who is not a fit candidate for a lunatic asylum a rebellion would be an insane crime—there are no materials for it. It could be drowned in blood in a few hours and with the final results that Ireland would be at once robbed of home rule and subjected perhaps to another century of castle rule instead of home rule.

There seems to be a strange misunderstanding of the character and the methods of the movement for which Parnell and the modern Irish leaders have been responsible. You would think from some speeches that it had been won at the point of the bayonet and from a frightened enemy in England, running for its life.

It is a ridiculous travesty of the historic and indisputable facts. Not a home ruler ever carried a gun till six months ago; not a shot was fired.

Home rule was a great constitutional movement, adopting constitutional methods, and it won, not because it frightened, but because it convinced England; and England was convinced because, with all its faults and errors—mainly in the past and under less democratic conditions—England had faith in freedom and enjoyed free institutions.

Home rule came not from a frightened, a hostile, but from a convinced and a friendly and sympathetic England.

For years I have seen Englishmen give to the cause of Ireland their time, their money, their health, and often the sacrifice of some reforms in their own land on which their hearts were most set.

For the last three years I have seen the biggest men of business in England walk wearily through the division lobbies whenever Ireland's fate was at stake, not for personal reputation, for most of them remained silent and in abandonment or neglect at least of their great businesses and of their distant homes.

On Lloyd-George finance, on Welsh disestablishment, the Liberal ranks often wavered and sometimes broke. Home rule had only to come again on the parliamentary scene, and disunion at once disappeared and the Liberal ranks were once again solid, enthusiastic, and eager. To forget these things of today and to dwell on a dead and irrevocable past is a stupid anachronism.

Finally, we in these countries, especially we in Great Britain, have better means of appraising the political situation than those who are far away from either the realities or the perils.

Exulting Cry of the Danube

THIS poem, by William Edmonstoune Aytoun, although intended to describe a condition that prevailed at the time the poem was written, nearly seventy years ago, yet describes also with remarkable fidelity what is happening or is about to happen under our own eyes. The exulting cry of the Danube to Father Euxine as it rushes into the arms of the Black sea describes accurately enough what must be the delight of the ancient gods at the present condition of the followers of Christ. Aytoun's work, as illustrated by his lays, deserves to be better known than it seems to be. He was professor of rhetoric and belles lettres at the University of Edinburgh when this poem was written, probably in 1848. He is one of those numerous English writers who, by his own confession, though "he followed the law, yet he could never overtake it." If he had overtaken it, we should probably be without this ballad, as well as others, most stirring ballads in the English language.

EDMUND J. JAMES, President University of Illinois.

DANUBE AND THE EUXINE.

"Danube, Danube! wherefore com'st thou
Red and raging to my caves?
Wherefore leap thy swollen waters
Madly through the broken waves?
Wherefore is thy tide so sullied
With a hue unknown to me;
Wherefore dost thou bring pollution
To the old and sacred sea?"

"Ha! rejoice, old Father Euxine!
I am brimming full and red;
Glorious tokens do I bring thee
From my distant channel bed.
I have been a Christian river,
Dull and slow, this many a year,
Rolling down my torpid waters
Through a silence morne and drear;
Have not felt the tread of armies
Trampling on my reedy shore;
Have not heard the trumpet calling,
Or the cannon's echoing roar;
Only listened to the laughter
From the village and the town,
And the church bells, ever jangling,
As the weary day went down.
So I lay and sorely pondered
On the days, long since gone by,
When my old primeval forests
Echoed to the war man's cry;
When the race of Thor and Odin
Held their battles by my side,
And the blood of man was mingling
Warmly with my chilly tide.

"Father Euxine! thou rememb'rest
How I brought thee tribute then—
Swollen corpses, gashed and gory,
Heads and limbs of slaughtered men?
Father Euxine! be thou joyful!
I am running red once more—
Not with heathen blood, as early,
But with gallant Christian gore.
For the old times are returning,
And the cross is broken down,
And I hear the tocsin sounding
In the village and the town;
And the glare of burning cities
Soon shall light me on my way—
Ha! my heart is big and jocund
With the draft I drank today.
Ha! I feel my strength awakened,
And my brethren shout to me:
Each is leaping red and joyous
To his own awaiting sea.

"Rhine and Elbe are plunging downward
Through their wild, anarchic land;
Everywhere are Christians falling
By their brother Christians' hand!
Yea, the old times are returning,
And the olden gods are here!
Take my tribute, Father Euxine,
To thy waters dark and drear!
Therefore come I with my torrents,
Shaking castle, crag, and town;
Therefore, with my arms uplifted,
Sweep I herd and herdsman down;
Therefore leap I to thy bosom
With a loud, triumphal roar—
Greet me, greet me, Father Euxine—
I am Christian stream no more!"

Invents a Novel Piano Playing Mechanism.

Mr. A. G. Gulbransen of Chicago and New York has invented an ingenious piano player, which may be installed inside of any piano.

The silent piano may now be made into the finest player piano for half the money that would be required to exchange that selfsame piano for an inferior make of piano containing only an average player.

Although the Gulbransen player costs less than others it is a finer instrument, because its simplicity of construction makes it possible to build it with greater care and better material.

This invention is the most musically capable of all players, yet is played with one-third the effort required by any other player. "Plays ever so softly."

Fits any upright piano without the slightest injury to the appearance, case, action or tone of the piano. Installed without weakening the back of the piano. Non-visible. Uses standard 88-note roll.

Backed by an absolute guarantee. Sold on convenient terms. Installed while you are away; delivery and storage free. Write for estimate to Gulbransen-Dickinson Co., Rooms 1222-26 North American Bldg., 36 S. State St., or telephone Randolph 3292. You save 33⅓ per cent. by dealing direct with the manufacturers.

Feminism and War.

By H. Gomot.

(From Le Petit Journal.)

THE best cultivated earth is not immune from noxious weeds and tares. It is the same with nations. Unhealthy ideas permeate them at the moment of their greatest prosperity. Dangerous ideas, too, in that they are masked under the name of liberalism and progress.

There is no nobler ideal than that of the suppression of war through the universal brotherhood of the nations, nor is there anything more unfortunate than the practical result of this same ideal. It has gone so far as to repudiate patriotism, to propagate anti-militarism, to assert the superiority of the militia over the standing army, and has even contemplated a general strike as the means of attaining a universal peace. But the first bugle call, the first appeal to the heart of the people, dispelled this madness, and when it was understood that France was in danger every citizen able to carry arms responded "Present."

There are some women, however, who have not escaped the unfortunate ideas which have marked these last years. They have wished to individualize themselves and follow out an expression which is dear to them, that of "living their own life." We have seen at close range this evil which we call feminism. Fortunately the epidemic has claimed few victims here, for the vast majority of French women will always remain devoted to the home and to the laws of the family.

An unprejudiced mind might, on the other hand, contemplate the many advantages woman has achieved in modern society. Rightly enough she has been given easy access to all the arts. She has been admitted into the industrial and the commercial world and even allowed to hold certain public offices. What does she still want? The right to vote and to take part in government administration. And there were certain radical women who insisted that their intelligence had been insulted because these same rights had been confined to the stronger sex. Their revolt was not discreet and many peaceful minds were perturbed by their writings and their lectures.

This was all before the war. Under the name of suffragists in England and feminists in France they thought to revolutionize a world which was not ready for their ideas. But the tempest passed and their claims melted away as snow when the sun beats down upon it. Who recalls these days either the theories or the acts of those English suffragists who so often resorted to crime, or of French feminists who bore ridicule courageously? A great task has been offered these idlers, a task for which woman is truly born. They have understood quickly, too, that their rôle was to console the unfortunate, not to harangue at the clubs; to dress wounds, not to lead meetings.

With what enthusiasm they have taken up this new duty! What they now desire is to reënter the ranks, to walk with those who have voluntarily remained true to their old traditions.

It will be indeed a wonderful book to write, the golden book of women and the war, and every day is adding a new page, more moving, more splendid than the one which went before. But when the strife is past, when the days are calm again, their rôle will not have been played out. Another storm wind may spring up. Old grudges may attempt to wrest new life from their dead ashes. Bitter dissent and intolerance will endeavor to reign anew. And a noble task will await you, women of France. After having been the nurse of the physical ills of mankind you will deserve the greater title of their "moral nurse." You will instruct the misguided ones how times have changed, how of old discord was cruel, and how tolerance must triumph and rule over all. You will instruct all those acid minds who otherwise would not have learned the lesson of the war. Through your efforts, through your example you will make them understand how the new France must be a harmonious France, a France whose people are reconciled, in accord.

The Submarine.

(Das Unterseeboot.)

The following article dealing with the German submarine, that important factor in Germany's designs against the English navy and English commerce, appeared in Die Neue Zeit, a Berlin Socialist weekly.

By Richard Woldt.

THE torpedo as a missile is used both by battleships and battle cruisers, which have a pair of torpedo tubes both fore and aft, below the water line. While engaging the enemy with their big guns, it is possible for a well directed torpedo to come to the support of the artillery. But this is, to be sure, a matter of favorable opportunity only and seldom comes about.

The chief disadvantage of the torpedo boat is its visibility, and it is just this disadvantage which is avoided by the submarine—a torpedo boat which is able to discharge its deadly missile while submerged and invisible to the enemy.

The submarine travels above the water until it sees the foe, then submerges itself, carefully setting its course beforehand, and after approaching close enough to fire its torpedo, seeks to make its escape at first under water, later above it.

For this work of destruction the crew of a submarine is trained on little practice trips and at the great fleet maneuvers. It is a picturesque sight when the great battleships and cruisers steam forth from Kiel. Signals are given from the flagship on which the fleet commander is, during the day by means of flags, at night by rockets and searchlight flashes, although the most important means of communication is naturally the wireless telegraph. The fleet of swift torpedo boats swarms around the larger ships, and at a spot designated by the commander the submarine U—— lies in wait.

The airship has preceded the fleet to reconnoiter. As soon as the pilot of the airship has given information by wireless as to the enemy's location and strength, the admiral and his staff develop a plan of campaign. Presently, communicated from the nearest cruiser, instructions are given each submarine as to its part in the operations.

"The enemy comes from the north. Torpedo boats. Six small cruisers and eight ships of the line," is a sample of the information signaled.

The crew of the submarine comes to life.

"Full speed," is the command to the engine room. The engines are crowded to their capacity, and the boat sets out to meet the foe.

"Sink!"

And now takes place during five short minutes a wonderful transformation. The funnel is taken down, the openings are closed, the protective coverings of the tower are removed, and the lid of the entrance way closed. Then comes a "condensation test" to determine whether all openings have really been closed, and then the submerging process. Water is admitted to the tanks in the outer hold; the boat becomes heavy and sinks.

A splendid description of a trip on a German submarine is given by the author, G. F. Leberecht:

"The boat glides slowly forward at a depth of thirteen meters. One can see but a few meters distant through the clear window glass; all else is obscured by the density of the water as if by a green veil. A little silver ball rushes obliquely upwards; a bubble which some large fish may have made. A swarm of sprats crosses our path, standing upright in the water like pegs; it is their mating season, and they do not allow themselves to be disturbed by our passage. And jelly fish—jelly fish in masses! A great violet one hurriedly draws itself together, while a pair of long bands, like torn off ribbons, stream out behind. Others sail about, some of a bluish color, others a delicate alabaster tint. The sun must be shining overhead, for everything mounts upward as if to the light; but this may be due to the displacement of the water caused by our passage, which makes everything seem to rise."

The Business of War in 1915.

That common humanitarian sentiment figures among the belligerents in the trenches is illustrated by the following letter to the London Times from an English officer.

WE had a very wet time in our last trenches, and it's very nice to be clean and dry again once more and to be able to take one's clothes off o'nights, and have a cold bath in the morning. There is a fine tiled bathroom with a fixed bath and a shower bath. We have three more days of this luxury and then go to some perfectly horrid trenches.

I went to have a look at them today. They are part of the same we had when I first joined the regiment, and also part then held by the regiment on our left, so they are fairly familiar. Since we were there early in November the winter rains have flooded them completely, and now they are only dikes full of mud and water up to one's armpits.

The men have to go about on top on both sides, and a sort of mutual armistice has come about, a sort of "If you don't shoot at me I won't shoot at you" kind of arrangement; comforting, but not war.

At present both sides are engaged in building breastworks—i. e., sort of earth walls behind their flooded trenches—they will have their lean-tos behind this breastwork, and fire over the top, or through loopholes in it. At present neither side is firing at all, and each is busily engaged in building their breastwork. Unfortunately the Germans have done three-quarters of theirs; our people have only finished about a quarter of the place we shall have to take over.

It's a funny sight to see working parties of both sides not 200 yards apart not taking any notice of each other.

I heard one rather interesting thing. At Christmas time there was a strong rumor round here that Austria had chucked it—some of our people when fraternizing with the Germans told them that Austria had sued for peace. The Saxons asked if it was official and said if it was really so they would come in at once. Our men seem very cheery and don't grouse, and are prepared to stick it till kingdom come.

The idea of doing anything else never occurs to them. They take the wind and rain and wet as all part of the show that must be got through till K.'s lot are ready. I wonder if the new army realise what their arrival means to our chaps. It beats me how anything in trousers can stay at home while our lads here are sticking it, sticking it, sticking it, waiting for them to come and help them finish the job.

WHEAT FUTURES SUFFER LOSSES

Foreign Conditions Create Uncertainty; Seaboard Clearances Large.

CORN SHOWS WEAKNESS

The wheat market was weak yesterday, and the feeling of uncertainty induced by recent developments abroad was pronounced. Speculators were inclined to even up trades and to stay out of the market temporarily. At the start there was quite general selling. Buying of a big line of May wheat by Bennett steadied the market, and later there was some covering by shorts, which rallied the prices a little. Closing quotations, however, showed net declines of 1⅜@1¾c.

Increased receipts are expected for a time, and while clearances continue heavy, there is some fear of developments that would check the exportation of wheat from this side, either in the way of an embargo or because shipments might become too hazardous owing to restrictions placed on neutral shipments.

Cash Situation Unchanged.

From a cash standpoint there was no great change in the situation. Prices continue steady relatively, and there was a fair demand late Friday for wheat for gulf shipment and sales of 640,000 bu were reported. Winnipeg also reported good sales of Manitoba wheat. On the other hand the New York reports indicated a low demand. Country selling was a little more pronounced from Iowa.

Clearances were enormous at 1,770,000 bu, and cash men are of the opinion the February and March shipments will continue at the rate of at least 1,000,000 bu per day. At present there appears to be plenty of tonnage available, judging from the big daily clearances. With no restrictions on the selling and shipping wheat abroad, there will be no difficulty in disposing of our remaining stocks.

Foreign Markets Quiet.

The foreign markets were quieter and Liverpool did not seem to be much disturbed over the possibility of having shipments of foodstuffs restricted. Spot prices there were unchanged to ½d higher. Wheat prices are extremely high all through the United Kingdom. Argentine reports were to the effect weather conditions were more favorable. In this country there was more snow over the winter wheat belt and the outlook is favorable.

Receipts here were 106 cars, with 90 cars inspected yesterday, and primary arrivals were 642,000 bu, against 679,000 bu a year ago, receipts for the week being 4,595,000 bu, against 4,479,000 bu a year ago. Northwest points had 264 cars, against 199 cars a year ago, and Winnipeg had 125, against 51 cars a year ago. Minneapolis stocks decreased 160,000 bu for the day and Duluth increased 371,000 bu for the week.

Corn Sentiment Bearish.

In corn sentiment was mainly bearish, and prices were 1¼@⅝c to 1⅝c lower for the day. Cash prices were off with the futures, the discounts being about the same as recently. Shipping sales were 130,000 bu, including 75,000 bu reported taken for export. Country sales were moderate and local receipts show a sharp falling off, 202 cars with 111 cars inspected yesterday. At western points receipts for the week were 8,637,000 bu, against 5,194,000 bu a year ago.

Clearances were 299,000 bu. Argentine reports said the corn crop prospects were brilliant. Cables were ½d up for both spot and futures, and Plate offerings at Liverpool were reported light. Wagner, Thomson-McKinnon, and commission houses were free sellers. Chapin and Clement-Curtis were the principal commission house buyers on the decline.

Oats Prices Work Lower.

Oats were heavy with other grains. Knight-McDougal, Wagner, and Barrell were the principal sellers. Buying was led by houses that sold out recently on the bulge. Final prices were ⅝c to ⅝@¾c higher. The cash demand was only fair, and prices were ½@1c lower. Shipping sales were 275,000 bu. The seaboard reported two cargoes of oats sold for export Friday. Receipts here were 167 cars, with 144 cars inspected yesterday. Primary receipts were 639,000 bu, against 467,000 bu a year ago, and for the week receipts at western centers were 4,764,000 bu, against 4,985,000 bu the previous week and 3,499,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were fair at 349,000 bu

Big Hog Run Affects Products.

The provisions were weak with grains, and there was considerable selling on the weak hog situation at the yards. The receipts were 37,000, with 55,000 for Monday and 255,000 estimated for the coming week. The cash trade was reported slow, and there is no end of big hog receipts in sight. Prices at the yards were 20@25c lower at the close. In speculative products there was free selling by longs, while the demand was slow. Western receipts for the week were 669,000 bu, against 521,000 bu a year ago.

Rye Prices Decline.

Barley was 1@2c lower, with malting 80@87½c, feed 80c, and screenings 72c. Receipts, 12 cars.

Timothy seed was easy at $7.40 bid for March and $5.50@7.50 for cash. Clover seed was quiet at $10.00@15.00 for cash.

Duluth flax closed steady to ½c higher, with cash on track $1.89@1.90, May $1.90, and September $1.89½. Receipts, 5 cars. Minneapolis closed at $1.87@1.90 for cash on track. Receipts, 13 cars. Winnipeg was steady at $1.68¾ for May. Receipts, 17 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

Commission houses were more conservative in their market advices last night, as they were the previous night. The general tenor of the advices sent out to customers was less radical than for some time past. The market in wheat yesterday showed, moreover, the tendency to even up pit trades on the part of many traders, and there was a general disposition also to make it more difficult for outside traders to operate freely, stiff margins being demanded on all trades, especially in May wheat. In corn and oats the sentiment was more bearish as a rule, owing to the slow cash demand, and the big stocks. In all grains, however, it was noticed there was fair commission house buying on the declines scored early.

A New York message to McKenna-Rodgers said there was no demand for wheat. Late Friday there was a fair business in wheat for export via the gulf, and sales reported were 640,000 bu. Winnipeg wired that exporters had done a fair business and that sales for export were around 400,000 bu. Local sales yesterday were small at 10,000 bu. Outside cash markets generally were steady relatively. Cash corn was ½@1c off and oats were also ½@1c off, the discounts being about the same as recently for both corn and oats compared to the May. Shipping sales were 130,000 bu corn and 275,000 bu oats.

The movement of wheat from the country is expected to show a considerable increase in the next two or three weeks. There has been considerable wheat sold in the aggregate from the sections where farmers have been able to get $1.50 for their wheat. That price was satisfactory to many farmers, and the sales, taking the whole section, have been quite liberal, so that winter wheat points are likely to have free receipts. After this movement is cleaned up cash men say there will be a light run during the remainder of the crop year.

J. T. McLaughlin & Co. say of corn: "Temporarily bearish visible figures only serve to allow big consumers to supply their needs at a low price. To judge from the price one would never suspect there were any untoward happenings in Europe. Our total corn crop is not large enough for our own domestic needs by over 100,000,000 bu, and when the inevitable heavy export demand comes, in addition, present prices will, we believe, look awfully cheap. We look upon corn as an investment."

Liverpool cabled: "American winters and Canadians both unchanged, while Plate sold 3d decline. Argentine offers are liberal and India selling more freely, with the weather conducive of good crop results and therefore a waiting attitude so evident. Spot market quiet and about unchanged, and cargoes and parcels about unchanged. The general undertone is firm, but the market is dull. Corn was well supported, with advancing spot and fewer Plate offers."

Winnipeg wired: "Considerable export business from this market yesterday. Believe bulk of the stuff was No. 2 northern, one lot in particular changing at a fancy price under our May wheat. We believe there was 300,000 to 400,000 bu worked. There was considerable liquidation in May wheat at $1.60 yesterday and it is noticeable that the trade is cut down to small proportions."

The Michigan February report as wired by King of Toledo says 454 correspondents reported no damage to wheat during January, and eighty-one said there had been some damage. A year ago about one-third reported damage. Farmers marketed 339,000 bu wheat at 150 mills and elevators, against 192,000 bu a year ago.

"The lard trade is showing the usual February dullness and at such premiums over side meats is likely to show faster accumulations from this on," said W. L. Gregson. "Stocks of barreled pork and other cured meats are liable to get burdensome and carrying cargoes show a tendency to widen."

George H. Clearman and Henry Stemper made application for memberships on the board of trade, while memberships were posted for transfer by Martin Kennedy, Watson F. Blair, and the estate of John J. Brady.

Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 90 cars; corn, 111 cars; oats, 144 cars; rye, 4 cars; barley, 12 cars; hogs, 55,000 head. Hogs for all next week were estimated at 225,000 head.

The seaboard reported two cargoes of oats sold for export Friday.

Grain charters on Friday were 1,500,000 bu, or six steamers.

Omaha reported cash wheat 1½c lower. Demand was slow.

Minneapolis stocks decreased 160,000 bu for one day.

An Argentine cable said corn prospects were brilliant.

SHELL SCATTERS SOLDIERS' BOILED PORK DINNER.

LONDON.—The grim and the entertaining aspects of war are well described in a letter which Driver Arthur Lightbody, R. F. A., has sent to a friend at Leytonstone. He writes:

"At one time Mr. —— and I were observing fire. We were shelled out of the trenches, so we went to a hospital which had been shelled all the morning (our infantry rescued the invalids). We got up on the roof and observed from the skylight.

"At one time the German infantry were in the yard at the bottom, but with great relief to us they were driven back by the Second Welsh regiment. Our people held them at bay that day and night.

"In another position a pig was shot with a shell, so we spent a considerable time shaving the hair off its head. We got a big boiler pot from a deserted house and started to cook it, with turnips and potatoes, which we dug up in the fields.

"It was almost ready for eating, when there was an O-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-splosh! Mr. Johnson had arrived, and the dinner was sent in all directions. So we had no dinner that night.

"On another occasion, when we made a dinner we had a quick order to advance. We had to leave the stew—chickens at that! We advanced about half a mile, so we sent some chaps back for it.

"On their arrival at the old position they found the West Surveys having a rare time with our chickens, and they coolly told our fellows they could stop and have a bit if they liked."

MOTHER'S FALL RESTORES WOUNDED SON'S SPEECH.

CARDIFF, WALES.—In the belief that the shock of the pretended accident would restore speech to her wounded son, a Cardiff woman threw herself downstairs, and was rewarded for her bruises by the cry of, "O, mother!"

Now, for the first time, Corporal Tucker is able to explain how he came to be struck dumb and how the shock of his mother's fall gave him command of his tongue.

"At Ypres," says Tucker, "I was buried alive by three 'Jack Johnsons.' At first I did not know what happened. It was all so quiet and dark. Then I felt a great weight on my body, and found I could not move a finger. Then the boys dug me out, but my nerves were so shaken I could not speak a word.

"They sent me to England. I was able to walk, but very nervous and unable to use my tongue. When my wife met me I could not say a word.

"As I had not seen my mother for a long time I went to pay her a visit. She was very much upset over my dumbness.

"The other night, after coming home from the moving pictures, I was sitting in the kitchen, very downhearted, when I heard something falling downstairs. I rushed there, and found my mother, who was groaning. I called out, 'O, mother!' and fainted.

"When I recovered I found my mother, cool and smiling, holding my head, while I was crying. In my weak and nervous condition the shock was too much. I then learned she had deliberately fallen and bruised herself badly in doing so."

MUSIC HALL ARTIST IS REDUCED TO BREAD LINE.

LONDON.—A tragic story of the poverty of two music hall artists owing to the war wah told at Westminster police court during the hearing of a charge of obstruction against Maude May, aged 35.

The woman walked from her lodgings at South Lambeth to Spencer street, Buckingham Gate, to take her place in a queue at a bakery where cheap bread is obtainable.

A policeman stated that there were 300 persons in the queue and the woman would not keep her place at the back.

The woman told the magistrate that after waiting more than two hours she was pushed out of her place by those who arrived later.

The woman's husband said that he and his wife had good engagements, but they had been either canceled or postponed owing to the war. They were reduced to playing their musical instruments in the street.

FEDERAL BANKS TO DO CLEARING

THINK TIME IS RIPE.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—Conferences between members of the federal reserve board and governors of several of the reserve banks and some reserve agents have developed definite plans for the extension of clearing house operations by the twelve regional reserve banks. One feature of the plan, it was learned today, provides for the creation of a central fund of possibly $25,000,000 to be held in Washington to the credit of the reserve banks to take care of clearing operations between them.

The results of the deliberations, which lasted several days, will be laid before the entire federal reserve board next Monday. Since the plans have the approval of W. P. G. Harding and Paul M. Warburg, two members experienced in practical banking, it was believed that they will be indorsed.

Will Broaden Clearing Function.

It was understood to have been unanimously agreed in the conference that the time has arrived when the clearing functions of the twelve banks should be exercised as fully as possible. Actual development of the clearing system through the reserve banks will be gradual, but members of the reserve board believe these banks will in time take the place contemplated in the reserve act and do practically all the clearing for member banks.

According to information tonight the central fund in Washington is to be a gold fund made up of deposits from each of the twelve reserve banks. As now contemplated, each bank might put up about 10 per cent of its reserve funds in the central fund.

Fund for One Purpose.

The central fund will be devoted exclusively to taking care of items between federal reserve banks themselves and will have the practical result of setting up a clearing agency in Washington for the twelve banks. Balances probably will be adjusted only once a week or once a month and will be largely matters of bookkeeping.

In connection with clearings within a district the conference laid plans which will not force member banks to clear through their reserve bank, but which, it is hoped, will prove attractive to bankers and show the advantages of general intradistrict clearing.

BROTHER FOUND AFTER WOMAN PRAYED 18 YEARS.

DETROIT.—Hope sustained Mrs. George Wilds through eighteen years of waiting for the reappearance of her brother, Charles Youngs, who departed from his home in Cleveland, O.

Nothing was heard of him until a few days ago, when a letter came from him to Mrs. Wilds, widow of Capt. Wilds, who was drowned on the lakes last summer. He is ill in the Erie county infirmary near Cleveland, and arrangements will be made to have him taken to his sister's home at 249 Lillibridge avenue, Detroit.

It was hope and prayer that kept up the belief of Mrs. Wilds that her brother would some day be restored to her.

Several times he had been given up for dead. Seven years ago word was sent her that positive news of his death was at hand. She refused to believe it and told her son Clarence that the brother would some day appear.

Some time after this talk Capt. Wilds, who was near Cleveland on a mission, was met by an old friend and told that his brother-in-law was in Cleveland. The police were notified and another search was started. But, like the previous hunt, it was unavailing. Clarence undertook a personal hunt, urged on by his mother, and kept it up through the seven years. Finally Clarence received word that Mr. Youngs was ill in a hospital near Cleveland.

DECLARES HE FEELS FINE AFTER FASTING FORTY DAYS.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The chemistry department of Stanford university is studying the case of R. C. Roth of Palo Alto, a tailor, 30 years old, who says he has eaten no food for forty days. He is making a scientific effort to eliminate all impurities from his system and restore his damaged digestive apparatus.

Careful analytic tests are being made as the experiment progresses. The chemists wish to learn just what secretions are thrown off by a system that has received no nourishment in more than five weeks.

Roth normally weighs 145 pounds, but he is now down to 100 pounds. He walks four miles each day and says he feels fine.

He says he has no appetite. He expects to fast another week and will break it by taking a teaspoonful of orange juice in a glass of water.

Hog market was in a congested condition, with receipts of 35,000 head. Opening sales were made at a reduction of 15c from Friday's closing prices, but the market developed more weakness as the session progressed and late sales showed a full 25c cut for the day. Top sales early were made at $6.95 and later at $6.85, with the bulk for the day at $6.75@6.90. Packers bought few hogs until late in the session, but showed a willingness to fill orders after the full reduction was made in costs.

Final prices showed the complete elimination of the advanced values secured early in the week and were unchanged to 5c lower than figures quoted a week ago. The average price of all the hogs received this week, however, showed an improvement, being placed at $7.00, against an average of $6.70 last week. Pigs were 15@25c lower than a week ago, with selected lots selling at $6.00@6.25. Expectations are for 200,000 hogs or more the coming week, but conditions are decidedly uncertain, with a possibility of the yards being closed up completely as they were in November because of the foot and mouth disease.

CATTLE.

Beef steer values at Chicago this week declined 25@40c to the low spot of the season for all classes excepting prime yearlings. The latter were scarce and held at a premium over all other cattle, although also showing a decline for the week. Cows, heifers, and bulls sold higher early in the week and closed at a slight appreciation, although they suffered a setback on the last trading day. Calves sold and closed $1.00@1.25 higher than a week ago. Total receipts of cattle for the week were small, but they were not evenly distributed, too many cattle came on the closing days, and the supply was still too large to be easily absorbed by the crippled demand that receivers have had to depend on since the placing of a ban on outward shipments of live stock. It is not known when this embargo will be raised and advices sent out by commission houses cautioned country shippers against making liberal forwardings of cattle until notified of the removal of the quarantine restrictions.

Cattle at six western markets for the week, 129,100, against 125,000 the preceding week, 108,100 a year ago, and 126,100 two years ago. Total for 1915 to date, 697,000, against 665,000 he same period in 1914.

SHEEP.

Sheep and lamb values at Chicago this week closed at a net advance of 50c for the week, although showing a fair reaction from the high spot of the week. During the high time the best prices of the season were made by all offerings and there were instances where sales were made at better prices than any obtained during all of the previous year. Lambs topped the week at $9.35, yearlings reached $8.50, wethers sold up to $7.25, and western ewes landed as high as $6.60. Receipts for the week were less than 65,000 head, more than half of which came on the last three active market days, causing the reaction at the finish. Traders look for prices to show a prompt rally if receipts next week are kept down to small volume.

Electric Railways.

Of the different kinds of public utilities electric railways probably have the greatest amount of securities outstanding and the widest variety of degrees of merit. The electric railway business is only beginning to become standardized. Electric railways in cities are still in many cases merely a modification of the old horse car service, while some interurban roads are a development of the old stage line rather than a modified railway. Both types, however, are rapidly approaching such a standard that an intelligent comparison of capitalization per mile of road, density of traffic and earnings per mile can be made just as readily as with steam railways.

In the present state of the business the record of earnings and dividends is about the only reliable guide for the investor, aside from general information about the character of the territory served. It may be taken for granted that every city of 40,000 or more inhabitants must have a fairly extensive street railway system and that the lines will pay dividends if economically constructed and efficiently operated, under reasonably favorable franchise conditions.

Such a local system usually has a number of suburban lines connecting it with other towns in the region, and the tendency is toward combining a number of such local systems into one large company, which probably furnishes street car service throughout the whole district and electric lighting in part of it.

If the investor is considering the purchase of the bonds of such a system, the first question is as to the security. If the bonds are a first lien on the lines of a city and an underlying lien with respect to an issue of bonds put out by the larger company, and if this larger company has a good record of dividends earned there is little doubt about the soundness of the underlying bonds.

If the bonds under consideration are issued by the larger company and they are junior to two or three smaller issues on the best parts of the system a study of the reports of earnings is the only guide. Such an issue ought to be protected by a record of earnings twice as large as the total interest charge and also increasing from year to year. There should be a provision to prevent the issuing of more bonds, except when net earnings are enough to keep the margin of security unimpaired.

The demands for new financing are often so urgent that bonds are put out creating an interest charge equal to three-fifths or two-thirds of the net earnings. If there are underlying bonds this is insecure. If there are no underlying issues it is not so bad, but even that is safe only so long as the earnings of the system continue to increase.

All these bond issues ought further to have a provision in the trust deed requiring an annual payment into a sinking fund to retire the bonds or to be expended in permanent improvements on the property covered by the mortgage.

New York City Bonds.

V. R. E.—New York City 6s are the direct obligation of the city. They are a conservative investment for savings. More than half of the $100,000,000 issue matures next September; $18,000,000 matures in September, 1916; and $25,000,000 in September, 1917. At a price of 101 bonds of the 1917 maturity yield about 5½ per cent, those of 1915 maturity would yield a fraction over 4. Ogden Gas bonds are guaranteed by the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company, which holds the Ogden company's property under lease.

Massachusetts Gas Companies.

N. S. W. Princeton, Ill.,—The Massachusetts Gas companies is a "voluntary association" formed in 1902. It has $25,000,000 4 per cent preferred stock on which all the dividends have been paid, and $25,000,000 common. On the common 2 per cent was paid in 1906; 3 per cent a year from 1907 to 1910 inclusive; 4 per cent in 1911, 1912, and the first half of 1913. Beginning Aug. 1, 1913, 5 per cent.

Brief Answers.

F. H. F.—The common stock of the Pittsburgh Steel company is speculative. Unpaid dividends on the $10,500,000 of preferred stock are accumulating. The $[illegible],000,000 common will get nothing until all the preferred dividends have been paid. No one can predict when this will be done.

E. F. G.—The main difference between the best 6 per cent first mortgage real estate bonds and the 5 per cent bonds of Chicago utility companies now selling close to par is the more ready convertibility of the latter.

LAND BANK READY TO AID NEW YORK FARMERS.

NEW YORK.—Officers of the Land Bank of the State of New York have conferred with important financial interests here relative to loans, for this new institution is ready for business.

Informal applicaions for money from farmers' associations are being considered and negotiations are under way.

The money which is to be loaned to the farmer comes from loan and savings companies. The Land bank acts practically as an agent in getting money for the farmer at the lowest possible rate. The security which he gives is a mortgage on the farm. Back of it are the resources of loan and savings companies amounting in this state to at least $10,000,000.

Under the Land bank rules the farmer can gradually pay off the principal as he pays the interest. Instead of being confronted at the end of a term of years by a large amount the farmer has been able, under the conditions which obtain in the management of European land banks, to amortize his loan and scarcely feel it. It is believed that in this way the disastrous foreclosure proceedings which so frequently come from mortgage loans may be avoided.

ENGLISH WOMEN IMPLORE MEN TO GO TO THE FRONT.

LONDON.—Great Britain is appealing to its women that they say "Go" to their husbands and sons. More men are needed for the army.

The government has sounded its appeal through advertisements in the various London papers. These advertisements, set in large type, read as follows:

Four Questions to the Women of England:

1. You have read what the Germans have done in Belgium. Have you thought what they would do if they invaded England?

2. Do you realise that the safety of your home and children depends on our getting more men now?

3. Do you realize that the one word "Go" from you may send another man to fight for our king and country?

4. When the war is over and your husband or your son is asked, "What did you do in the great war?" is he to hang his head because you would not let him go?

Women of England, do your duty! Send your men today to join our glorious army.

God Save the King.

No Cut in S. P. Dividend.

"An unquestioned authority on affairs of the Southern Pacific company stated to a representative of the New York News bureau this morning that the decline in Southern Pacific shares marketwise was not warranted. He said that there was no intention on the part of directors to reduce the dividend at the meeting on Thursday next.

"He declared that the statement of earnings which would be placed before the directors at their meeting would show the dividend fully earned, notwithstanding the losses in net suffered during the six months ended Dec. 31."

STOCKS IMPROVE IN WALL STREET

Foreign Liquidation Continues, However; Close Irregular.

STEEL SHARES RISE.

New York, Feb. 6.—The depression caused by Germany's proposed extension of the war area was again a factor of importance today, the stock market reflecting further foreign liquidation. On the whole, however, the list made a good showing, even though some of the early gains were wiped out.

Southern Pacific, which, with Reading and Canadian Pacific, were weakest of the railway shares in yesterday's session, opened with a gain of over a point. At the higher level it met with further offerings, which soon brought about a general reaction. From the lower level there were partial recoveries, with some confusion and irregularity at the close.

Inactive Shares Weak.

Such relatively inactive shares as Chicago and Northwestern and Norfolk and Western were weak, the former declining 3 points to its minimum of 122. Pennsylvania shares also reflected selling pressure, while the transcontinental group showed variable but unimportant changes.

Bethlehem Steel overshadowed all other industrials with its rise to 54⅜, its best quotation in many years, and United States Steel held well above 40, where it appeared to be in moderate demand. Inconspicuous industrials like Baldwin Locomotive common and preferred and American Linseed preferred were down from 1 to 2 points, but other specialties were dull, with little change.

Trade Advices Cheerful.

Trade advices were of a cheerful tenor, even though expansion in merchandise lines shows no marked advance, except in the west, where the great rises in grains contributed measurably to commercial betterment. Exchange on London went to the lowest price since 1907, demand sterling being quoted at 4.83⅝@4.83½.

Berlin cables reported the probability of another large war loan in March, the amount being estimated at the same huge figure as the first offering. Japanese treasury bills amounting to $15,000,000 were taken by London bankers on a 5¾ per cent basis.

Bonds moved irregularly today. Total sales (par value) aggregated $1,260,000. Government bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

Review of the Week.

Financial opinion found more interest in the commodity and bond markets this week than in the movement of stocks. Toward the end of the week, however, prices of most securities broke sharply, partly as a result of home and foreign liquidation induced by Germany's proposed extension of the area of naval warfare.

The finding of a resting place for United States Steel after the succession of new official minimums afforded sentimental relief. Advances in prices of finished products by a subsidiary helped that stock. Ease of money and success of railroad bond issues promised increased demand for steel and stimulated hope for the industry as a whole. A further rise in copper metal contributed to this feeling.

The fivefold subscription to the Pennsylvania railroad bond issue and its rise to a premium over subscription price was considered decisive assurance of investment conditions. Plans were shaped for other issues and widespread investment demand was revealed. Poor net returns to the railroads for December brought some dividends into question.

Mercantile paper, 3½@4 per cent. Sterling exchange easy; sixty day bills, 481.85; for cables, 483.75; for demand, 483.35. Bar silver, 48⅛c. Mexican dollars, 37⅛c.

COFFEE AND SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The market for coffee futures was very quiet today, sales amounting to only 700 bags, but the tone was steady in sympathy with the firmer showing of Brazil, and after opening at an advance of 1@2 points prices closed 2@3 points net higher. February, 5.86c; March, 5.93c; April, 6.02c; May, 6.12c; June, 6.12c; July, 7.12c; August, 7.22c; September, 7.31c; October, 7.38c; November, 7.45c; December, 7.52c. Spot quiet; Rio No. 7, 8¼@8¼c; Santos No. 4, 9¾c. Milreis prices were 75@100 reis higher in the Brazilian markets and Rio exchange on London was ⅛d higher at 13 5-16d. Brazilian port receipts, 55,000; Jundiahy, 26,000. Rio cleared 7,000 bags for New York. SUGAR—Spot firm; centrifugal, 4.77c; molasses, 4c; refined firm; sales, 5,600 tons.

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—SUGAR—The following prices were quotable by wholesale dealers per 100 lbs: Cut loaf, H. & E., $6.58; powdered, standard, $6.06; eastern granulated, $5.38; beet granulated, $5.28; extra C, $5.18; canary, $4.88.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Money and discount rates were weak today. The stock market was quiet and featureless. British bonds were inclined to weakness, while home rails ruled irregular. Foreign bonds and Kaffirs were bought occasionally. American securities were neglected, owing to the decline in Wall street yesterday, but quotations were idly maintained around parity. Most of the markings were in Canadian Pacific. Bar silver, steady, 22⅝d per ounce. Money, 1 per cent. Discount rates, short and three months' bills, 1⅜ per cent.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—Trading was quiet on the bourse today. Rentes, 72 francs 5 centimes. Exchange on London, 25 francs 19½ centimes.

THE announcement of the plans of the Produce Terminal corporation in connection with the proposed establishment of a great wholesale produce and fruit terminal and market on the south side of Thirty-ninth street, from Ashland to Western avenues, naturally has aroused much interest in real estate circles, as it has in the lines of business directly affected.

There certainly is nothing new in the proposed removal of this business from South Water street, as it has been agitated off and on for many years, and particularly during the last five years, but it never before has assumed the concrete form it has now. As to the necessity of a change from the archaic conditions which have surrounded this business as it is conducted on South Water street now, there can be no question. However, as is often the case, anything like progress heretofore has been halted by the many differing projects proposed, the conservatism of some, and the selfish interests of others, which between them have prevented anything even remotely approaching unanimity of action.

Project One of Years.

Whether these conflicting interests can be sufficiently united as to assure the successful carrying out of any removal project is about the most serious factor in the situation. As it is, it is admitted by officers of the corporation that the materialization of their project is a matter of several years at least.

It is estimated that the cost of the entire project will approximate $20,000,000. The officers of the corporation which is to finance the undertaking are: John A. Spoor, chairman of the Union Stockyards and Transit company, president; Arthur G. Leonard, president of the Union Stockyards and Transit company, vice president; Anderson Pace, former industrial commissioner of the Chicago Association of Commerce, secretary; Halsey E. Poronto, vice president of the Union Stockyards and Transit company, treasurer.

To Cover 100 Acres.

The ground embraced comprises about 100 acres, having a frontage of one mile along Thirty-ninth street, along the right of way of the Chicago Junction road.

The buildings will comprise an eight story reinforced concrete building for cold storage purposes containing over 1,600,000 square feet of floor space. It is proposed to use the first and second floors as a union freight station for the handling of less than car load freight and express. Incoming freight will enter the second floor and outgoing will be handled from the first floor. Above these floors will be the refrigerated space. There will be room for over 350 cars in the building at one time.

Adjacent will be a series of stores, three stories and basement, grouped about a central office and administration building, all connected with each other and with the terminal station. The third floors will be so arranged that they can be placed under refrigeration if desired. The ultimate plan provides for nearly 1,500,000 square feet of floor space in these buildings.

Big Administration Structure.

There will be a large administration building for the offices of the wholesale merchants and car load brokers, as well as rooms for the different boards doing business on South Water street. The building will be centrally located.

A garage with capacity for over 300 auto trucks is contemplated, and adjoining the cold storage plant there will be a large auction building for fruit sales, with 280,000 square feet of floor space and indoor trackage for ninety cars.

On the east side of the terminal there will be a large dock house for handling water shipments, in addition to which there will be a central power station, which also will furnish heat, light, and refrigeration.

There are to be many team tracks, with platforms and wide driveways, which will be so connected with the motor runway that produce can be handled direct from the cars to the stores or to other cars without being exposed to the weather.

Shorter Time for Transit.

The terminal will be served by the Chicago Junction railway, which has direct connections with every road entering the city. It is pointed out that produce moving to and from this terminal will not have to pass through the congested railway terminals of the city proper and the time in transit would therefore be shortened twenty-four to forty-eight hours.

The terminal will be located on the south fork of the south branch and the plans contemplate its development so as to care for any necessary transportation by water.

It is proposed to connect the terminal with the present Randolph street market, the Englewood market, the present Lincoln avenue market, as well as additional necessary markets, by means of railway or refrigerated motor trucks which will schedule deliveries over noncongested thoroughfares.

Will Take Up Old Leases.

The corporation plans to assume the leases of the merchants on South Water street, it is said.

It is asserted that the proposed terminal, which is within four blocks of the geographical center of the city, should have much to do with lessening the high cost of living by cutting down delivery expenses and spoilage, amounting, it is said, to about $10,000 a day.

Real estate men will watch the progress of this undertaking with deep interest because of the farreaching effect it would have on realty values should it be carried to a successful conclusion.

The administration building is shown at the left just back of the stores on Thirty-ninth street. Other stores are to the west of it. At the right is the eight story central cold storage plant, the two lower floors of which are to be used for outgoing and incoming freight. To the west of this and not appearing in the picture are the power house, the fruit auction and office building, and more three story store buildings on Thirty-ninth street. As indicated elsewhere, the entire project is expected to cost about $20,000,000. Yesterday's developments greatly encouraged those behind the project, it is stated.

WANTS PLATS OUTSIDE CITY LIMITS GIVEN SUPERVISION.

Much interest has been aroused in real estate circles by the action of the Chicago real estate board at its meeting last week in going on record in favor of some proper supervision of subdivision plats in the county outside of the city limits. The action taken was in the form of a resolution offered by Callistus S. Ennis & Co. suggesting that the proposed supervision be made by the county map department under the control of the county board.

Mr. Ennis said he had knowledge of some proposed subdivisions in their territory which provided for only fifty foot streets, and that it was time for the board to act in this matter.

It is pointed out by the officials of the recorder's office, however, that under the present law there is no provision for the supervision of plats outside of the incorporated towns and villages in the county, and that the law will have to be changed to permit of this being done. The officers of the towns and villages are required to supervise plats in their territory, but no authority, it is said, exists for this being done elsewhere.

FLAT PROPERTY LEADS IN REALTY TRADES OF WEEK

As usual the market activities of the week centered in outside property with apartment house, business and acre properties holding the stage, and all represented with an unusual number of interesting transactions.

The most important of the business deals involved the northeast corner of Sixty-third street and Ashland avenue, 100x125 feet, improved with a two story and basement white tile front building with eight stores and thirty-seven offices. It was sold by Thomas Gaynor to Marks, Louis and Edward Aaron for an indicated consideration of $150,000, made up of $75,000 incumbrance and $75,000 paid for the equity. White & Tabor, M. Friend & Co., and John Bain & Co. were the brokers.

A notable west side deal was the purchase by Walter H. Wilson from the Victor Electric company of the northwest corner of Jackson boulevard and Robey street, 130x92⅓ feet, improved with a four story mill constructed building, for a reported consideration of $77,000 cash. Mr. Wilson leased back to the Victor company for twenty years at a term rent of $120,000. Paul C. Loeber and Walter H. Wilson & Co. were the brokers.

Apartment Deals on Large Scale.

The movement of apartment house property was on a particularly large scale, especially as regards buildings of the larger sort, of which there were more sales reported than for many weeks past. There also was a free movement of medium priced properties.

Luke P. Colleran, former chief of detectives, appeared as the purchaser of the twenty-one apartment building at 4235-43 Sheridan road, with 100 feet of ground back 168 feet to Broadway, for a reported consideration of $98,000. The property was purchased from Mrs. Dora C. Williamson, Colleran giving in part payment the nine flat building at the southwest corner of Douglas boulevard and Central Park avenue at an indicated consideration of $48,000. Thomas E. Sullivan & Co., H. W. Croxton, and John T. O'Connell were the brokers.

Thirty Flat Structure Sold.

Valdemar Michaelson, sold to Sarah Metsker the thirty flat building, with 160x125 feet of ground, at 6229-37 Vernon avenue, for a reported consideration of about $100,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rent of about $13,200. Mrs. Metsker took trade in part payment. Frank Thompson, with S. Loudenback & Co., was the broker.

John C. Kreitenstein sold to Louis Raike and John J. Healy the new twenty-five flat building on 99x145 feet of ground at the northeast corner of Thirty-ninth street and Vincennes avenue for an indicated $90,500. Callistus S. Ennis & Co. were the brokers.

William H. Barry sold to Eugene Garey the eighteen flat building with 100x125 feet of ground at the southwest corner of Beacon street and Sunnyside avenue, subject to $56,250, Mr. Barry taking in part payment a 640 acre farm in Kimball county, Neb. Krause, Beak & Co. and O. P. Curren Jr. were the brokers.

South Side Property in Trade.

The flat property with 86x150 feet of ground at the southeast corner of Fifty-second street and Woodlawn avenue was sold by Wheaton Augur to Milton Davis for an indicated consideration of $80,000, of which $37,500 was incumbrance.

The five story stove heated flat building at 859-63 Sedgwick street, with forty flats, on 75x125 feet of ground, was sold by C. O. Lindquist to Dr. Charles E. Boynton for an indicated $55,000, subject to $35,000 incumbrance. There was some trade, and Holmgren & Linquist were the brokers.

Sherman T. Cooper sold to E. B. and Cecille B. Mayer the six flat building, with 61x95.8 feet of ground on Ingleside avenue, 62 feet north of Forty-eighth street, for an indicated $40,000. It is interesting as being the first sale by Mr. Cooper in the block, which he purchased early last year from the Marshall Field estate.

Arthur Cabeen sold to T. F. Danaher the flat property at the southwest corner of Greenwood avenue and Sixty-sixth street, with 98x125 feet of ground, for an expressed consideration of $50,000.

William P. Houghton of Frederick H. Bartlett & Co. sold to Frank E. Swan the sixteen flat building on 75x100 feet of ground and residence thereon at the northeast corner of Forty-fourth street and Greenwood avenue for an indicated $50,500. Land near Gary was given in part payment. J. A. Hallgren and Carl Anderson were the brokers.

Loans and Leases.

There were no notably important leases or loans reported during the week, the most interesting of the loans being one for 5½ per cent on outside vacant property, rather under the prevailing rates on this class of property. It is for $50,000, was made by David R. Lewis, trustee, to William M. De Vine, and is on the 374x555 feet at the northeast corner of Sheridan road and Greenleaf avenue.

It is said there is a fund of $4,500,000 available for high class loans in the downtown district at 5 per cent, which bears out the statement made last week as to the easing character of the loan market.

De Forrest A. Matteson has given a trust deed to O. H. Haugan, trustee, on the property at the southeast corner of Waveland avenue and Reta street, with a north frontage of 128 feet and a depth of 291 feet, as security for a loan of $110,000 for eight years at 6 per cent interest.

S. W. Straus & Co. is trustee for a loan to William T. Woodley of $110,000 for seven years at 6 per cent interest, secured by the premises at the northeast corner of Cornell avenue and Fifty-fifth street, west front, 95x150 feet. The property is being improved with a three story reinforced concrete, brick, stone, and terra cotta building which will contain seven stores and forty-five apartments and will cost more than $172,000.

E. B. Beatty of Ben I. Greenebaum's office has leased for the United Cigar Stores company to the Newark Shoe Stores company the store and basement at 3175 Lincoln avenue for a term rent of $20,000. For John C. Schultz to the same the store and basement at 1603 West Sixty-third street for a term rent of $15,000. This makes seventeen stores for the company in Chicago.

The Heyworth Graham company, agents for the Garland building at the northeast corner of Wabash avenue and Washington street, report leases with aggregate term rents of $1,036,000.

BIG APARTMENT BUILDINGS FOR SOUTH SIDE PLANNED.

The construction of two big apartment building on the south side to cost in the neighborhood of $250,000 and $175,000, respectively, were involved in two transactions closed late in the week. Joseph L. Duplissis purchased from the heirs of Homer E. Sargent 100x317 feet, west front, to Illinois Central right of way, 475 feet north of Forty-seventh street, for $30,000, at the rate of $300 a foot.

He will improve with a seventy-five apartment building, court style, of three, four, and five rooms, to cost about $250,000. Chandler, Hildredth & Co. were the brokers and will have charge of the building.

Bertha Hobschied purchased from R. S. Peale of New York City 227x178 feet at the southwest corner of Sixty-second street and South Park avenue, at rate of $100 a foot, and will improve with a forty-eight apartment building of four, five, and six rooms, to cost $175,000. M. J. Kiley of R. H. Peddicord & Co. was the broker.

JEWISH CLUB SITE BOUGHT.

An interesting development of the week was the purchase from Mrs. Lina S. Waller for $24,750 of the property on the north side of Buena avenue along the new shore line made by the Lincoln park board as a site for a proposed new Jewish club house. It will be known as the Hampden club, will have a frontage of 165 feet and depth from the water line of 139 feet, and will cost $100,000. Among the features will be a glass inclosed winter pavilion extending over the lake, a roof observatory, private bathing beach, and accommodations for members' yachts. W. B. Frankenstein of Willis & Frankenstein, who with J. L. Beckwith were the brokers in the deal, is president of the club.

ACRE ACTIVITY SHOWS STEADY IMPROVEMENT

There is no escaping the fact that there is a steadily growing activity in acres. Attention was called to this a few weeks ago in this column and last week's market developments in this field emphasize the fact. Not only are people buying acres with the purpose of subdividing, but owners who have held them for some time without making any attempt at subdivision are now dividing them and preparing to place them on the market.

One of last week's deals comprising a tract of forty acres on West North avenue and Ridgeland avenue is of much interest, for the reason that the actual purchasers are said to be two prominent business men of large means who have not heretofore been in the real estate market as investors.

The property comprises a frontage of 1,774.6 feet on North avenue and 1,886 feet on Ridgeland avenue and was acquired from Agnes E. Ducey and Mary A. McMillen for a reported consideration of $68,000, which is at the rate of $1,700 an acre, a strong figure. Title was taken by Mark S. Madden as trustee.

The property will be subdivided and placed on the market. Madden Bros. were the brokers in the deal and will have charge of the property.

Big Ravenswood Deal.

Frederick W. Freutel, vice president of the C. F. Freutel Roofing company, purchased from Mrs. Katherine Tyner Bristol a tract of sixteen acres, extending from the northwest corner of Lawrence and Keeler [Forty-second] avenues for a reported consideration of $45,000 cash, or at the rate of $2,729 an acre.

An interesting feature in connection with this transaction is the fact that the property involved formed part of a forty acre tract which was bought by the seller's father, George H. Parker, forty-[illegible] years ago, for $2,000, or $50 an acre.

The tract forms part of the golf links of the Ravenswood Golf club, which has occupied it for several years under a lease expiring Oct. 31, 1915.

Will Be Subdivided.

The property will be subdivided into thirty foot lots, and it is the intention of the purchaser to build street improvements and erect a number of dwellings and apartment buildings on part of the tract. E. Orris Hart & Co. and [illegible] & Springer closed the deal.

In another interesting transaction made a matter of record John A. Gardner took title to several acre tracts in the northwest part of the city, and subsequently transferred them to the Chicago Title and Trust company for an indicated consideration of $107,600. They comprised about twenty acres, except highways, and twelve lots at the southeast corner of Montrose and Long avenues, for an expressed $36,242; twenty acres at the northeast corner of Central and Cullom avenues, for an expressed $36,071, and twenty acres at the southeast corner of Central and Montrose avenues, for an expressed $35,577.

North Side Sale.

A notable sale of vacant was made by the North Shore Land syndicate to William R. Stirling, comprising 80 feet, north frontage, with a depth of 165 feet, on Barry avenue, between Sheridan road and the Lake Shore drive, in the new exclusive north side residence district.

The consideration is withheld, but it is reported to have been in the neighborhood of $25,000. It is stated that Mr. Stirling plans to improve with an attractive residence. Callistus S. Ennis & Co. were the brokers.

FAST BOXING MARKS BOUTS FOR AMATEURS

Third Batch of Novices Tried Out for Meet at Milwaukee.

"PROS" AROUSE FANS.

BY KNOCKOUT.

Two hundred boxing fans crowded into the Forbes gymnasium yesterday to see the third batch of amateur bouts, the finals of which will be decided tomorrow night at the same place, to select a Chicago team to compete at Milwaukee in the intercity tourney. In addition to a real exhibition of novice boxing, followers of the game saw such well known ringsters as Joe Welling, Jimmy Clabby, Tommy Gary, and Ad Wolgast go through their paces for pending contests.

The professional contests were mixed with the amateur contests, and the exhibition was by far the best which has been staged in Chicago since the lid was clamped on. The amateurs went after each other in a revengeful sort of way at the first call of time. Despite the hard wallops which featured every two round bout, there was not the semblance of a knockdown, and every contest went the regulation two sessions.

Two Rounds No Decision.

Bud Kelly and Arthur Etten, middleweights, put up the best bout of the day in the amateur class. After the contestants had swapped punches for two rounds the judges were unable to pick a winner. Another round was ordered, and still no decision could be rendered. As a result of the verdict, Kelly and Etten will take part in the semi-final and final bouts tomorrow night.

In the opening bout of the 108 pound class, Arthur Gardner, a promising boxer of the Kimrock A. C., won from Frankie Lavender of the Forbes gymnasium in an interesting contest, in which Gardner displayed all the cleverness and aggressiveness.

Because of the few 115 pound boxers who put in an appearance, only one bout was necessary to select a qualifier for the final rounds in this division. John Capes, unattached, had all the better of his contest with Al Robbins, also an unattached amateur.

Hy Goldberg, unattached, won an interesting contest from Harry Beir of the Maypole A. C. in the only contest held in the 125 pound division. Dan O'Neil of the Tust A. C. showed a lot of cleverness in his bout with Pat McAleese of the Peerless A. C. and easily won the decision. In the other bout of the lightweight class, Tom Harrison, unattached, won easily over Mike Andrews of the Sullivan A. C.

Medals for Winners.

The qualifiers of yesterday's bouts and the ones held before will clash tomorrow night, and medals emblematic of the Forbes championship in each class will be given the winners. Tomorrow night's bouts will start at 8 o'clock. Summaries:

Harry Gilmore, the veteran boxing instructor, took a hand in staging amateur shows at his Adams street gymnasium, and, according to the professor, some likely looking material competed in the contests. CHICAGO TRACK MAY GET STARS

BY REED L. PARKER.

Rene Thomas, winner of the 1914 race at Indianapolis; Arthur Duray, who finished second to Thomas; and Bablot, head of the Delage racing team and considered in Europe as the only rival of the great Boillot, are negotiating with European manufacturers for cars to drive at the Hoosier oval and on the new Chicago speedway this spring.

F. E. Edwards, director of contests at the local track, received a letter yesterday from W. F. Bradley, who handled the Delage team, the Excelsior, and the 3-litre Peugeot during their campaign in the United States last year, which straightened out several rumors that have been current concerning the possibility of foreign entrants.

Only Three Possibilities.

"Thomas, Duray, and Bablot," said Bradley in his letter, "are the only foreign drivers of French parentage who are at liberty. Boillot, Goux, Christiaens, Victor Rigal, Chassagne, and Guyot are enlisted men. They have no recourse but to continue their official duties. Thomas never was actually a member of the aviation corps. An injury to his right leg eight or nine years ago made him an incompetent. He volunteered for the earlier stages of the war, however, but slight injuries made it impossible for him to continue in the army. Duray really is an American citizen. Bablot has been excused.

"The trio has been trying for some time to interest Delage. They want to drive the Grand Prix cars. If it can be arranged they will come to this country with them. If not, Duray and Thomas are willing to take mounts on some of the American machines. I am anxious to see Bablot go to America. I believe him to be the star of Europe. He shares the honors with Boillot for spectacular work.

Drivers in Military Service.

"Tell the friends of the team I had in America last year that Guyot, who drove one of the Delages, is driving one of the staff officers of the French army and has not had a day off duty in two months. Chassagne is in one of the forts at Belfort. He is an officer. Rigal and Boillot are back of the lines in the Argonne district. They are two hours' ride from Paris, and several times have been in the capital on leave. Guyot has seen more fighting than any of us, as he is on the firing line every day.

"It is a terrible war. Few of us, indeed, but what have a record of friends and relatives killed or wounded."

IOWA COLLEGES WIN POINT.

Ames, Ia., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Ames, Iowa, Drake, and Grinnell, the four institutions controlling the Iowa state intercollegiate track meet, have voted to waive the three year varsity rule in favor of minor colleges, which threatened to boycott this state track classic. The small colleges may use an athlete four varsity years among themselves, but cannot enter him in more than three state meets. Ames will send a mile relay team to the annual indoor meet of the Kansas City club on Feb. 27 to compete with Nebraska, Missouri, Drake, and Missouri universities and the K. C. Athletic club team.

NET MEET TO PITTSBURGH.

New York, Feb. 6.—A hot contest developed between the Lakewood club of Cleveland, O., and the Pittsburgh A. C., for the clay court championship at the meeting of the National association last night. Pittsburgh captured the tournament, which it held two wears ago. The women's national singles, doubles, and mixed doubles were awarded, as heretofore, to the Philadelphia Cricket club. The national indoor championships for men and women went to the Seventh Regiment, New York City. There was also added a national indoor junior championship for boys under 18 years of age to be played at the Seventh Regiment.

"Prep" Fives Enter Tourney.

Sterling, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—High school basketball teams entered for the state tournament at Rockford Feb. 26 and 27 are: Rockford, Sterling, Dixon, Freeport, Polo, Belvidere, De Kalb, East Aurora, Elgin, Mount Carroll, and West Aurora.

Cornell, 20; Penn, 15.

Ithaca, N. Y., Feb. 6.—The Cornell university basketball team defeated the Pennsylvania five, 20 to 15, in an intercollegiate league game today.

CUBS IN MARKET FOR TWO STARS

Thomas and Roger Ready to Pay $30,000 for Players to Strengthen Club.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

If a bundle of cash will serve as an inducement, the Cubs will have a high class infielder or a star outfielder or possibly both before the end of next week. President Thomas and Manager Bresnahan of the west siders will leave today for New York to attend the schedule meeting there Tuesday. The Cub president declared last night that he was taking several blank checks along and intimated that he would go as high as $30,000 for the men he wanted.

Bresnahan seemed to think there was a splendid chance of obtaining at least one recognized star of the National league during the New York meeting. He knows the two players he wants, but declined to give their names. He even indicated that deals for the two had already been started and that he had met with considerable encouragement.

Roger Dreams of Pennant.

"Of course we have a lot of material to trade," said the manager. "I might be able to land a good man that way, but if that fails, we will have a lot of cash to offer along with the extra players. I am in great hope of landing at least one of the two men I want, and if I should be fortunate enough to get both of them we'll be the winners of the pennant unless something happens."

Outside of saying one of the players was an infielder and one an outfielder, Roger would not talk about them. It is thought one of them may be Heine Groh of Cincinnati, the sturdy second baseman who did so well last year, but, at the same time, Roger talked in most favorable terms of the prospects of "Polly" McLarry, his Louisville recruit, for the second base job. Bill Rourke, boss of the Omaha club in the Western league, met Roger yesterday and congratulated him upon getting McLarry. The youngster was in the Western league the previous season, and Rourke pronounced him a coming star.

Wants Right Handed Slugger.

What Roger wants most of all is a clouting right handed hitter, and he is angling for an outfielder of that style. McLarry, the young second baseman, is a left handed swinger, and there are too many Cub regulars now who hit from that side. Saier, Good, Schulte, and Williams all are left handed hitters, and Roger prefers to add one to the list who can bat the other way.

Secretary Grabiner of the White Sox announced several more dates for exhibition games in California during March. The games to be played in San Francisco and Los Angeles by both the first and second teams were announced two weeks ago. Since then the Sox secretary has arranged for several side trips from the two large cities.

Dates Booked for Sox.

March 8, 9, and 10—At San Diego against Vernon club.
March 15—At Bakersfield, against Portland.
March 16—At Hanford against Portland.
March 17—At San José against Salt Lake club.

The games for the second team were:

March 8—At San José against Salt Lake.
March 9—At Sacramento against Salt Lake.
March 10—At Modesto against Portland.
March 15—At Santa Rosa against San Francisco.
March 16—At Modesto against Modesto Reds.
March 17—At Fresno against Portland.
March 22 and 23—At San Diego against United States marines.

Play at San Diego Fair.

The games booked for San Diego are to be features of the big fair which will open there about the same time as the Frisco fair. The contests will be played at the fair grounds in the big new stadium just completed for athletic sports during the exhibition.

President Weeghman of the Whales announced yesterday that as many of his players as possible would report here on March 4 ready for the training trip to Shreveport, which starts March 6, and that they would come two days in advance so they could attend the monster dinner to be given by the north side boosters. Art Wilson, who lives down the state, and Rollie Zeider, who lives in Indiana, will be among the regulars present.

Target Tips and Hunting Helps by Alfred P. Lane

Interest in Firearms.

INTEREST in shooting in all of its branches has greatly increased of late. More trap shooting, rifle, and revolver clubs are being organized, and the public in general is making demands upon authoritative sources for information covering the whole field of the sport. Possibly the influence of the European war contributes in part to the apparently general desire for a more intimate knowledge of firearms.

Because of the number of questions which the sporting editor of THE TRIBUNE has received, he has arranged with me to take care of a department on the subject.

This column is open to queries on any subject concerning the use of firearms for hunting or target work. If space permits I will also throw the column open to discussions, by readers, of various types of firearms and other things pertaining to the sport.

Make Questions Specific.

On questions regarding the abundance or scarcity of game in any particular locality, there will be some delay, as in most cases it will be necessary for me to write to some correspondent living in the section asked about.

Please make your questions as specific and definite as you possibly can. Such questions as "Which is the best revolver?" or "What rifle shall I use for big game hunting?" obviously cannot be answered. Give me all the details, such as the conditions under which the arm is to be used and just what you expect to be able to do with it.

If your questions are of such a nature that a lengthy answer is necesary, send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I will write to you personally. All questions should, of course, be sent to me in care of this paper.

Unsigned communications will receive no attention, but the writer's name will be withheld if he desires.

From my experience with this line of work, I am led to anticipate that many questions will be asked which will be, in substance, identical, and, therefore, an answer to one such will answer all the others.

The Dumdum Bullet.

There is one question which I know will be among the first, and that is "What is a dum-dum bullet?" So I'm going to answer that one right now.

A dum-dum bullet is, broadly speaking, any bullet designed to expand upon striking soft material such as flesh. The regular hunting cartridge used for big game is a dum-dum because it has a soft lead nose sticking out of the front end of the bullet's metal jacket. When such a bullet strikes flesh, it "mushrooms,"—i. e, the soft lead nose spreads out like the top of a mush room and the result is a big hole which usually quickly kills the animal struck.

Cartridges for use in war have sharp pointed bullets and are supposed to drill a neat little hole, which, if not perforating a vital part, will heal quickly. The only trouble is, pointed bullets frequently act erratically and instead of going straight through, they tip and tumble end over end and tear a hole just like one made by a dum-dum.

This peculiar phenomenon occurs mostly at the shorter ranges and is perhaps the cause of the accusations regarding the use of dum-dums by both sides in the present European trouble.

Now come along with your questions!

A Word About Mr. Lane

MOST readers of the sporting page need no introduction to Alfred P. Lane. Followers of shooting especially remember the young man, just out of his teens, who made a clean sweep of the pistol and revolver championships for the United States at the Olympic games held in Stockholm in 1912. Before going to Stockholm, Mr. Lane had made three world's records and had won the indoor pistol championship of the United States.

Starting with a 22-caliber rifle and practicing in his father's cellar as a boy, Mr. Lane has grown up with a natural penchant for firearms, being almost equally expert with pistol, revolver, rifle, and shotgun.

With this experience as a groundwork, THE TRIBUNE has secured the services of Mr. Lane to answer all questions of its readers relating to the use of firearms for hunting or target work. In the adjacent column, Mr. Lane explains what he will attempt to do.

All letters for this department should be addressed to Alfred P. Lane, care Sporting Editor, Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

COMMISSION TO AWAIT VERDICT

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 6.—August Herrmann and John E. Bruce, chairman and secretary, respectively, of the national baseball commission, were reëlected at the annual meeting of that body here tonight after voting earlier in the day not to reorganize until after a decision on the Federal league's injunction suit at Chicago had been rendered.

At the afternoon session of the commission it was decided that it would be best not to hold an election of officers at this time because of the complicated legal situation that organized baseball now finds itself in, but at the meeting tonight this decision was reconsidered and the election was held.

Leaves Players' Cases Alone.

Chairman Herrmann of the commission said: "While we decided to reorganize we likewise decided not to make any move for any of the players that are likely to be involved in any decision that the court might make at Chicago."

The commission went into the question of lifting the draft from the class AA leagues and after a discussion it was announced that the question was such an important one "not only to the minor leagues concerned but also to numerous baseball players" that further time was needed before any decision was reached.

Chivington in Meeting.

The supreme court of baseball admitted President Thomas Chivington of the American association to the conference room. Chivington, after coming out of the meeting room, said he had not discussed the question of lifting the draft from class AA leagues and that he had nothing to say on that subject at this time. He stated he was interested in several minor cases and had discussed these with the commission.

President John K. Tener and Secretary John Heydler of the National league left tonight for New York to attend the meeting of the league there on Tuesday.

SANBORN ASKS HALL OF FAME BE CONTINUED

Baseball Too Venerable Not to Have Its List of Honor Men.

FANS WANT TO KNOW.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Baseball is too venerable and too vigorous an institution not to have a permanent hall of fam. In its earlier years sporadic efforts were made to establish one, but it remained for Hugh Chalmers of Detroit to show the guardians of America's national pastime how best to preserve its heroes in memory.

The late Harry Pulliam, at the time he was president of the National league, endeavored to start a line of celebrities for the organization of which he was the head, but his successors in office failed to perpetuate the idea. At best it would have been applicable to only one of the two major leagues, hence incomplete. It was based on only one kind of ability, hence eliminated a large number of ball players who were unable to bat into the .300 class.

Chalmers Baseball Fan.

It remained for the Detroit manufacturer to evolve a scheme that would determine, as nearly as such a thing can be determined, the player in each major league who was entitled to have his name inscribed indelibly in the records of the game as being the most notable performer in his class during each season. This was a tentative proposition, largely for advertising purposes, to be sure, but founded on a lifelong interest in baseball.

The Chalmers trophy, which was the concrete evidence of that idea, has in five years placed in the hall of fame such illustrious names as Tyrus Cobb, Napoleon Lajoie, Frank Schulte, Larry Doyle, Tris Speaker, Walter Johnson, Jake Daubert, Eddie Collins, and John J. Evers. Those are not all the stars who have been before the public on the diamond in the last five seasons, but each one of them has done something out of the ordinary by which he stood out above his fellows in the season in which he was selected as the recipient of the trophy.

Last Year for Trophy.

Last fall finished the five year period for which the trophy was originally offered, and its donor decided to discontinue it so far as his personal connection with it was concerned. But he did not copyright or patent the idea, and there does not seem to be any reason why the hall of fame should not be made a permanent feature of the game. Although he has not been consulted in the matter or expressed any opinion, it is believed Mr. Chalmers would offer no objection to the continuation of the system used in recent years to determine the best all round player of the season in each major league. It might be used intact or it might be modified if the guardians of organized baseball can improve on the system which worked so well that little criticism was heard of the selections of the trophy commission.

Officials of each league might take up the matter independently, or the national commission could oversee the working of the system without adding greatly to the duties of that already overworked body. The cost of choosing the winner always has been negligible, as the trophy commission was an honorary institution, its members serving without compensation of any kind. A small appropriation for postage for the chairman would be the weightiest expense.

Fans Always Eager to Know.

It may be asked if it really is worth while. There seems to be only one answer. The baseball fan is eager to know what player is best in his position. Discussions are endless along these lines. The fan wants to know who is the highest salaried player, as if salaries were any sure criterion of merit. He wants to know who is the best batter, the best fielder, the best base runner, the best pitcher, and so on down the line. The champion team is supposed to be the best, but is not always made up of the best players in a league, because stars sometimes are doomed to perform on tail end teams.

To tell the baseball public who is considered the best ball player in a season seems quite worth while, therefore. He may not be best in any one department of the game, but so good in all of them that he stands out by himself. No arithmetical averages can tell that story, because it must be a composite of expert opinion. Opinions differ widely, to be sure, but almost everything is based on opinion. Even the austere looking batting and fielding averages, which look so positive, are a composite photograph of personal opinions.

Scorers Differ in Opinion.

It is up to the official scorers to decide when a hit is not an error or when a fumble is a bingle. Seldom in doubtful cases will the opinions of half a dozen experts agree, and a bad case of indigestion in the interior department of an official scorer may cost a batsman several points in his average in a single game.

Baseball promoters pay out considerable coin in a year to produce the official batting and fielding averages of a league. There has to be at least one official opinion at every game played and for making the doubtful decisions the scorer in chief is paid real money by the club owners. Incidentally the system now used in appointing official scorers is all wrong, because it is susceptible to abuse, and, in some cities, is abused. Better results could be obtained if the choice of official opinions were made by the head of each league, instead of by the head of each club, but that is another question.

Small Cost for Commission.

If it is worth anything to determine who is the champion batsman each season, it ought to be worth a little effort and time to choose a representative each year for baseball's hall of fame. That is all it would cost. It is due the Cobbs and Lajoies, the Schultes and Dauberts, the Doyles and Speakers, and the Johnsons and Collinses, and Everses of the future to extend the honor record of baseball indefinitely.

The concrete evidence of being chosen to a niche in the hall of fame really was of secondary importance. Automobiles no longer are novelties to ball players and those who are excellent enough to be considered "best" usually draw salaries large enough to permit them to own motor cars of their own. The donor of the trophy recognized that fact and always felt that the honor of being selected was the real reward.

Concrete Proofs of Leadership.

At moderate cost the national commission or the National and American leagues could provide each season something in the way of medals, fobs, or buttons emblematic of all round excellence and endeavor. In this way a concrete proof could be given the player selected for the honor, but the honor still would remain the prize as it has been for the last few years.

The machinery for making the choice already is in existence. It can be continued with little effort on the part of baseball officials. It can be revised, revamped, and made over entirely if the national commission desires, but in some way or other baseball's hall of fame ought to be continued.

C. A. MAY DIVIDE SEASON; SMALL TOWNS FAVOR PLAN.

Muscatine, Ia., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Agitation for a split reel season is again gaining support around the C. A. circuit. While the movement did not receive the expected encouragement at the Waterloo meeting recently, still many of the most influential supporters of the game believe that such a plan would assist the clubs in the smaller towns in a most encouraging manner.

It is argued that with the double season it would not be necessary for a few clubs to trail during the greater part of the season. Two openings and two closing dates as well as a post-season series between the winners of both seasons would enrich the club treasuries, it is argued.

The most important event of the week was the selection of George Manush to manage the Clinton club. Frank Doyle will have a great flock of aspirants to select from when his "hopefuls" line up in April. Youngsters have been given the preference by Boss Boyle. One Harry Swensen is a young college pitcher from Texas ,while Harry Brady of St. Louis, an infielder, is also signed.

A truce has been struck with Tom Hayden whereby that ponderous personage in things baseball at Burlington will return to the C. A. pack. Hayden voiced a loud protest against several actions taken at the Waterloo meeting and staged an insurrection all by himself. President Justice this week extended the olive branch, however. Hayden is the hope of Burlington and his signature to a contract will again bring confidence in the Pathfinder camp.

TERRE HAUTE PRESIDENT RAPS CENTRAL LEAGUE.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—President Beggs of the Terre Haute ball club has prepared a two column statement explaining why the owners of the club will refuse to post the $2,000 guarantee in the Central league, thereby forfeiting the franchise. He shows that the Three Eyes league, which he wants to enter, has been better managed from a business standpoint. The league organization of the Three Eyes is not so topheavy in cost, and last season money was turned back to the clubowners from the league treasury.

Beggs says President Heilbroner of the Central league has gone on record as not wanting Terre Haute in the Central, and the Terre Haute president suggests that with the league president feeling that way toward the city Terre Haute might find itself without a franchise at any moment.

The transportation cost is shown in detail. In the Central as proposed the trip mileage from Terre Haute to the other seven cities is 2,418 miles and the one way fare $845. The sleeping car charge is $144. In the Three Eyes the mileage would be 1,222 and the one way fare $497. Perhaps there would be one sleeping car charge of $24. In the Three Eyes the fare may be reduced by the use of interurbans.

Charles L. Bienderwolf, secretary of the Fort Wayne Commercial club, has taken an option on the Fort Wayne club. It is said that Barnell wants to sell and invest in the Wheeling club.

RAISE MONEY TO FINANCE BISTATE LEAGUE CLUBS.

Rockford, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Clubs in the new Bistate league have been raising funds this week. Ottawa has been holding a carnival with considerable success. The canvass for subscriptions began at Beloit yesterday and is proceeding satisfactorily. Streator held a festival last week and is now signing players. Beloit has decided to play on the fair grounds just over the line in Illinois.

Ralph Richardson, who has offered to operate the Madison team for three years without asking Madison business men for funds, has given the Madison directors until Feb. 10 to arrange some satisfactory plan to pay the club's indebtedness. He will not take the team unless it is turned over to him free of financial obligations.

The Rockford club has signed Bird, Himbury, and Nelson of last season's team. Aurora has signed George Clark, formerly catcher on the Denver team. Streator has signed William Sears, a former I.-M. league player, and E. T. Broadwell, a pitcher. Ottawa has accepted the terms of Perry, a former La Salle and Lincoln outfielder, and Pfeffer, a Lake Shore league infielder.

SPLIT INTERESTS IN CLUBS.

New York, Feb. 6.—The McKeever-Ebbets interests, which own and operate the Brooklyn National league club and the Newark club in the International league, have divided their interests into two corporations. The former is incorporated in New York and the latter in New Jersey. The same combination will continue to control both clubs. Objections to paying taxes in both states on the Brooklyn club was the reason assigned.

Cub Hurler at Hot Springs.

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 6.—Catcher Nunamaker of the New York Americans and Pitcher Charley Smith of the Chicago Nationals arrived yesterday to work out and take a course of baths before joining their clubs.

OWNERS BATTLE FOR FRANCHISE IN THREE EYES

Springfield and Terre Haute Want to Place Team in Tearney's League.

Bloomington, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Following closely after the application from Terre Haute for a franchise in the Three Eyes league comes another from the Springfield association reconsidering its previous action in forfeiting its membership.

The sudden decision of the capital city to seek readmittance was a great surprise to the magnates, and may lead to a lively session at Davenport, when the adjourned meeting is called to order later in the present month. Rock Island was given the franchise surrendered by Springfield, but nothing has been done as yet toward organizing a team. In addition there is a faction in that city which has opposed the admittance of a Three Eyes club.

With the certainty that the league must furnish the funds to launch a team in Rock Island, and also that the league must make up a possible deficit, some of the directors may support Springfield for membership. Others who are confident that the opposition to the league in Rock Island is too small to be worth considering will favor the retention of that city in accordance with the original program. It is likely that both Springfield and Rock Island will have loyal supporters in the contest. Dubuque has forwarded the $500 required as a guarantee and this leaves only the single vacancy to be filled at the Davenport meeting.

The Decatur directors have called upon the citizens of that city to purchase 200 season tickets at $25 each to insure the association against possible loss through light attendance. They believe that $5,000 will protect them amply against any shortage.

SHANKS FOOLS MEDICS WHO PREDICTED DEATH.

There is not a fan in the country who, gazing on Howard Shanks now, would believe that only five years ago he was told that he could live no more than a few weeks and that he would die a victim of consumption. Shanks is now one of the star outfielders of the American league, a husky lad, with one of the best throwing arms in the game.

Shanks has performed much like the Federal league, but accomplished a vigorous comeback.

Back in 1910 Shanks was outfielding with Liverpool in the old O. P., while Canton and Akron were fighting tooth and nail for the pennant. As the close of the season he took himself to a medical gent, who hammered his chest, listened to the working of his bellows, and then shook his head sorrowfully.

"My boy, you ain't got more than a couple of weeks to live. Prepare for the end." Such was the encouraging ultimatum poured into the young outfielder's ears.

Shanks beat it over to Monacca, Pa., just across the river from East Liverpool. For some reason he chose to die there.

The examination of Shanks was made at the solicitation of the Pittsburgh club, who thought a lot of Shanks' skill, but was skeptical about his general health. When the doctor's report was submitted the Pirates, of course, gave up all thought of snaring Shanks.

Shanks went over to the Pennsylvania town prepared to die. Early in the spring Bill Phillips, manager of the East Liverpool team, nearly collapsed when he got a letter from Shanks asking when and where he should report for spring training.

When Phillips recovered his equilibrium he wrote Shanks to report at once. Shanks did, looking huskier and stronger than ever.

"Either that doc didn't know his business or Monacca is some health resort," said Shanks.

Shanks had a good reason in 1911 with East Liverpool, went to Youngstown in 1912, and graduated from the minors the next season, going to Washington, where he has been since.

MAROONS DECLINE MAT DEFI.

Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Chicago university's wrestlers have declined to meet Iowa on the local mat and Manager Nelson A. Kellogg will endeavor, he stated today, to secure a date with another conference team. He has booked a match with the Nebraska mat performers, who will come here in February or March. Ames has refused Iowa a date. The Hawkeye wrestlers will go to Lincoln, Neb., to participate in the western championship tournament, probably in April.

WELLS BEATS DANS IN BOUT.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Dick Wells of Terre Haute was given the decision over George Dans of Monmouth, Ill., who substituted for "Wildcat" Ferns of Kansas City last night, after a ten round fight. Wells was the aggressor in all the rounds and punished Dans severely. In the semi-windup were Freddie Enck of Aurora, Ill., and Jimmy Gary of Chicago, at 122 pounds. Enck was thought to have shown more science, but the fact that he was twice knocked down caused the bout to be called a draw. Jack Dillon was the referee.

Stewart to Box Murphy.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Hal Stewart, the Fort Wayne lightweight, has signed to meet "Harlem Tommy" Murphy on Feb. 26 at Cleveland.

Brookfeds Report March 6.

West Aurora, 42; Joliet, 22.

Joliet, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Joliet High was defeated last night, 42 to 22, by West Aurora in a rough game. The locals were outweighed and outskilled. Cigrand played the star game for the visitors on defensive, with Bennett shooting fourteen baskets. Gillilan starred for Joliet.

OTHER BASKET RESULTS.

South Bend H. S., 38; Gary H. S., 21.

Biggest Catch of Season in Florida; Woman Who Made It

REPORTS from Florida state that never in the memory of the oldest anglers has there been a season as good as the present one for pulling the finny tribe out of the deep. The denizens of the deep are biting so easily that the fishermen and women are enjoying great sport. Even the catching of sharks is becoming common. One of the most successful anglers at Palm Beach is Mrs. Edward B. McLean of Washington, D. C., and her catch, while includes sixty king fish, is shown in the accompanying photograph. This is the biggest catch of the season thus far, and Mrs. McLean is justly proud of her angling ability.

DONOVAN RULES MEN WITH SMILE

Manager "Wild Bill" Donovan of the New York Americans will be one of the most interestingly unique managers in the big leagues.

He is of a new type; he rules through a sunny disposition rather than a rod of iron. "Bill" has been knocking around the diamond for almost eighteen years, and his closest friends declare he has yet to lose his temper.

"The major leagues are very little different from the minors," said "Smiling Bill." "I think kindred principles will get the same results in both shows. Most people tell you that gentleness will not go in fast company. But I honestly believe that you can get far more out of any man by encouragement and good nature than through abuse and invective. A ball player is very much like every other human contrivance. Put him on his honor, treat him honestly, and you will get none the worst of it.

"In Providence last year early in the spring the rival managers were telling me that I had the rottenest club on earth. They couldn't understand, the way we were going, why I had any license to smile. Well, I gained thirty pounds last season. And would you believe it, when the team finally straightened out and started a winning spurt my pessimistic friends were around telling me I should have won out by ten games.

Chance Wants "Info."

"I called on Frank Chance one night last summer. 'Bill,' he said, 'tell me the secret of those jowls of yours. Your club is almost as bad as mine, but there you are, fat as butter, and I feel as if I had been drawn through a knothole.' He looked the part, too. I figured when I started in the game that life wasn't worth a long and sorrowful face. I believed then and I believe now that fans do not care to see a lot of mourners hanging around. It is possible to be quite serious and happy at the same time.

"When I take hold of the New York club in earnest I shall endeavor to follow a few simple rules that I think have earned me some friends in my time. I shall treat my players with every courtesy and friendship, for I feel that I always shall be one of the boys. I shall try to encourage every man of the squad and give all a square deal. I have not the least apprehension that any player will try to take advantage of me.

Bill Has Own Ideas.

"Of course," continued Bill, "I have a few theories of my own that I intend to try out—little tricks that proved successful in the International league. I do not mind telling you one of these. It is to practice the outfielders on ground hit balls. I think every fielder should receive as many grounders as flies during practice. Often you hear a remark that an outfielder is a wonder except for weakness on ground balls. There should be no such weakness if he is possessed of physical qualifications. An infielder perfects himself through practice; why should not an outfielder?

"And another thing, too: there is no excuse for wildness on the part of a pitcher. Ninety-nine times in a hundred wildness indicates nothing more than lack of opportunity. Control is the easiest thing of all to master. It comes by hard work. I say this because there was never a wilder young man than myself when I broke in.

Not Worried Over Team.

"Concerning the makeup of the team next year I am of course somewhat in the dark. A few of the players I know personally, but the great majority only from hearsay. Caldwell, of course, I know and I hope that he will be with us. I do believe that the club has an excellent lot of pitchers. There should be no worry on that score. Of course we need a left hander or two, but they will be obtained, no doubt. I think with High I shall have the makings of a good outfield. Everybody speaks well of Cook's prospects. Cree I have known in the International league. High always struck me as a rather promising outfielder. I am familiar with Frits Maisel from International league experience. Peckinpaugh is regarded in many quarters as the best shortstop in the league."

SENIOR BOAKES BEATS ROBINSON

BY JACK PROCTOR.

Not to be outdone by his son, who has beaten some of the best players in the east, Harry Boakes Sr., the veteran racquets instructor of the University club, yesterday defeated James A. Robinson, teacher of the game at the Chicago Athletic association, three out of four games at the C. A. A. courts.

The Cherry Circle expert won the opening game, 15 to 12, after spirited play in which the younger performer caught his opponent unawares and, because of drop shots, hard service, and returns, captured the game and placed the University club player on the defensive.

Robinson Breaks Bat.

The veteran came back strong in the second encounter and reversed the tables by the same score. In the third game Robinson experienced trouble when his bat broke, but after an uphill battle which went into a set games Boakes won, 18 to 15.

Robinson tried hard to retrieve his lost ground in the fourth game, but the greater experience of the veteran stood him in good stead, and, by virtue of well placed drop shots, won the game and match by the score of 17 to 14.

A large number of former C. A. A. racquets experts watched the game and marveled at the play of the veteran, Boakes formerly was instructor at the Cherry Circle club, and, although he has passed the sixty year mark in age, he still is considered a worthy opponent for players half his age.

Summary of Play.

Boakes—2, 1, 1, 0, 3, 2, 2, 1—12.

HAUGHTON ASKS LIMIT ON PASS

New York, Feb. 6.—Informal discussion of proposed changes in the rules at its meeting last night developed into a sharp division into factions of the football rules committee over a suggestion by Percy D. Haughton of Harvard, to limit the use of the forward pass. According to unofficial reports, Coach Haughton and Dr. Carl Williams of Pennsylvania, will argue for placing a limit on the pass in some manner to prevent it overbalancing the superior eneral play of an opposing team.

Walter Camp of Yale is opposed to any change in the rules, and is said to head the faction against tampering with the present forward pass regulations. Camp, on the other hand, is reported to have been won over to the porposal to make the numbering of players compulsory. It is believed such a rule may be adopted.

Action is also expected to be taken against the custom of coaches sending players into the game with instructions. One proposal is that the player report to the referee when he goes into the game and have no conversation with the captain or other players, but it is believed that would only delay the transmission of information.

GREAT DAY FOR ANNAPOLIS.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 6.—Midshipmen athletes made a clean sweep today. The basketball five beat Dartmouth's quintet, 40 to 12. The Navy wrestling team defeated the grapplers from Pennsylvania State, 19 to 10. The indoor trackmen beat New York university's team, 42½ to 11½. Massachusetts Tech's fencing squad fell a victim to the Middies by 9 to 0. The Navy swimmers trimmed the Pittsburgh team, 36 to 17.

Taylor Outpoints Dalton.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 6.—Sammy Taylor of Detroit had a shade on Jerry Dalton of Indianapolis in an eight round bout before the Windsor A. C. Wednesday. Taylor was the aggressor, and while Dalton's cleverness made the Detroiter miss at times, the punches that he did land were cleaner and harder than the Hoosier fighter's.

TWO GOLF STARS SHINE ON LINKS

While looking over the names of the amateur golfers who, in the opinion of the writers have been deserving of a rating, it is worthy of mention in passing that during a period of nine consecutive years there are only two, Walter J. Travis and Fred Herreshoff, who have never been omitted. Unfortunately golf has no official ranking list, the nearest approach being the national handicaps, compiled annually by the United States Golf association. This work of the United States Golf association executive committee is for the purpose of determining who shall and who shall not have the right to compete in the annual championship tournament.

The list of names includes those from scratch to five, inclusive, and numbers more than 200. A large percentage of these eligibles are grouped in the five classes and many others at four. The linksman, to the best of his ability, picks the first sixteen. He has no two on an equality.

Ouimet in First Place.

Without question the "big three" in amateur circles at present are Francis Ouimet, Charles Evans Jr., and Jerome D. Travers. Just how these men should be placed has puzzled a good many. In fact, selecting the leading golfers any time is a ticklish undertaking, like playing with fire, but after facing this sort of danger for years one naturally becomes more or less hardened.

Returning, therefore, to the leaders, when it comes to making the rubber core behave, where is there the equal of Ouimet to be found among the amateur golfers in the United States? With him the object of the game—"to get the ball into the hole with the least number of strokes"—is never forgotten. He applies that motto to match as well as medal play.

Makes Good Average.

You don't hear Ouimet say, "I hate medal play," or "I never could score over that rotten course." Open champion in 1913 and amateur title holder in 1914 is surely going some without doing anything else. But he has done a great deal more. Playing almost daily over a variety of courses from spring until well into the autumn, the Massachusetts product averaged close to 75. Ability to score and win not merely at home but on strange courses and testing links, to say nothing of the caliber of opponents met, should all be considered as factors before rendering the final decision. Ouimet, therefore, without a weak spot in his armor, may be said to be almost in a class by himself.

Evans, No. 2 on the list, cannot always control his nerves, and when nerves enter into the game it is a certainty that the ball will go a-wandering. "Chick" is a wonder at medal play. He proved that again in the open championship at Midlothian when he came within a stroke of tying Walter C. Hagen for first place. Like Ouimet, there is no shot in the bag over which Evans is not master, yet he defeats himself at the match game. There is little to choose between these two stars, but what margin exists clearly lies with Ouimet.

Travers Uses Wooden Clubs.

Travers is another past master who for years has been striving to regain confidence with his wooden clubs. Despite this handicap rare powers of recovery, supplemented by putting so deadly as at times to be almost mechanical in its accuracy, and an ideal fighting temperament, have worked to keep the Upper Montclair man close to the top. When his driving went wrong it shook his confidence.

The way players ranked since 1910 follows:

NOTES OF THE GOLFERS.

George Simpson, formerly with the Wheaton Golf club and last year with the Omaha Country club, has signed with the new Oak Park Country club for the coming season. He is a former amateur champion of Scotland.

Not to be outdone by G. W. Bartlett, the touring Englishman, who donated a cup for women golfers at the Chicago Golf Shop indoor school, M. D. Lewy of Chicago has donated a bigger one, which will be played for through March.

Golf Ball with Backspin.

ATTACK and defense have become just as important in golf as in baseball and war. Modern golf architects revel in constructing earthen ramparts and in devising trenches. Of late a dominant feature has been the trapping of the putting greens, putting a premium on ability to give the ball back spin. A Scotch manufacturer has devised a club which, he asserts, will accomplish this difficult trick with comparative ease.

Now comes a ball manufacturer of Akron, O., who proposes also to simplify the problem devised by the golf architects. It is a new ball covered with vulcanized rubber paint which is molded in as part of the cover. It is a nonskid ball. Experts who have tried it assert that it possesses all the quality that has made the rubber core famous, and has the big advantage that it is much easier to control.

The ball sticks to the club longer than the older make of spheres and for this reason it is easier to impart back spin. There appears to be hope for the player in approaching the modern island greens.

KENTUCKY DERBY NOW RICH EVENT

American Turf Classic Set for May 8 to Have $10,000 Added.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 6.—The coming Kentucky Derby, the forty-first renewal of the greatest of 3 year old races in all America, will have $10,000 in added money by the New Louisville Jockey club.

The Kentucky Derby this season will be run on Saturday, May 8, the opening day of the twelve days' spring meeting at Churchill Downs, which ends on May 21, on which day the Kentucky Oaks, the great 3 year old filly classic, is decided. In the latter race the New Louisville Jockey club has this season increased the added value from $2,000 to $2,500.

Big Events at Downs.

The full lists of events follow:

The Kentucky Derby, for three year olds, subscription $25, $200 additional to start, with $10,000 added, of which $2,000 to the second, $1,000 to the third, and the fourth to save stakes. Colts to carry 122; geldings, 119; fillies, 117 pounds; nonwinners of a 3 year old race of the value of $1,500 allowed five pounds; maidens, twelve pounds; 1¼ miles.

The Kentucky Oaks for 3 year old fillies, with $2,500 added, 1 1-16 miles. The same conditions prevailing as last year as they do, in fact, in all the other stakes to be run off at the downs next spring.

The Clark handicap, for 3 year olds and upward, with $2,000 added, 1 1-16 miles.

The Frank Fehr stakes, for 3 year olds and upward (selling), with $1,000 added, 1 mile.

The Juvenile stakes, for 2 year olds (selling), with $1,000 added, 5 furlongs.

Many Big Stake Races.

This list makes a big stake race on all but five days of the coming spring meeting at the Downs. On these off days an attractive card of overnight events will be devised by Secretary Applegate, and a handicap upon each of those days will fill a place of a stake event with added money of a proportionate value. There will be no purse of less than $600 in added money.

Manager M. J. Winn expects a record breaking list of entries at the Downs this season, especially in the Kentucky Derby race. He has the assurance from all the big eastern turfmen that their cracks will be nominated in the great classic next spring, and the eastern band of 3 year olds of merit are so strong this season as to insure a great race.

Among the big winning 2 year olds of last season which are sure to be entered in the Kentucky Derby of 1915 are Trojan, Comely, Pebbles, Luke, Sea Shell, High Noon, Ed Crump, Chalmers, Garbage, Kaskaskia, Emerson, Cochran, Trial by Jury, Last Coin, Solly, Boxer, Cataline, Kilkenny Boy, Marion H., Iron Duke, Ethan Allen, Tokay, and The Masquerader.

GOTHAM NET CLUB PLANS FOR NATIONAL TOURNEY.

New York, Feb. 6.—Announcements were made today that the West Side Tennis club, which the United States Lawn Tennis associaton last night awarded the national championship tournament for 1915, had already made plans to make the meeting the greatest in the history of tennis in this country. To carry out building plans, which include new stands, dressing rooms, and other accomodatons for players and officials, a member of the club announced it had been offered a loan of $100,000.

By the first week in September, the time set for the tournament, President Julian S. Myrick of the West Side club assured the association last night that everything would be in readiness to accomodate even larger crowds than attended the Davis cup matches on the club's courts at Forest Hills, L. I., last August.

To take the place of the national championship, which it has staged for thirty-four years, officials of the Newport Casino announced that a special invitation tournament for kings of the courts would be arranged.

Maple Leaf Yacht Emblem.

The National Yacht club of Toronto has decided on a maple leaf emblem to be worn on its boat's sails, like the crown used by the Royal Canadian Yacht club dinghies.

NO RULE CHANGE MADE IN WHIST

Auction Players Adopt Game Played by Many English Clubs Year Ago.

BY A. R. METCALFE.

Auction players in Chicago and vicinity have been much upset during the last week or two over what are incorrectly termed the new rules. These consist mainly of a new set of values in which the spade count is eliminated entirely except the count of nine for royal spades.

Some of the English clubs dropped the spade bid nearly a year ago as a protest against a certain school of high spade bids which originated in this country, and evidently some of our players have just learned of this action and believe they are playing an up to date game by eliminating the spade bid and allowing the dealer to pass.

In reality those players are behind the time and the proper game is still precisely what it has been during the last two years.

New York Rules in Force.

Since bridge was introduced into the United States, play in this country has been governed by the code published by the Whist club of New York, as when auction bridge supplanted bridge the same condition obtained. All of our text books contain the code of the Whist club of New York, and this has given general satisfaction.

Until a more authoritative organization, such as the American Whist league, or some organization of bridge clubs publishes a complete code for the use of American players, we must continue to use the code of the New York club or the result will be chaos.

Undoubtedly, if there be a general demand for the change in question, stupid although it may be, the New York Whist club will change its code to conform. Only iconoclasts will attempt to wreck the game by following individual laws with no authority whatever behind them.

Many Suggestions Offered.

During the last week the writer has had a dozen suggestions offered for change in the laws, of which a few samples are given below:

Bid 10, 12, 16, or some other number without naming a suit.

Make all suits of equal value.

Play with and without honors, as in skat, the side which wins any particular deal to score the honors, no matter who holds them.

Abolish bids of clubs and diamonds.

Undoubtedly if players cease to be governed by a given code various clubs will adopt certain of these and other innovations, and a player who learns the game in one place will find that he knows nothing about the game as played in the next city.

Those who believe in clean sport and in upbuilding the game will adhere to the code of the Whist club of New York or take measures to have another code adopted by a body having sufficient authority.

Queries and Answers.

Mauston, Wis.—[To the Editor.]—During a game of five hundred we failed to find a settlement of an argument in the "Book of Hoyle," 1914-15. The first two paragraphs under the head of "Irregularities of Play" seem to contradict each other. The argument was as follows:

Y and B were playing S and D. S and D were 480, while their opponents were [illegible]. B bids eight diamonds and D bids eight no trump. S and D took every trick, but it is discovered at the last that D has failed to discard. What should the score be after the hand is played, figuring eight no trump as 360? S and D claim they should still be 480, while Y and B claim they should go back 360 points, which would make S and D 120. Who is right?

Answer—The second paragraph is definite and final and the bidding pair should go back 360 points. I have no idea what the other paragraph means.

BEWARE OF A FELLOW WHO WANTS THE TERM DEFINED

ILLINOIS HOPES TO FIND STARS BY NEW SYSTEM

Urbana, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—New stars for the Illinois track team may be discovered by a plan of the department of athletics, which has changed routine gymnasium work into live play and pleasure.

Physical training is compulsory for freshmen, but under the new system they are given an opportunity to take special work in track athletics instead of going through "exercises." Sidney Casner, freshman track coach, is in charge of the squad of 200 yearlings who rushed to avail themselves of the opportunity to discover if they had latent talent in track athletics.

Already Coach Casner has cast his eyes on several freshmen who he believes will prove material for the varsity team after a year of preliminary training. Because of the horde of men with previous experience who apply to Gill for a tryout for the varsity, it is impossible to give much attention to men who have had little or no experience.

Rue Rejoins Track Squad.

With not an indoor meet carded for February, Gill's varsity squad contents itself with making ready for the competition with Northwestern in March and for the indoor conference meet. The Illini have practically given up hope of securing any more meets for the winter. Gill's energies will be bent to get the Illini in shape for the Easter trip to California.

Illinois basketball players are on edge for the important battle with Wisconsin on the local floor next Monday night. The game will have an important bearing on Illinois' prospects for conference honors. So far Coach Jones' athletes have won their games handily and have not had a hard test. They have met Indiana twice, Ohio, and Purdue.

Play at Madison Saturday.

The Illini will play a return game at Madison next Saturday. Should the locals put over a brace of victories the feat would eliminate the Badgers entirely and leave the championship to be decided by the Chicago-Illinois series.

An important factor may be the return of former Capt. Ernie Williford to the game. Williford was withheld until the last Indiana game because of injuries received in practice. He played well against the Hoosiers and is doing well in practice. There is some belief that Jones will use him Monday night to replace "Ham" Alwood.

With Alwood added to Kircher and Crane, former regulars, as reserves, Jones need not fear accidents, and he will have fresh men to send in if the attack of the Badgers proves dangerous. So far the Illini, even including "Midget" Woods, all have displayed staying powers.

BOWLERS NAME LEADERS TODAY

Chicago bowlers will elect delegates to the annual meeting of the American Bowling congress this afternoon at a special meeting of the Chicago Bowling association at the Hotel Sherman at 3 o'clock. Local players are entitled to thirty-seven delegates and a like number of alternates.

The annual meeting of the congress is to be held in Peoria on March 16, 17, and 19, the first two days being devoted to routine business, while the final day will see the annual election of officers. So far no candidate has shied his castor into the ring and the only two certainties appear to be Secretary Abe Langtry of Milwaukee and Treasurer Frank Pasdeloup of Chicago.

Oscar Schmidt, the Illinois Bowling association president, is a local candidate for membership on the executive committee and will have the solid support of the Chicago and Illinois delegation.

Claims Record Entry.

Secretary Clarence Brayshaw, the Peoria promoter, has at last hoisted his original estimate of 550 five man teams in the big tournament to 600, claiming that the "heart of Illinois" will surpass the work of the Chicago promoters of 1912 by several teams. He also claims that more cities and towns will be represented than at Chicago and has practically guaranteed the bowlers a $30,000 prize list.

Late figures on the prospective size of delegations show that Toledo and Cleveland will have thirty teams each, Pittsburgh has promised twelve, St. Paul and Minneapolis together will show twenty, Louisville will have between fifteen and twenty, St. Louis and Kansas City together are good for fifty, Wisconsin, including Milwaukee, will show twenty-five, Detroit will have the same, while another fifty entries will come from cities like Omaha, Denver, Los Angeles, El Paso, Hutchinson, Leavenworth, Wichita, Montreal, Vancouver, Toronto, Winnipeg, New Haven, Newark, Rochester, Syracuse, and Washington.

Tourneys Draw Bowlers.

Three other big tournaments are either running or will get under way this week, the Windy City going into action last Friday with eighty-four teams listed and nearly $1,500 in prizes, while the Springfield, Ill., meet opens tonight in the Capital City and the International meet will start in Minneapolis next Thursday night.

JONES TO INSURE WILLARD.

Tom Jones, manager of Jess Willard, intends to take out $50,000 insurance on the boxer's arms, $25,000 on each. Willard is to meet Jack Johnson for the championship in Juarez, Mexico, on March 6, and Jones is anxious to guard against loss through accidents before the proposed forty-five round match takes place.

QUIN HALL
Jimmy Clabby

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

THERE are two things that Jimmy Clabby, middleweight star, is strong for. One is the fighting game and the other is Hammond, Ind., which he calls home. Of course the Hoosier likes the coin which he is able to garner from his work inside the ropes, but Clabby, unlike many of the present day boxers, isn't reaching out and grasping all the money he can get and "salting" it away.

Money always has been figured as secondary, or even lower, in the classification of things that Clabby cares for. For nearly nine years he has been swapping punches with the other boys who cared to take a chance. Only in the last year did he rise to a position which enabled him to claim that he was the best middleweight fighter in the world. No doubt he would still be claiming that distinction were it not for the unpleasant surprise he met when he tackled Mike Gibbons at Milwaukee only a short time ago. James took a pelting from the "Phantom" that left no doubt as to who was the winner of the bout, but incidentally he took down something like $5,000.

It took the Hammond miller only a matter of a few hours to recover from his surprise and to get his face in presentable shape. Then he immediately started out to spend some of his kale on his friends, which is something that few of the present crop of "merchant boxers" do. Jimmy just naturally likes to spend and he knows how to do it to the king's taste.

"I've been fighting nearly nine years, and I haven't saved very much," said Clabby recently. "I've got a little money in real estate at Hammond, but that's about all. But I'm getting wise to myself, like the other fellows, and from now on you watch Jimmy accumulate a bank roll."

We will watch but, knowing Jimmy, we have our doubts.

If any city, town, or hamlet in any commonwealth has a booster that is the equal of Clabby, Hammond, Ind., would like to hear about him. It's Hammond first, last, and all the time with the middleweight scrapper. There isn't a time that Clabby leaves his home town for a fight that the whole town doesn't turn out and give him a rousing getaway. When he returns he always is sure of a warm welcome, whether or not he comes back a loser. He could be anything he wants to be in Hammond, but he just wants to be a regular citizen. He knows everybody and everybody knows him and outside of that all he wants to do is fight.

Clabby claims that the Irish in him is responsible for his inclination to fight. Even before he knew what a pair of padded mitts looked like he was scrapping. His dad before him liked to fight, so when Jimmy was born at Norwich, Conn., on July 14, 1890, his father announced that another scrapper had arrived in the family to take the place of dad. That prediction has come true.

For nine years the Clabby family resided in Norwich, then came west and located at Rock Island, Ill. Even in his young years at grammar school Jimmy took delight in licking his fellow schoolmates. Two years later the Clabbys made another move, this time going to a place called Columbia Heights, near Minneapolis, Minn. They lived there long enough for Jimmy to cow the Gopher kids, then jumped back to this neck of the woods, locating in the now famous city of Hammond.

The fighting spirit of young James by this time was pretty well developed and picking on school kids was growing monotonous. So Clabby started out looking for bigger game. Jimmy had heard his father talk about ring fighters, the boys who got real money handing out the wallops. Clabby pere often was a ringsider at the bouts staged in the vicinity of Hammond and he was a real fan. One day Jimmy heard his dad talking about a mill which was to be pulled off at Laporte, Ind., some miles from Hammond. He made up his mind then and there that he was going to see that fight, and he did.

When the train pulled out of Hammond on the day of the fight, Jimmy was on it, although he didn't have a ticket or any money with which to buy one. If the conductor had been a "Sherlock Holmes" he would have discovered young Clabby huddled up under a seat. Under another seat in that same car was another Hammond kid, Mike McCarthy by name, who, like Clabby, had played truant from school to see the fight, which was between a couple of featherweights, Ole Olsen and "Kid" Fox.

There was a big surprise for Clabby after he had "edged" his way into the building in which the fight was held, and he will never forget it. The boys who had been scheduled to perform in the preliminary failed to appear and the club called for a couple of boys to take their places. Quick as a flash young Clabby jumped up into the ring and announced that he was ready to go on. And right at his heels came Mike McCarthy, his "under the seat" pal. The club accepted them and they boxed six rounds to a draw. Clabby admits it was nervous work, but says that he just couldn't pass up the chance to fight. Clabby and McCarthy got $12 for their bout and split it 50-50, which was a lot of money for both boys then.

One month after that Clabby and this same McCarthy "roaded" their way to Michigan City and were given another chance in a preliminary which again resulted in a draw. The financial returns of this bout were $10, which also were split half and half. It was getting to be good business for Clabby and Mike, but after that they didn't get any chance to stage their little act.

Clabby's father and mother soon got wise to his entry into the professional boxing ranks. His dad told him to go ahead and his mother approved. So in 1906 Jimmy went to Milwaukee with the express purpose of being a fighter. He fought "prelims" for two years and showed some ability, then finally got on in his first windup. This bout was held at New Orleans, and Jimmy's opponent was Jimmy Gardner, the clever Lowell, Mass., lightweight. They fought fifteen rounds and Gardner was given the decision. Then they were rematched for twenty rounds, which resulted in a draw.

Clabby claims that this long battle with Gardner was the toughest he ever had. In the eighth round he threw his right shoulder out of joint when he missed with a punch. For twelve rounds he fought practically with only one hand, for the pain in his shoulder was so severe that his right arm was practically useless. But he did so well that he earned a draw.

Clabby gained fame rapidly after that and in 1910 was so good a card that he was given a chance to make a tour of Australia. That was his first trip to the antipodes. He has made two since. He took part in six fights in Australia on his initial visit and won all but one. The chap who defeated him was Dave Smith, a light heavyweight, and it was a point victory after twenty rounds of milling. Before the Hammond boy returned to America he went to London, where he engaged in one contest, his opponent being Harry Duncan, whom he defeated in twenty rounds. In that battle Clabby broke his right hand when he landed on Duncan's hard head. For a time afterward he was forced to quit active ring work.

Clabby's second trip to Australia was made in 1911. He fought eight bouts, two of which were draws, and did not lose a decision. One of the draws was against the same Dave Smith who had previously beaten him. His last trip to the antipodes was made last year. He engaged in four fights, of which he won two and lost two. The men who beat him were Dave and Jeff Smith, the victories being gained on points.

Clabby has his own ideas about training. He eats what he likes and drinks what he likes, but like other pugilists retires early. When he was training for his recent bout with Gibbons, he prefaced his dinner with a stein of beer and finished it with a big piece of cherry pie.

"I believe a fellow should have what he wants to eat," said Jimmy.

Having told of some of the things that Clabby likes, we'll tell of one thing that hasn't bothered his curly head. That's the girl question. He says he's not looking for a girl, at least not yet.

She is an expert tennis player, is a clever hockey player, a swimmer of merit, and also is interested in bowling and baseball work. SQUASH TITLE TO PEARSON.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 6.—Stanley W. Pearson of the Germantown Cricket club won the squash racquets championship of Pennsylvania Thursday by defeating his clubmate, Morton L. Brief Bits of Sport.

New York, Feb. 6.—Although no important changes are expected to be made by the intercollegiate football rules committee at its annual meeting which began last night, several suggestions will be discussed, one of which probably will have reference to the use of the forward pass.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 6.—Hearing the death sentence pronounced against Martin Kristan, with whom he is well acquainted, was too much for "Honus" Wagner, the famous Pirate shortstop. Kristan was convicted of killing his wife and Wagner heard the sentence, then hurried from the courtroom, tears streaming from his eyes.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 6.—Immigration authorities at El Paso and along the border to the east and west of this city have received instructions from Washington to watch for Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, and to apprehend him should he attempt to pass through the United States to Juarez, where he is expected to fight Jess Willard on March 6.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 6.—"Peanuts" Schieberl of Milwaukee won by a shade in the first ten round bout of a double windup from Maurice Flynn of Chicago last night. In the final bout Johnnie Ertle of St. Paul won a popular decision over "Chick" Hayes of Indianapolis. Jack Redmond of Milwaukee had a shade over Ed Billings of Superior.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 6.—Grover Hayes scored a six round victory over the promising young Paddy Bedley of Tioga in the final bout at the Quaker City A. C. last night.

Aurora, Ill., Feb. 6.—Fred Goldman of Aurora shot into third place in the singles in the interstate bowling tournament last night with 641, nosing out Ed Canfield of Chicago by one pin. The crack fives of Aurora attacked the 2,923 of the Marines tonight, but failed to touch it.

FOOTBALL BEST HOOSIER SPORT

GET MULLIN AS COACH.

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—That football supports itself and carries the greater part of the burden of other sports at Indiana university is shown in the detailed report for the fall term of U. H. Smith, treasurer of the athletic association. The report was made public this week. The total income from football was $11,674.04 and the expenses $8,353.88, leaving a surplus of $3,321.

Purdue was the best drawing card on the Indiana schedule. Indiana's share of the receipts for the Boilermaker contest was $2,991.95, while the Chicago game netted the Crimson $2,456.88. The Ohio State game played at Indianapolis came next, bringing Indiana nearly $2,000. Indiana's football men cost the athletic association $1,858.59 while they were on the road. Visiting teams cost $1,204.73.

Mullin to Coach Hurlers.

Indiana is to have a professional coach for the baseball squad this spring. Coach Arthur Berndt has signed George Mullin of the Indianapolis Federals to coach his pitching staff. The former Detroit Tiger star will arrive tomorrow and remain until the middle of March, when he will join the Hoofeds in Georgia.

Indiana's pitching staff will not be as good as last year unless some phenom appears to take the place of Carl Schultz, who was regarded as one of the best hurlers in the "Big Nine." Shively probably will be the mainstay in the pitching department, as he was a valuable assistant in the box last year.

Two Games with Indians.

The Indianapolis A. A. will not be here a week, as previously arranged. Because of a trip to the coast it will not be able to stop in Bloomington for so long a period. On the return trip from the west, however, two games will be played with the Crimson team on April 5 and 6. Indiana will open the baseball season soon after the games with the association team by playing the Illinois nine on Jordan field.

ADD HORRORS OF WAR: GOLF COURSE IS DESTROYED.

An English officer, according to a story in the Paris Excelsior, was perched on an observation post in the Belgian sand dunes directing the fire of the British cruisers, which were lying in close and shelling the German lines.

The fire of the English war vessels seemed to be singularly effective, but with each hit the officer grew more and more melancholy, murmuring to himself, "What frightful damage! What dreadful destruction!"

"What on earth are you complaining about?" asked an astonished comrade.

The mournful officer pointed to the German line. "That land over there comprises the best golf course on the continent," he said. "I played over it only last year. And now look what the shells are doing to it."

A shot from the sea screeched overhead and the officer raised his field glasses to study its effect. He dropped them quickly. "There goes the sixth green!" he said with a sigh.

Athletes representing the leading universities, colleges, and athletic organizations in the central west have started training for the twenty-first annual indoor handicap track and field meet of the First Regiment A. A. in the Michigan avenue armory on Feb. 19 and 20.

Entries already have been received from Northwestern university, Notre Dame, and the University of Chicago, while nominations have been promised by athletic directors of Lake Forest, Knox, and Monmouth. The meet is one of the oldest indoor events in the history of Chicago amateur athletics. Aside from the college and university stars the local clubs will be represented by their strongest teams and the usual close and keen competition is expected.

Trial heats in the sprints and hurdles will be held on Feb. 19, as will the five mile run, standing high jump and broad jump, and the standing hop, step, and jump. The final heats will be run on the following night and the committee has decided to run the 440 yard run in two heats, the trials of which will be decided on the night of Feb. 19. Four men in each trial will qualify for the final race.

The new twelve lap track, which was used for the first time last season, will be used this year. Entries close on Feb. 12 with Maj. George K. Herman, care of Mayr's drug store, La Salle and Washington streets.

TOO MUCH SHOW, ATHLETIC WAIL

Methods Used to Boost College Games Condemned by Purdue Periodical.

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Sentiment among Purdue alumni is strongly in favor of some radical changes in the present method of conducting college athletics. The latest issue of the Purdue Alumnus, official publication of the graduates of the university, contains a strong editorial on the subject, indorsing the action of the alumni of the University of Minnesota in demanding reforms and asserting that college sports have developed into a stupendous show business in which gate receipts are the paramount issue, the physical and moral welfare of the student body being forgotten.

"It is high time," says the leading editorial in the Alumnus, "that the colleges were shaking off this show business incubus, taking possession of their own playgrounds, encouraging every student to engage in play and competitive games and refusing no applicant proper physical instruction."

Purdue's athletic difficulties that culminated recently in the resignation of Hugh Nicol, athletic director, have not yet been adjusted. No permanent director has yet been named by the board and no plan of reorganization of the system of control has been definitely decided upon. But the Alumnus regards Purdue's trouble as typical of the problems that are besetting practically every college by reason of their athletic systems.

"The play element," says the editorial, "is swallowed up in the show business. The gate receipts, in many cases half the entire income of the college, are so heavy that a professional manager is needed to handle them. He must cater to the sporting public that attends college games just as it does prize fights, horse races, and professional ball games. He knows he has been engaged to get gate receipts and he does so regardless of all else."

Pierce Baseball Coach.

The baseball squad is at work in the gymnasium with "Humpy" Pierce, a professional from the York Nebraska State league club, directing their work. Pierce is acting as temporary coach until a permanent coach has been named by the athletic board.

EX-STARS CAUSE MAGNATES HEAP OF REAL WORRY

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

Major league club owners are experiencing considerable difficulty in disposing of waning stars whom they have signed to term contracts at war time salaries. This is one of the prices they must pay because of war conditions.

When the Federal league was making inroads into the playing ranks of organized baseball last summer, there apparently was a concerted movement to sign up all the regulars for a term of years to prevent any further flops by which the Feds were attracting public attention and gaining publicity. In most instances the new contracts were at a marked advance in salary and generally of the so-called ironclad variety.

That plan worked well and its effect was seen during the winter by the comparatively smaller number of real scintillating diamond stars whom the Feds were able to corral. But it also proved to have its disadvantages. Some of the erstwhile regulars, in the opinion of their managers, are not worthy of regular berths in 1915. In many instances their salaries are out of all proportion to their real merit.

Salary Scares 'Em All.

In years gone by the suppliant minor leaguer was ready to jump at the chance of securing overplus major league talent. The mirrors had some fine little financial morries all their own during 1914. Minor league treasure chests are not bulging. So now when a player is offered, the minor manager is apt to ask, "Pray, tell me, dear air, what salary is he drawing?" Then he stands back aghast at the prospect of paying anywhere from $3.500 to $5,000 for a player who is not good enough for the major leagues.

What, then, is the result? Simply that the major club owners, in order to dispose of players and get down to the number required by the new rule, are often compelled to dig into their jeans and produce a sum of money which jingles like the difference between the money named in the wartime contract and the salary which the minor league club owners can afford to pay. The alternative is to accept a greatly reduced sale price. For once the smaller fry are enjoying a moderate laugh at the expense of the big fish. And the worst of it is that the major magnate cannot announce his benevolence and gain some perhaps desirable publicity as a friend of the player, for it is not good policy for obvious reasons to make public his dilemma.

Prexy Tom Confirms Report.

When President J. C. McGill of the Indianapolis American association club made the apparently inspired announcement that the national commission would eliminate the draft in favor of the association, President T. M. Chivington in Chicago hastens to confirm the report. There is no question that the class AA leaguers have been assured by one or more members of the national commission that such action will be taken.

Owner McGill's manifesto might possibly be questioned as a war bluff by his rivals, because of the fact that the Indianapolis Feds are said to be offering bonds for public consumption on the patriotic plea that Indianapolis citizens should support a major league club, but for Chivington's follow-up.

Chivington has been exceedingly discreet in all his public utterances concerning the triumvirate of baseball. That seems to have been the league policy since the cold turndown given several years ago after some of its members had threatened what they might do to organized baseball if certain concessions were not granted. Kid glove diplomacy has been followed, since, and whatever grievances the American association has nursed have not found their way into public prints through any interview accredited to Prexy Tom. Therefore, his words at this time are significant.

Measure Against Feds.

That the American association would request that the draft rule be eliminated as a war measure to combat the Federal league claims of major league class in Indianapolis and Kansas City was forecast in these columns several weeks ago. The request was made while the members of the national commission were attending the baseball trial before Federal Judge Landis in this city. Both McGill and Owner Tebeau, of Kansas City, the two A. A. magnates most affected by the Feds, also came to Chicago at that time. They wanted moral support in their struggle and they wanted it badly. Apparently they were told to go ahead.

On the other hand, the response from the national commission was hardly as cordial as expected. Messrs. Herrmann, Johnson, and Tener admitted the matter had been discussed and such action might be taken. Perhaps they are going slowly because of the International and Pacific Coast leagues, which are also in the A. A. classification. Already the strident voice of the coast magnates has been heard demanding the same concessions as may be granted to the American association.

May Transfer St. Paul Club.

While there has been plenty of conversation that the American association thus becomes a major league, talk naturally encouraged by the club owners, President Chivington has been entirely noncommittal on the subject of circuit changes to make the major league gown fit more gracefully. He admits the St. Paul franchise may be transferred, but that has been stove league talk all winter. It is a fact that plans are pending to retain the St. Paul franchise for its nonappreciative fans.

In speaking of circuit changes, Chivington says: "The matter of changing our circuit requires careful consideration. We have a circuit which in normal times is perfectly satisfactory. Five of the eight clubs—Cleveland, Columbus, Milwaukee, Kansas City, and St. Paul—own the ground upon which the parks are located. Certainly we should not change unless all the members of the circuit can be bettered.

Cleveland Sure to Stick.

"Why should Cleveland be mentioned as one of the franchises likely to be transferred? Cleveland is the sixth largest city in the United States. Certainly it ought to support two major league clubs. In addition, we have there the first class plant of the Cleveland Americans at our disposal. Chicago is not attractive at the present time with three clubs already there. The same applies to St. Louis."

From these statements it might be inferred that the association is likely to retain its present circuit unless new developments arise and to center its fights against the Feds in the beleaguered cities of Indianapolis and Kansas City.

It is an open secret that the American association wanted to come into Chicago a year ago when some of the major magnates were refusing to take the Federals seriously. They wanted to locate on the north side, probably on the very site of the present Federal plant, the ground being owned by the Cantillons and Archambault of the Minneapolis American Association club, and rented to the Feds for a ninety-nine year term.

Hope to Beat Federals.

One cannot help wondering whether some of the American association magnates are not hoping that the Federal league eventually may be annihilated in the present war and that its really handsome park with a seating capacity of 15,000 be placed on the market by its present owners. If such a condition should arise, who would be more natural bidders for the stands than Messrs. Cantillon and Archambault, owners of the land and club owners of the American association?

Former Champion Willie Ritchie in a New Role.

JOSEPHINE RITCHIE.

FEW fighters ever are adept at anything but swapping punches. Some of them have tried the theatrical game, but, as a rule, have not won any great success before the footlights. The exception to this rule seems to have been found in Willie Ritchie, the former lightweight champion, who has turned to the stage. Ritchie is not depending on a monologue like most boxing-actors, but has gone in for dancing, and those who have seen him perform in California say that he is developing into a classy stepper. Ritchie's dancing partner is his sister, Josephine, and the pair have interpolated into their dance several novel features, one of which is shown in the photograph—Miss Ritchie landing a straight left to the jaw of her fighting brother.

Answers to Queries.

H. K., Chicago: In playing pocket or carom billiards, if the ball is not disturbed by the player or his representative it is not a foul. PACKEY'S MONEY TO BACK WELLING

McFarland Ready to Wager Up to $5,000 on Him Against White.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Joe Welling, one of the best lightweights developed in Chicago, has picked up a stanch supporter in Packey McFarland, who yesterday made the bold assertion that he would wager any part of $5,000 that Welling can beat Charley White over any distance.

It is known by followers of the game who are "on the inside" that bitter feeling exists between White and McFarland. This animosity is the result of gymnasium boxing contests when Charley acted as a sparring partner of Packey. As White continued to show improvement word reached the Irishman's ears that Charley had told his friends he thought he could trim Packey.

Welling Packey's Protege.

McFarland is going to take Welling under his care and teach some inside stuff about the game and gradually develop him to the point where he will be ready for a fight with White. As Joe can make any weight White desires, there will be no trouble over the poundage. Larney Lichtenstein, who looks after Welling's affairs, said the match cannot be made any too soon to suit his fighter.

Jimmy Clabby, the Hammond middleweight, will start light training tomorrow for a number of contests which his manager, Larney Lichtenstein, is planning. Terms already have been accepted for a twenty round bout with Mike Gibbons before Dominick Tortorich's club of New Orleans to be held the latter part of March or early in April. Although he has not pulled on a glove since he boxed Gibbons in Milwaukee, Clabby gave a three round exhibition at Forbes' yesterday and stepped the distance at top speed.

Hicks Coming to Chicago.

Word was received yesterday by Leonard Hicks, a close friend of Willie Ritchie, former lightweight champion, that the fighter will leave the coast for Chicago tomorrow. Ritchie will arrive in Chicago on Thursday. After a few days' visit from his friends the boxer and Hicks will go to White Sulphur Springs, Va., to start training for his bout with Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion, in New York in March.

Eddie McGoorty will be in Chicago tomorrow to start training for his ten round bout with Mike Gibbons in Hudson, Wis., on March 2. Tommy Walsh, who is handling Eddie's affairs, said he would try to get Fred Gilmore to act as one of McGoorty's sparring partners.

Tommy Gary, the Chicago Heights lightweight, who will box ten rounds with Joe Sherman in one of the bouts of the all star card at Kenosha on Feb. 15, boxed four rounds with Pete Krust at Forbes' yesterday. After the Feb. 15 show in Kenosha efforts will be made to match "Fighting Billy" Murray and George "Knockout" Brown for the main bout of the next show.

"Hans" Wagner Earns Reward for Service.

HONUS WAGNER's years of service in baseball will bring its reward. The "grand old man" of the diamond will not spend his last days with the minors.

Barney Dreyfus, owner of the Pirates, says that Wagner is still good for two or three years of active service and after that he would still continue to draw salary from the Pittsburgh club as long as he lived.

"He will never be released to go to any minor club," said Dreyfus. "He will remain on the pay roll of my team and when his active days are over I will use him as a scout or as a coach for the younger players on the team."

PLAY BALL AT PANAMA CANAL

Panama Canal Baseball league is made up of five teams. The season was begun a short time ago and will continue until April. Three parks have been built at Colon, Pedro Miguel, and Balboa, with seating capacities ranging from 2,000 to 4,000 each.

SOLDIERS USE SPORT PARK.

The Crystal palace, London's famous recreation ground, is closed to the public until after the war, in order to provide training quarters for the soldiers. It is estimated that at least 10,000 men will bunk in the glass exhibition hall.

Indiana Mat Men Win.

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Indiana defeated Purdue in a wrestling met last night, winning thre of five bouts. Purdue won the heavyweight bout and the 175 pound match, Indiana taking the three lightweight contests.

Basket Scores at Mendota.

WESTERN TALKS CIRCUIT CHANGE THIS AFTERNOON

Topeka Club Probably Will Hold Franchise at Today's Meeting.

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—When the Western league baseball club owners gather in Chicago tomorrow they they will be confronted by the annual circuit bugaboo. The Topeka, Kan., franchise is the weak link in the "Tip" O'Neill loop again, but unlike the situation in other years, Topeka is alone in its cry for help.

It had been believed that the league's action in reducing its salary limit to $2,800 per month would cause the stockholders of the Kansas town to remain in the league, but last week a Topeka bank foreclosed its mortgage on the franchise and ball park and is now in the baseball business, but is trying to get out.

Gives Ten Day Option.

The bank has granted the citizens of the town a ten day option on the club, but announces that at the end of that time it will sell to the highest bidder, unless some "angel" appears to save the team for the Kansas capital. Joplin, Mo., Kansas City, Kan., and St. Paul, Minn., are said to be bidding for the franchise, but there still are obstacles in the way of locating the club in either of the latter cities, said barrier being the American association.

It is the belief around this circuit that the Western league will find some way of keeping the team in Topeka, as the magnates have enough troubles without taking in a city remote from the circuit, and one which might not prove any better than the Kansas town.

Protest from Tebeau.

Kansas City, Kan., is the logical place for a Western league club, provided some arrangement can be made to dispense with the five mile limit ruling, which protects George Tebeau, owner of the Kansas City, Mo., American association franchise, from an invasion by the O'Neill league.

The Western league will adopt a schedule which will call for 154 games instead of the customary 168. The season will start April 23. Jack Holland of St. Joseph, W. A. Rourke of Omaha, and Hugh Jones of Lincoln form the committee which is drafting the scheme of playing dates.

Frank Isbell, manager of the local Western league club, returned here Thursday from Long Beach, Cal., where he and his family went late last fall to escape the rigors of an Iowa winter.

"DOPE" FIGURES FAVOR JOHNSON

A comparison of the ring records of Jack Johnson and Jess Willard, who are scheduled to meet in battle for the world's heavyweight championship, shows the marked advantage of the title holder over the challenger in actual glove campaigning.

Johnson began his pugilistic career in 1901, and since that year has figured in seventy-eight bouts for a total of 696 rounds. During this stretch of years the negro has won twenty-five contests by knockouts and twenty-seven by decisions. He also participated in twelve no-decision matches and seven draw bouts. In addition, Johnson has won two battles as the result of his opponents' fouls, lost one on his own foul, one by a knockout, and three on adverse decisions by referees.

Willard in his four years in the ring has met twenty-nine opponents, these battles totaling 205 rounds. His records include seventeen victories by knockouts and five by decision. Three no-decision, one draw, one bout lost on a foul, and two by being outpointed complete Willard's ring figures. According to these tabulations Willard's percentage of victories is .758 to Johnson's .692, and his percentage of knockouts .586 to the champion's .820.

In the class of opponents met, however, Johnson has decidedly the better record. Because of his lengthy ring career the names of a majority of the leading heavyweights of the last ten years are found linked with his in the annals of the sport. Almost without exception these same pugilists had been defeated or had retired from active boxing circles before the advent of Willard.

Willard's principal bouts have been against other white hopes who have sprung into prominence within the last two or three years. Against these men Willard's work has been mediocre. He fought ten round no-decision bouts with Arthur Pelky and Luther McCarty in New York City; lost a twenty round bout on points to "Gunboat" Smith in San Francisco, and outpointed Carl Morris in a ten round match in New York.

CIRCUIT FOR ROLLER MEN.

Plans are under way to form a national roller skating circuit made up of Pittsburgh, Charleston, W. Va.; Cincinnati, Detroit, Chicago, and Milwaukee. It is proposed to hold one week's racing in each city.

SPRINT STARS TO CONTEST.

Cub Recruit for Second Base Position

POLLY McLARRY

CUB fans, allow us to present the popular undertaker, Mr. "Polly" McLarry of Leonard, Tex., who will leave his somber calling to make the training trip to Tampa with aspirations to occupy the second base position at the west side park, once filled by Johnny Evers.

McLarry comes to the Cubs from the Louisville American association team in the trade by which Claude Derrick was hoisted out of the major league to the Colonels. He comes with a reputation as a heavy wielder of the war club and a good thrower. His fielding is called awkward appearing, but seemingly effective.

McLarry is a right handed thrower with "an arm of steel," and can project the ball from the deep outfield to the home plate without its varying a yard in direction, according to trustworthy Louisville scribes. The recruit bats from the left side of the plate, where he takes a long but rather slow swing. He compiled numerous extra base wallops against south paw flingers last season, indicating, it is hoped, that he will not be easy for the port flingers as many left handed batsmen are.

"Polly" is described as fearless on the bases. His impetuous slide into second base during a game at Milwaukee last summer led to one of the most serious field disturbances of the season in the American association because the defending baseman thought McLarry was anything but careful in the placing of his spikes.

Jack Hendricks, one of the smartest minor league managers, who frequently has been mentioned for a major berth, thinks McLarry is one of the most promising outfield prospects in the game today. But the Cubs need an infielder more at this time. "Polly" himself prefers the first base position.

McLarry spends the winters in his Texas home in the undertaking business. He is 24 years old and was married last summer.

Taking Chances by Drury Underwood

"She Just Eats Mud."

JOHN BRIGHT, the horse trainer, was frequently sought at the track for hunches by his friends. A bunch of them disagreed with him one day, however, on the outcome of a race at hand. They overrode his judgment on the ability of a certain mare in the mud and put their checks down on the mare. Then they, including Bright, hung on the fence along the stretch to see the race run.

The mare came around the last turn in the slippery going and seemed to have the field beaten.

"Just look at her in the mud!" shouted one enthusiast. "Why, she eats it up!"

Just then the mare stumbled and fell to her knees, prompting the sarcastic Bright to remark:

"Yes, and she's going down after another mouthful of it now."

How the Piker Recovered.

"FARO is the game," observed the veteran, Bill, after a survey of the round of card games. "For one thing, poker is too slow for the man who wants quick action. You have to wait for a hand at poker, but in playing the bank—well, the chance to gamble your head off stares you in the face all the time.

"That's the reason a lot of the boys itched to buy a stack after the days of the public layout games passed. Of course, it was possible to frame a private game, just as it was with poker, but if you were caught playing faro it cost you ten times as much in court as it did if you were pinched at the other game.

"For the life of me I can't see why faro is more immoral than poker, but the police court judges decided that way. When a poker game was raided it was $25 and costs for the keeper of the game and $1 and costs for the players; on the other hand it was a case of $200 and costs and $10 and costs. I mean that the heavy fine was plastered if the police brought in as evidence the box, the card spread, the case keeping machine, and chips.

"At that, we used to gamble a bit at illicit faro, and by way of laughing at the law still more, we had a plain clothes copper sitting in once in a while as case keeper. When he did this we slipped him $5 a night. We protected ourselves principally by chalking a layout on the top of a table. Cases were also kept in chalk and the dealer handled the deck from his hand, instead of from a box. Money, from a 50 cent piece up, supplanted the chips.

"At the dealer's elbow were a bowl of water, a sponge, and a towel, so if the bulls broke in we could wipe out the layout, dry the table top, and be engaged in a pitch game in no time at all.

"This game was manned by volunteers. If one fellow wanted to deal he would put up a bank roll and be ready to stand a tap. If he went broke we would give him the chance to sit in for pay as case keeper the next night—that is, if the copper wasn't on the job.

"Now, I want to tell you how a piker tried to beat this bank, but before I start maybe it is necessary for some of your readers to know the main technicality of faro. The first card exposed loses and the second wins. If a pair comes out together the dealer takes half of the bet. Thus, if the six is the first card out and you have planted a bet on it you lose, unless you have played it to lose by placing a copper on the chips.

"With the games not in danger of raids the cards came out of a box face up. In dealing out of the hand the cards were face down. Now, we will get around to the piker.

"The game had progressed for a couple of hours and he had never bet more than half a dollar in that time, when suddenly he asked of the dealer: 'How much can I bet on this turn?'

"'Tap it,' was the answer.

"After searching himself thoroughly he dug up $13.50, which he put on the nine. The dealer looked at the pack a minute and turned. The cards came nine-jack.

"'O, I meant to copper the nine,' exclaimed the sure-thing player. 'Here I have set for two hours waiting for that nine to show on top. I pegged it because it had a little bit of one corner torn off.'

"'I was on,' said the dealer, 'and if you had coppered it I wouldn't have dealt for you.'

"'But I must have my money back,' said the piker. 'It was rent money and I'm clean. I can't go home and face my wife.'

"After a wait of an hour, during which play went on, the dealer told the piker that if he would go home, tell his wife that he had failed as a cheat, and send her around in person the next day the money would be returned. And it was."

What a Period Means.

A LAW suit against a telegraph company had this curious beginning:

A widely known bookmaker of the middle west went east to back a mare or a filly named Dolly. He took an ample roll with him. His wife was fully conversant with his affairs and he told her before his departure that he would wire her on the result of the day.

She received this message, which was transcribed without punctuation:

Broke even lost on Dolly.

The reader interpreting this message and supplying a period would probably assume the intelligence to be:

Broke even. Lost on Dolly.

That was the intent of the sender, but his wife got the notion that the situation was this:

Broke. Even lost on Dolly.

Taking the message as a hurry up call, she pawned all of her valuable jewelry and wired as much money as possible to her husband. When she learned that he was not in distress she was irritated and decided to sue the telegraph company for her worry and her humiliation, and also for its stinginess with periods.

Jimmy Bardell's Story.

A PARTY was outfitted in Chicago to invade the south and pick up some money. The party consisted of a fighter (Lem McGregor, the St. Joe Kid), a wrestler, and a weight lifter. The managerial end was Jimmy Bardell, once a wrestler and also well known in Chicago as a trainer for the White Sox.

The program was to go from town to town and offer a prize for any one who could stand off the boxer or the wrestler. With the weight lifter the procedure was to get around a sporting goods store and crack about his ability to dislodge anything short of a ton. If anybody wanted to make a side bet, naming an object to be lifted, the proposition was always considered and sometimes snapped up. The lifter had demon strength, and there was no trick in his work.

Bardell had interested some loungers in his brags about his champion. One of them left, to return shortly and offer to bet that there was a packing case outside that was too heavy for anybody to lift.

Before he lifted that packing case he was up to his knees in a stone sidewalk.

With that they all filed out to look the thing over.

"Is it spiked down?" inquired Jimmy.

"No," answered the challenger. "This bet is on the level and you won't have to pay if you find anything irregular."

Jimmy and his entry fiddled around the big box for a while, retired for consultation, and then agreed to bet $50 on the chance. The money was covered.

In reciting the windup of the narrative Bardell said:

"Well, that was the toughest job we had on the trip. Jack tugged and tugged and tugged. I thought he was going to break a blood vessel. He finally lifted that packing case, but before he did he was up to his knees in a stone sidewalk."

FIRST CHARGE FOR CUE MATCH MADE IN 1859

Admission Fee Inaugurated in Game Between Kavanagh and Foley.

Fifty-five years ago the first billiard match at which an admission fee was charged was played. This was the contest between Dudley Kavanagh of New York and Michael Foley of Detroit, staged at Fireman's hall, Detroit. It was a four ball match and the eastern player won, 1,000 to 989, getting high run of 177 and an average of 8.47.

These men, who were prominent in the making of billiard history in its early stages in this country, both lived to see the game pass through many transitions ranging from four ball to the more scientific balkline styles now in vogue, and they saw many of the men who succeeded them come and go. Dudley Kavanagh, who won the first American professional championship, played the year following his match with Foley, died March 1[illegible] 1914, but Michael Foley is still alive and can be seen almost every day in one of Detroit's leading rooms, watching the players.

Play for $10,000 Purse.

The Kavanagh-Foley match was really only a curtain raiser to one of the most notable matches in the history of the sport. On the following night Michael Phelan of New York played John Seereiter of Detroit a 2,000 point match for a purse of $10,000. Phelan was considered the best player of that time, but Seereiter was supposed to possess more speed. The New Yorker won, 2,000 to 1,904, getting high run of 129 and an average of 12.[illegible] Seereiter had high run of 157. In addition to the purse a great many side wagers were made.

An account of the match contained in Modern Billiards indicates that styles in reporting have changed almost as much as styles of play. It reads:

"Admission was $5, but this charge was rather to keep the wrong persons out than to profit by letting the right ones in. Phelan was outnursed, but he outbetted the Detroiters, and both outgeneraled and generally outbatted their representative."

Phelan Pioneer of Game.

From this it can be gathered that Mr. Phelan was one of the pioneers of the old school of players, now almost extinct, who were willing to wager their own coin. The billiard chronicler of today who would write that one player had outbatted another probably would be taken for a baseball scribe who had wandered out of his diamond territory. The "outbetted" part of the description doubtless will recall to many veterans some of the real money matches of bygone days. It would be something of a novelty to see two players now competing in a match on which hinged the disposition of $20,000. Many things have changed since 1859.

MORIN LEADER FOR CUE PRIZE

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Five of the leaders in the Interstate Three Cushion league who are closely bunched in the race for the big money prize were in action last week. Charley Morin, the Chicago player, by virtue of his victory over Martin Maley of Detroit, 5[illegible] to 41, regained the top position and is leading Charles Ellis by a small margin.

The young Cleveland player was on tour and got an even break in four games, losing to Maupome at Philadelphia, 50 to 41, and then to McCourt, 50 to 39, the Pittsburgh player going out in seventy-one innings. Ellis gave Jerome Keogh a setback and also won from Cullen at Buffalo. Keogh held third place, but is practically tied with Kling and McCourt.

Kling gained a little by trimming Martin Maley, 50 to 41. Champion August Kieckhefer of Milwaukee, who seldom is defeated on his home table, lost the closest match of the week, Maley outscoring him by a single point in eighty innings. Keogh made a run of 8 in his match against Ellis, and Maupome and Ellis each had runs of 7 in their match.

As the tournament will continue into the second week in April, a hot fight for the money is in prospect.

Kieckhefer to Meet Lean.

Kieckhefer will meet Jess Lean at Flenner's room tomorrow night. Standing:

The Most Popular Children's Pictures ever Painted

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS' pictures of childhood, painted nearly two centuries ago, are indisputably the most popular children's faces ever put on canvas. His models, always English children, are perfect specimens of English health and freshness, and into their faces he infuses all the curious innocence and charm of early youth. His "Age of Innocence," which hangs in the National gallery, is one of the best known of his children's pictures. With our modern facilities for better reprints of the old masterpieces, the demand for various of his other ones is increasing proportionately. Among the others which are particularly in the limelight of favor these last years are the ones reproduced on this page.

Sir Joshua Reynolds was born in 1723 in Devonshire, England. He spent his early years traveling much on the continent and when he was still in the twenties settled in London and began his career as a portrait painter. For thirty years after that his success was unbroken. A critic once said of him that his vogue was enormous among "women who wanted to be transmitted as angels, men who wished to appear as heroes, and parents who desired to represent their children as adorable."

He painted with wonderful rapidity and, if necessary, could finish a portrait in four hours. There are some three thousand authenticated pictures of his extant, two thousand of which are easily placed.

Always in high spirits, always with fortune smiling upon him, he was celebrated far and wide for his utter satisfaction with life. When he was 66 years old, however, he suddenly lost the sight of one eye while working over a portrait. That was the beginning of the end. He expressed it simply: "I suppose this is about the end of the pursuit. The race is drawing to a finish. But I have been happy—wonderfully happy—happy beyond all others I have known."

Bitter Root Billings

by Rex Beach

He Was a Handy Man with a Lasso and He Settled a Strike.

BILLINGS rode in from the Junction about dusk and ate his supper in silence. He'd been east for sixty days, and although there lurked about him the hint of unwonted ventures, etiquette forbade its mention. You see in our country that which a man gives voluntarily is ofttimes later dissected in smoky bunk houses or roughly handled round flickering camp fires, but the privacies he guards are inviolate. Curiosity isn't popular nor hygienic.

Later I found him meditatively whittling out on the porch, and as the moment seemed propitious, I inquired adroitly, "Did you have a good time in Chicago, Bitter Root?"

"Bully," said he, relapsing into weighty absorption.

"What'd you do?" I inquired, with almost the certainty of appearing insistent.

"Don't you ever read the papers?" he inquired with such evident compassion that Kink Martin and the other boys snickered. This from Bitter Root, who scorns literature outside of the Arkansas printing, as he terms the illustrations!

"Guess I'll have to show you my press notices," and from a hip pocket he produced a fat bundle of clippings in a rubber band. These he displayed jealously, and I stared agape, for they were front pages of great metropolitan dailies, marred with red and black scare heads, in which I glimpsed the words: "Billings of Montana," "'Bitter Root' on Arbitration," "A Lochinvar Out of the West," and other things as puzzling.

"Press notices!" echoed Kink scornfully. "Wouldn't that rope you? He talks like Big Ike that went with the wild west show. When a puncher gets so lazy he can't earn a living by the sweat of his pony he grows his hair, goes on the stage busting glass balls with shot ca'tridges, and talks about press notices. Let's see 'em, Billings. You pinch 'em as close to your stummick as though you held cards in a strange poker game."

"Well, I have set in a strange game, amongst aliens," said Billings, disregarding the request, "and I've held the high cards; also I've drawed out with honors. I've sailed the medium high seas with mutiny in the stoke hole. I've changed the laws of labor, politics and municipal economics. I went out of God's country right into the heart of the decaying east, and by the application of a running noose in a hemp rope I strangled oppression and put 8,000 men to work." He paused ponderously. "I'm an arbitrator!"

"The deuce you are!" indignantly cried Reddy, the cook. "Who says so?"

Reddy isn't up in syntax, and his unreasoning loyalty to Billings is an established fact of such standing that his remarks afford no conjecture.

"Yes; I've cut into the 'nation's peril' and the 'crying evil' good and strong, walking out from the stinks of the Union stockyards of Chicago into the limelight of publicity via the drunk and disorderly route."

"You see, I got those ten carloads of steers into the city all right, but I was so blame busy splattering through the tracked up wastes of the cow pens and inhaling the sewer gas of the west side that I never got to see a newspaper. If I'd 'a' read one, here's what I'd 'a' found—namely, the greatest, stubbornest, riotingest strike ever known, which means a heap for Chicago, she being the wet nurse of labor trouble.

"The whole river front was tied up. Nary a steamer had whistled inside the six mile crib for two weeks, and 8,000 men was out. There was holdups and blood shedding and picketing, which last is an alias for assault with intents, and altogether it was a prime place for a cowman on a quiet vacation—just homelike and natural.

"It was at this point that I enters, bustling out of the smoke of the stockyards all sweet and beautiful, like the gentle heroine in the play as she walks through the curtains at the back of the stage.

"Now you know there's a heap of difference between the stockyards and Chicago—it's just like coming from Arkansas over into the United States.

"Well, soon as I sold the stock I hit for the lake front and began to ground sluice the coal dust off of my palate. I was busy working my booze hydraulic when I see an arid appearing pilgrim 'longside looking thirsty as an alkali flat.

"'Get in,' says I, and the way he obeyed orders looked like he'd had military training. I felt sort of drawed to him from the way he handled his licker; took it straight and running over, then sopped his hands on the bar and smelled of his fingers. He seemed to just soak it up both ways—reg'lar human blotter.

"'You lap it like a man,' says I—'like a cowman full growed. Ever been west?'

"'Nope,' says he; 'born here.'

"'Well, I'm a stranger,' says I, 'out absorbing such beauties of architecture and free lunch as offers along the line. If I ain't keeping you up I'd be glad of your company.'

"'I'm your assistant lunch buster,' says he, and in the course of things he further explained that he was a tugboat fireman out on a strike, giving me the following information about the tieup: 'It all come up over a dose of dyspepsia?'"

"Back up," interrupted Kink, squirming. "Are you plumb bugs? Get together! You're certainly the raving kid. You must have stone bruised your heel and got concession of the brain."

"Yes, sir—indigestion," Billings continued. "Old Man Badrack of the Badrack Transportation company has it terrible. It lands on his solar every morning about 9 o'clock, getting worse steady, and reaches perihelion along about 11. He can tell the time of day by taste. One morning when his mouth felt like about 10:45 in comes a committee from Firemen and Engineers' local No. 21 with a demand for more wages, prodding him with the intimation that if he didn't ante they'd tie up all his boats.

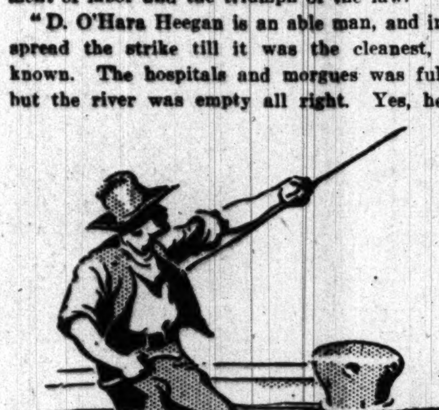
"I s'pose a teaspoon of baking soda assimilated internally around the environments of his appendix would have spared the strike and cheated me out of being a hero. As the poet might have said, upon such slender pegs is this our greatness hung."

"O, Gawd!" exclaimed Mullins, piously.

"Anyhow, the bitterness in the old man's inner tubes showed in the bile of his answer, and he told 'em if they wanted more money he'd give 'em a chance to earn it—they could work nights as well as days. He intimated further that they'd ought to be satisfied with their wages, as they'd undoubtedly foller the same line of business in the next world, and wouldn't get a cent for feeding the fires, neither.

"Next morning the strike was called, and the guy that breathed treachery and walkouts was one Oily Heegan, further submerged under the titles of president of the Federation of Fresh Water Firemen, also chairman of the United Water Front Workmen, which last takes in everything doing business along the river except the wharf rats and typhoid fever germs, and it's with the disreputableness of this party that I infected myself to the detriment of labor and the triumph of the law.

"D. O'Hara Heegan is an able man, and inside of a week he'd spread the strike till it was the cleanest, dirtiest tieup ever known. The hospitals and morgues was full of nonunion men, but the river was empty all right. Yes, he had a persuading method of arbitration quite convincing to the most calloused, involving the laying on of the lead pipe.



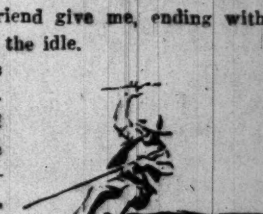
"Things got to be pretty fierce by and by, for they had the police buffaloed, and disturbances got plentier than casualities at a butchers' picnic. The strikers got hungry, too, finally, because the principles of unionism is like a rash on your mechanic, skin deep—inside his gastrics works three shifts a day even if his outsides is idle.

"Oily fed 'em dray loads of eloquence, but it didn't seem to be real filling. They'd leave the lectures and rob a bakery.

"He was a wonder, though; just sat in his office and kept the ship owners waiting in line, swearing bitter and refined cuss words about 'ignorant friend' and 'cussed pedagogue,' which last, for Kink's enlightenment, means a kind of Hebrew meeting house.

"These here details my new friend give me, ending with a eulogy on Oily Heegan, the idol of the idle.

"'If we starve we starve,' says he, 'and if we work we work. See? O, he's the goods, he is! Let's go down by the river. Mebbe we'll see him.' So me and Murdock hiked down Water street, where they keep mosquito netting over the bar fixtures and spit at the stove.



"We found him, a big mouthed, shifty kind of man, 'bout as cynical looking in the face as a black bass and full of wind as a toad fish. I exchanged drinks and doing so happened to display my roll. Murdock slipped away and made talk with a friend; then when Heegan had left he steers me out the back way into an alley. 'Short cut,' he says, 'to another and a better place.'

"I follers through a back room; then as I steps out the door I'm grabbed by this new friend, while Murdock bathes my head with a gas pipe billy, one of the regulation strike promoting kind, like they use for decoying members into the glorious ranks of labor.

"I saw a 'burning of Rome' that was a dream and whole cloudbursts of shooting stars, but I yanked Mr. Enthusiastic Stranger away from my surcingle and throwed him again' the wall. In the shuffle Murdock shifts my ballast, though, and steams up the alley with my greenbacks, convoyed by his friend.

"'Wow-ow,' says I, giving the distress signal so that the windows rattled and reaching for my holster. I'd 'a' got 'em both, only the gun caught in my suspender. You see, not anticipating any live bird shoot, I'd put it inside my pants band, under my vest, for appearance. A forty-five is like fresh air to a drowning man—generally has to be drawed in haste—and neither one should be mislaid. I got her out at last and blazed away just a second after they dodged around the corner; then I hit the trail after 'em, letting go a few sky shots and getting a ghost dance holler off my stummick that had been troubling me. The wallop on the head made me dizzy, though, and I zigzagged awful, tacking out of the alley right into a policeman.

"'Whee!' says I in joy, for he had Murdock safe by the bits, bucking consid'rable.

"'Stan' aside and le'mme 'lectrocute 'im,' says I. I throwed the gun on him, and the crowd dodged it into all the doorways and windows convenient, but I was so weak minded in the knees I stumbled over the curb and fell down.

"Next thing I knew we was all bouncing over the cobblestones in a patrol wagon.

"Well, in the morning I told my story to the judge, plain and unvarnished, then Murdock takes the stand and bursts into song, claiming that he was coming through the alley toward Clark street when I staggered out back of a saloon and commenced to shoot at him. He saw I was drunk and fanned out, me shooting at him with every jump. He had proof, he said, and he called for the president of his union, Mr. Heegan. At the name all the loafers and stew bums in the courtroom stomped and said, 'Hear, hear.' While up steps this Napoleon of the hobos.

"Sure, he knew Mr. Murdock, had known him for years, and he was perfectly reliable and honest. As to his robbing me, it was preposterous, because he himself was at the other end of the alley and saw the whole thing, just as Mr. Murdock related it.

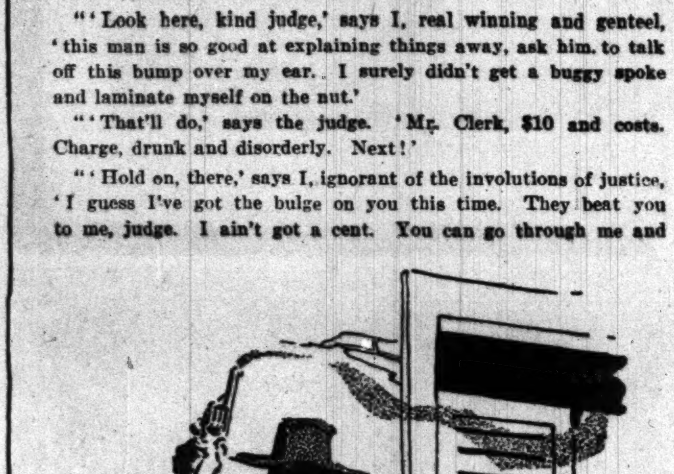
"I jumps up. 'You're a liar, Heegan. I was buying booze for the two of you,' but a policeman nailed me, choking off my rhetoric. Mr. Heegan leans over and whispers to the judge, while I got chilblains along my spine.

"'Look here, kind judge,' says I, real winning and genteel, 'this man is so good at explaining things away, ask him to talk off this bump over my ear. I surely didn't get a buggy spoke and laminate myself on the nut.'

"'That'll do,' says the judge. 'Mr. Clerk, $10 and costs. Charge, drunk and disorderly. Next!'

"'Hold on, there,' says I, ignorant of the involutions of justice, 'I guess I've got the bulge on you this time. They beat you to me, judge. I ain't got a cent. You can go through me and be welcome to half you find. I'll mail you ten when I get home, though, honest.'



"At that the audience giggled, and the judge says:

"'Your humor doesn't appeal to me, Mr. Billings. Of course you have the privilege of working it out.' O, glory, the 'privilege!'

"Heegan nodded at this, and I realized what I was against.

"'Your honor,' says I, with sarcastic refinements, 'science tells us that a perfect vacuum ain't possible, but after watching you I know better, and for you, Mr. Workingman's Friend, us to the floor,' and I run at Heegan.

"Pshaw! I never got started, nor I didn't rightfully come to till I rested in the workhouse, which last figger of speech is a pure and beautiful paradox.

"I ain't dwelling with glee on the next twenty-six days—$10 and costs at four bits a day—but I left there saturated with such hatred for Heegan that my breath smelled of 'em.

"I wanders down the river front, hoping the fortunes of war would deliver him to me dead or alive, when the thought hit me that I'd need money. It was bound to take another ten and costs after we met, and probably more, if I paid for what I got, for I figgered on distending myself with satisfaction and his features with uppercuts. Then I see a sign, 'Nonunion Men Wanted—Big Wages.' In I goes and strains langwidge through a wire net at the cashier.

"'I want them big wages,' says I.

"'What can you do?'

"'Anything to get the money,' says I. 'What does it take to liquidate an assault on a labor leader?'

"There was a white haired man in the cage who began to sit up and take notice.

"'What's your trouble,' says he, and I told him.

"'If we had a few more like you we'd bust the strike,' says he, kind of sizing me up. 'I've got a notion to try it anyhow,' and he smites the desk. 'Collins, what d'ye say if we tow the Detroit out. Her crew has stayed with us so far, and they'll stick now if we'll say the word. The unions are hungry and scrapping among themselves, and the men want to go back to work. It's just that devil of a Heegan that holds 'em. If they see we've got a tug crew that'll go they'll arbitrate and we'll kill the strike.'

"'Yes, sir,' says Collins. 'But where's the tug crew, Mr. Badrack?'

"'Right here! We three and Murphy, the bookkeeper. Blast this idleness! I want fight!'

"'I'll take the same,' says I, 'when I get the price.'

"'That's all right. You've put the spirit into me, and I'll see you through. Can you run an engine? Good! I'll take the wheel and the others'll fire. It's going to be risky work, though. You won't back out, eh?'"

Reddy interrupted Billings here loudly with a snort of disgust while Bitter Root ran his fingers through his hair before continuing. Martin was listening intently.

"The old man arranged to have a squad of cops on all the bridges and I began anticipating hilarities for next day.

"The news got out, of course, through the secrecies of police headquarters, and when we ran up the river for our tow it looked like every striker west of Pittsburgh had his family on the docks to see the barbecue, accompanied by enough cobblestones and scrap iron to ballast a battleship. All we got going up was repartee, but I figgered we'd need armor getting back.

"We passed a hawser to the Detroit, and I turned the gas into the tug, blowing for the Wells street bridge. Then war began. I leans out the door just in time to see the mob charge the bridge. The cops clubbed 'em back, while a roar went up from the docks and roof tops that was like a bad dream. I couldn't see her move none, though, and old man Badrack blowed again, expurgating himself of as nobby a line of cuss words as you'll muster outside the cattle belt.

"'Soak 'em,' I yells. 'Give 'em all the arbitration you've got handy. If she don't open, we'll jump her,' and I lets out another notch, so that we went ploying and boiling toward the draw.

"It looked like we'd have to hurdle it sure enough, but the police beat the crowd back just in time. She wasn't clear open, though, and our barge caromed off the piles. It was like a nigger butting a persimmon tree—we rattled off a shower of missiles like an abnormal hailstorm. Talk about your coast defense; they heaved everything at us from bad names to railroad iron, and we lost all our window glass the first clatter, while the smokestack looked like a pretzel with cramps.

"When we scraped through I looked back with pity at the Detroit's crew. She hadn't any wheelhouse, and the helmsman was due to get all the attention that was coming to him. They'd built up a barricade of potato sacks, chicken coops, and bric-a-brac around the wheel that protected 'em somewhat, but even while I watched some Polack filtered a brick through and laid out the quartermaster cold, and he was drug off. O, it was refined and aesthetic!

"Well we run the gantlet, presented every block with stuff ranging in tensile strength from insults to asphalt pavements and noise. Say, all the racket in the world was a whisper. I caught a glimpse of the old man leaning out of the pilot house where a window had been, his white hair bristly and his nostrils h'isted, embellishing the air with surprising flights of gleeful profanity.

"'Hooray, this is living!' he yells, spying me shoveling the deck out from under the junk. 'Best scrap I've had in years.' And just then some baseball player throwed in from center field, catching him in the neck with a tomato. Gee, that man's an honor to the faculty of speech!

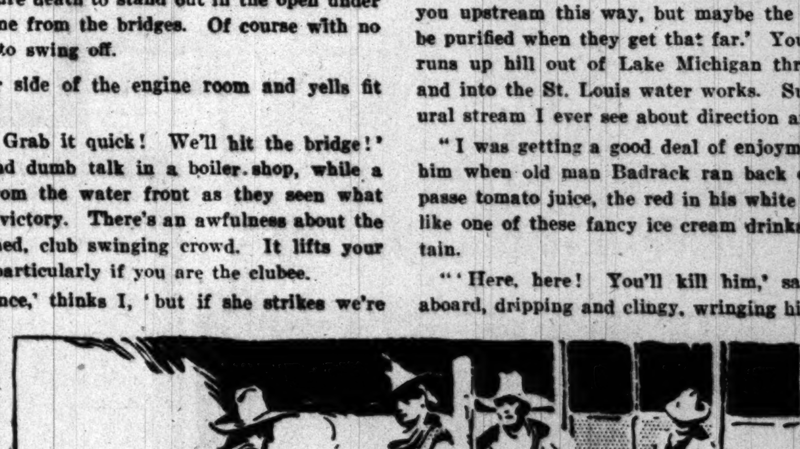
"I was doing bully till a cobblestone bounced into the engine room, making a billiard with my off knee. Then I got kind of peevish.

"Rush street bridge is the last one, and they'd massed there on both sides, like fleas on a razorback. Thinks I, 'If we make it through here, we've busted the strike,' and I glances back at the Detroit just in time to see her crew putting their captain into the deck house limp and bleeding. The barricade was all knocked to pieces, and they'd flunked absolute. Don't blame 'em much, either, as it was sure death to stand out in the open under the rain of stuff that come from the bridges. Of course with no steering she commenced to swing off.

"I jumps out the far side of the engine room and yells fit to bust my throat:

"'Grab that wheel! Grab it quick! We'll hit the bridge!' But it was like deaf and dumb talk in a boiler shop, while a wilder howl went up from the water front as they seen what they'd done and smelled victory. There's an awfulness about the voice of a blood maddened, club swinging crowd. It lifts your scalp like a fright wig, particularly if you are the clubee.

"'We've got one chance,' thinks I, 'but if she strikes we're gone. They'll swamp us sure, and all the police in Cook county won't save enough to hold services on.' Then I throwed a look at the opening ahead and the pessimisms froze in me.



"I forgot all about the resiliency of brickbats and the table manners of riots, for there, on top of a bunch of spiles, ca'm, masterful and bloated with perjuries, was Oily Heegan, dictating the disposition of his forces, the light of victory in his shifty little eyes.

"'Ten dollars and costs!' I shrieks, seeing red. 'Lemme crawl up them piles to you.'

"Then inspiration seized me. My soul ris up and grappled with the crisis, for right under my mit, coiled, suggestive and pleading, was one of the tug's heaving lines, 'bout a three-eighths size. I slips a running knot in the end and divides the coils, crouching behind the deck house till we come abeam of him; then I straightened, give it a swinging heave, and the noose sailed up and settled over him fine and daisy.

"I jerked back, and Oily Heegan did a high dive from Rush street that was a geometrical joy. He hit kind of amateurish, doing what we used to call a 'belly buster' back home, but quite satisfying for a maiden effort, and I reeled him in astern.

"Your Chicago man ain't a gamy fish. He came up tame and squirting sewage like a dissolute porpoise, while I played him out where he'd get the thrash of the propeller.

"'Help!' he yells. 'I'm a drownding.'

"'Ten dollars and costs,' says I, letting him under again. 'Do you know who you're drinking with this time, hey?'

"I reckon the astonishment of the mob was equal to Heegan's. Anyhow, I'm told that we was favored with such quietness that my voice sounded four blocks, simply aching with satisfaction. Then pandemonium tore loose, but I was so engrossed in sweet converse I never noticed it or noticed that the Detroit had slid through the draw by a hair and we was bound for the blue and smiling lake.

"'For God's sake, lemme up,' says Heegan, splashing along and looking strangely. I hauls him in where he wouldn't miss any of my ironies and says:

"'I just can't do it, Oily. It's wash day. You're plumb nasty with boycotts and picketings and compulsory arbitrations. I'm going to clean you up,' and I sozzled him under like a wet shirt.

"I drag him out again and continues:

"'This is Chinamen's work, Oily, but I lost my pride in the bridewell, thanks to you. It's tough on St. Louis to laundry you upstream this way, but maybe the worst of your heresies'll be purified when they get that far.' You know the Chicago river runs up hill out of Lake Michigan through the drainage canal and into the St. Louis water works. Sure it does. Most unnatural stream I ever see about direction and smells.

"I was getting a good deal of enjoyment and infections out of him when old man Badrack ran back enameled with blood and passe tomato juice, the red in his white hair making his top look like one of these fancy ice cream drinks you get at a soda fountain.

"'Here, here! You'll kill him,' says he, so I hauled him aboard, dripping and clingy, wringing him out good and thorough by the neck. He made a fine mop.

"'These clippings,' continued Bitter Root, fishing into his pocket, 'tell in beautiful figgers how the last seen of Oily Heegan he was holystoning the deck of a sooty little tugboat under the admonishments and feet of Bitter Root Billings of Montana, and they also state how the strikers tried to get tugs for pursuit and couldn't and how all day long from the housetops was visible a tugboat madly cruising about inside the outer cribs, busting the silence with joyful blasts of victory, and they'll further state that about dark she steamed up the river, tired and draggled, with a bony looking cowboy inhaling cigarets on the stern bits, holding a three foot knotted rope in his lap. When a delegation of strikers met her, inquiring about one D. O'Hara Heegan, it says like this.'" And Billings read laboriously as follows:

"Then the bronzed and lanky man arose with a smile of rare contentment, threw overboard the cigaret, and, approaching the boiler room hatch, called loudly, 'Come out of that!' and the president of the Federation of Fresh Water Firemen dragged himself wearily out into the flickering lights. He was black and drenched and streaked with sweat; also he shone with the grease and oils of the engines, while the palms of his hands were covered with painful blisters from unwonted intimate contact with shovels and drawbars. It was seen that he winced fearfully as the cowboy twirled the rope end. 'He's got the makings of a fair fireman,' said the stranger. 'All he wants is practice.' Then as the delegation murmured angrily he held up his hand and in the ensuing silence said:

"'Boys, the strike's over. Mr. Heegan has arbitrated.'"

Voice of the Fan

Dear Miss Tinee: I was disappointed in your picture, because I thought you had brown eyes and were modish in your dress. I wish you hadn't printed it. Please don't mind if I am frank, because it's in my nature, and if you put this in "The Voice of the Fan" I bet there'll be others that were disappointed, too.
MRS. A. N. M.

Dear Miss Tinee: In answer to Edwin Kraning's letter I wish to respectfully say that his convictions do not have to be rebutted, the language rebuts itself. There is no argument whatever to his letter; it is just a display of words. As to his indicating that it is nonsense in a person to ask the color of eyes, etc., of a movie star, I do not think so, for it's only natural for one to be inquisitive about their movie favorite, and as long as there is a kind and patient Miss Tinee to answer all their questions, why not ask them? Please, Miss Tinee, will you let this letter appear in the paper, so as to show Mr. Kraning that at least one reader does not agree with him in this point?
TILLIE ANDERSON.

Dear Miss Tinee: In answer to the highly colored "epistle to the gushers," of Edwin J. Kraning, allow me to state that I fully agree with him, whatever he may mean. Idiots are born, not made. As for "smart alecks," nuff sed.
ADAH B. PRINE.

Dear Miss Tinee: After reading the one letter in the "Voice of the Movie Fan" last week, I smiled and then laughed (compassionately, for why not be charitable with such a charitable person?). Your correspondent criticises "Answers to Movie Fans" because of their altruistic curiosity, and yet one would think, after reading his letter, that it were not half so silly to be ultra curious about that in which we are interested as to be an altruist in the use of grandiloquent diction.

As your correspondent's education and store of knowledge probably is wholly limited to what can be obtained from a dictionary, he cannot understand that it is a simple psychological truth that people always want to know all they can learn about any one or anything they are interested in. That is why your correspondent is so interested in the dictionary.

As for the mediocrity of the people of the movie world, if there are so many thousands of unknowns who are just as good, why don't they get in the field? No field is ever really crowded with talent. Of oourse, I suppose they would rather work ten hours a day at some other occupation at salaries ranging from $8 a week to $20 a week, instead of drawing from $75 to $300 a week and working about twenty hours a week. People who have talent in any particular line always have an accompanying inclination that is strong enough to draw them to the vocation they are most naturally fitted for. Indeed, the inclination, usually bred of considerable interest, is half of talent. The life of almost every famous man in human history is proof of this theory.

Wm. Webster Campbell

WILLIAM WEBSTER CAMPBELL of the American Film Manufacturing company was, to quote himself, "born in Kansas City in 1891 on a night in January when the wind howled miserably and all the world was white and cold." Seventeen years later he graduated from high school in Kansas City. At about that time he developed a propensity for lights—bright lights, footlights, and limelights. He entered the University of Michigan. Three years later he went to a smaller university in Missouri. At that time he produced a musical comedy called "Hundred Dollar Bill," which proved to be quite a success, so much of a success, in fact, that he was summoned to the president's office and asked how long it would take him to pack his things, as necessity compelled the college to do away with his presence. Mr. Campbell then joined a stock company in the middle west. His first professional appearance was as Jed Woodis in George Cohan's play, "Fifty Miles from Boston." Later he went to the coast, and still later he was with a stock company in Honolulu. He returned then to Los Angeles. There the lens lured him and Lubin secured his services. He was with this company for some time, then he joined the New York Motion Picture company, and now, last but not least, he has joined the American corporation to the great satisfaction of everybody concerned. He's a handsome young man, as you can see by his picture, and not married, so we are told.

Answers to Movie Fans. - By Mae Tinee.

JOHN B.: Who are you—Mr. Bunny himself? His wife is named Clara. Grace Cunard says she is not married. Ask Mr. Mac Grath.

VELVET EYES: I suppose J. Warren Kerrigan gets his mail through the postoffice system just like mortals. He lives in Hollywood, Cal. Do I think he has beautiful eyes and hair? Well, just don't I!

Owing to the number of queries received and the somewhat limited space allowed for answers, it is not always possible to print information as rapidly as the writers desire, as the letters must be answered in turn. All, however, receive careful attention.

When stamped and addressed envelopes are inclosed, Miss Tinee will be glad to answer personally any letters addressed to her. Address all queries to this department to Mae Tinee in care of this paper.

Questions that have been repeatedly answered will receive a reply only when a stamped and addressed envelope is sent.

Questions considered as ridiculous will not be answered.

Questions regarding relationship will be answered to the best of our knowledge, but we are not responsible if mistakes are made.

If you are interested in photo-play writing send a stamped and self-addressed envelope to this department for the information you desire.

F. H.: J. Warren Kerrigan worked with the Essanay and American companies before joining the Universal.

MARIE: Henry King is with the Balboa Amusement Producing company, Los Angeles, Cal. A letter addressed to him there will reach him.

P. C.: No, indeed, Alice Joyce has not left the movies. Fireworks are used in producing many volcanic illusions.

LOUISE: If you will address Warren Kerrigan and Ella Hall in care of the Universal company, Hollywood, Cal., and Mary Pickford, in care of the Famous Players, Los Angeles, Cal., they will receive your letters.

F. P.: Here are your answers: Mignon Anderson and G. M. Anderson are not related. Neither, so far as I know, are either Lamar Johnston and J. M. Johnston, Marion Leonard and Robert Leonard. Lottie Pickford and Mary Pickford are sisters. Owen, Matt, and Thomas Moore are brothers. The three Williamses you mention are not related, so far as I know. Thank you for your kindly wishes.

MISS E. M.: You'd better send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope for the printed matter I have on "How to Become a Photo Player." But, alas, many are the "daring and unafraid" who have failed to star in the screen world.

BERT L. K.: If you will send a stamped and self-addressed envelope, I'll mail you the information I have on scenario writing and a list of firms that accept scenarios. No trouble at all.

MOVIE CRAZY DOROTHY: There is no "average age for girls wanting to enter the movies." They "want to" from the cradle up. Your votes were received and recorded.

ACTOR: Howell Hansel directs for the Thanhouser company of New Rochelle, N. Y.

N. K.: I'm awfully, awfully glad you like the "Right Off the Reel" page so much. The house that is Florence La Badie's home in "The Million Dollar Mystery" was bought by the late Mr. Hite from Francis Wilson. No, the home in which Countess Olga stays is not the abode of the Cruze family.

E. B.: No, I don't happen to know of any company that requires the services of a farm hand for taking parts of the kind in pictures. I wish I did.

M. S.: You're a nice, sensible 11 year old! Since you've made up your mind not to be a "movie" actress until you're 20 or 22, I don't think it does you the least harm in the world to be interested in the profession—though why in the world you should be jealous of your favorites I can't for the life of me see. I had not heard that Pearl White and Crane Wilbur were to be married. Yes, I think he's vurr' handsome. His picture has been in the "Frame"—a long time ago. If you will write to him inclosing a quarter for his picture I am quite sure he will send it to you. Write again some time. I was so glad to hear from you!

BENNA BIE: Thank you, ma'am! No, John Bunny and Flora Finch are not married. Justina Johnstone took the part of the sister in "The Crucible." No, Antonio Moreno is married. He has dark hair and grand, Spanish-y eyes. You're welcome.

MRS. F. B. J.: I'm so sorry you haven't had an answer to your letter. Something must have happened to it. Won't you write again, asking the same questions you asked before? If you will I'll be delighted to answer you!

ALEXA: You were dear to write me such a lovely letter. Thank you for making me vurry happy. I hope that if you do succeed in becoming a "movie" actress you will be a wonderful one. In your argument regarding Carlyle Blackwell, you were right. He was formerly with the Kalem company.

FLO: Thank you. Of course I'll write to you if you'll send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope. Mary Fuller was born in Washington, D. C. She is in her twenties. I answer no questions regarding religion.

CASEY: Address Cleo Madison, in care of the Universal company, Hollywood, Cal.; George Larkin, in care of the Balboa Feature Film company, Long Beach, Cal.; Francis Bushman, in care of the Essanay company, 1333 Argyle street, Chicago; Warren Kerrigan, in care of the Universal company; and Alice Joyce, in care of the Kalem company, Los Angeles, Cal. They will probably send you pictures if with your request you inclose a quarter for each one. Not a bit of trouble, Casey. By the way, is your last name Jones?

Miss Winifred Greenwood of the American Studios was nearly drowned in an overrealistic rainstorm in "Justified," now under production by Henry Otto. The huge fire hose belonging to the studio apparatus was brought into play. It took four men to hold the nozzle, and shot a stream 150 feet into the air. The deluge was so strong that Miss Greenwood ran out of the scene once and it had to be retaken.

One of the young women of the Bosworth company came to Mr. Bosworth the other day in a great state of excitement and said: "O Mr. Bosworth, please come and see the 150 feet of my baby nephew!" Mr. Bosworth inquired the age of the child and was told that the wonderful infant was just seven days old.

"Good land!" said Mr. Bosworth. "Is your nephew a centipede? If he has 150 feet at the age of seven days how many feet will he have when he is grown?"

All of which sounds most unusual, but is simple when explained. The proud aunt had had one of the camera men make 150 feet of moving pictures of the young nephew and she wished Mr. Bosworth to see the picture thrown upon the screen in the projecting room.

Two imported Persian cats valued at $2,000 will be seen in "Zudora" and "The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery." The pets were purchased from Commodore E. C. Benedict of Greenwich and possess titled pedigrees that would make jealous some of the courts of Europe. Mary Elizabeth Forbes, who plays Mme. Duval in Thanhouser's big serial, will have the Persian beauties in the wonderful Grecian salon, which, as planned, will be unsurpassed as a motion picture set.

"The Kate Greenaway Girl of the Screen," the sobriquet applied to Louise Huff, the little Lubin actress, has traveled across the seas to relatives of the late Kate Greenaway, creator of the quaint little Greenawhy people of the past generation. Relatives of the English woman have written to Miss Huff felicitating her upon the sobriquet and praising her work in the Lubin photo plays.

DOESN'T SEEM ANY TIME AT ALL SINCE SHE WAS A BABY IN THE WHITE HOUSE—Miss Esther Cleveland, eldest daughter of the late President Grover Cleveland, has recently enrolled herself in a class in nursing, and it is said she expects to go to Europe to care for the wounded in France and Belgium. Miss Cleveland knows something of what the war is like for she was in Europe with her mother, now Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, when trouble started.

Mrs. Whitlock has been in every movement for mitigating the sufferings of those around her, and to a large extent she has shared their privations.

ZUDORA In the Twenty Million Dollar Mystery

by HAROLD MAC GRATH

The photodrama corresponding to the installments of "Zudora, in the Twenty Million Dollar Mystery" as printed in The Sunday Tribune may now be seen at a number of the leading moving picture theaters. The producing company is the Thanhouser Film corporation of New Rochelle, N. Y. More than 1,000 actors are in the cast, including Marguerite Snow, Mary Elizabeth Forbes, James Cruze, Sidney Bracey and Frank Farrington. One two-reel episode is released every Monday.

SYNOPSIS.

Zudora, heiress to $20,000,000, is placed in the guardianship of her uncle, Hassam Ali, a mystic. Hassam Ali is determined to secure the girl's fortune for himself and when she becomes of age he makes every effort to bring about her death. Zudora is in love with a young lawyer, John Storm, and she seeks permission of her miserly uncle to marry him. Hassam Ali promises to grant her wish provided she shall solve twenty of his cases. Zudora solves nine of the cases when her uncle dies, and she is released of her pledge.

At the death of her uncle, Zudora has another suitor for her hand—Jim Baird, a man who has been playing as double to Hassam Ali, but who, through sincere love of the girl, gives up the false life and goes back to his work as a newspaper reporter.

No longer obliged to solve Hassam Ali's cases, Zudora now confronts the greatest mystery of all, which is the mystery of her own life and the ambition to secure the vast fortune of $20,000,000 left her. On looking through her uncle's papers she also finds that her father left her an interest in a diamond mine, and Storm and Baird both lend assistance in trying to regain for her possession of this estate which is being appropriated by rogues.

CHAPTER XI.

A MESSAGE FROM THE HEART.

STORM was deeply concerned over the diamond affair. Some one had cheated and was still cheating Zudora. He was also puzzled why Hassam Ali's papers contained no will of his. He made a journey to all the banks, but at none of them did he find that the uncle had had an account or a lock box. There was no doubt in his mind that the villainous servant Amed had made off with what money Hassam Ali had around the house. But where was this diamond mine? Who was manipulating it and pocketing the profits? He was in a blind alley. To find out where this diamond mine was would be like hunting the proverbial needle in the haystack. Hunt was working all the wires he could, but to date he had not discovered anything.

"Zudora," said Storm, "I've got something to cheer you up a bit."

"News?"

"No. That's an article as elusive as a New Jersey mosquito." He took from his pocket a small box and opened it.

"O, how pretty!" she exclaimed. "It's an engagement bracelet."

"I wish it was a wedding ring. Why not?" impulsively. "You are all alone now; you haven't any bargain to fulfill. Why can't you marry me right away, Zudora? I'm not rich, but I have a little, enough for our needs. I'll buy some pretty little bungalow around Long island, and we'll live like a couple of fairy story people."

"No, John. There seems to be an evil star of some sort hanging over me. Look what I've gone through!"

"But you've gone through it; and if you had what you call an evil star I don't think you would be here. Let's get married."

"No. I don't want to hurt you, John, but I feel oppressed. I feel as if some danger were hovering near me. I've lost some of that confidence I had when Uncle Frank was alive. And, dear, I don't want to drag you into it."

"That's nonsense! When a man loves a woman as I love you, why shouldn't he share trouble and happiness alike? I never liked your uncle, Zudora. And I still hold to this day that he was your evil star, if you had one."

"John!"

"I know; one shouldn't speak ill of the dead. I never could get the idea out of my head that he was in some way connected with your narrow escapes. What he had in mind I don't know, nor can I figure out what he had in view. You won't marry me, then?"

"Not while I feel as I do, John."

"I suppose I'll have to grin and bear it," he said with an assumption of cheerfulness. "Now this burnt scrap of paper comes back like the cat. Lots of letters weren't touched, but this one particular piece had to be damaged by fire. A mine of diamonds; but, in heaven's name, where?"

"Perhaps I'd better put the whole thing out of my thoughts. It does look impossible. But never doubt that I love you, John."

"I don't doubt it. What I doubt is the wisdom of your trying to go this thing alone."

"It is written," lightly. "After all, I'm something of an orientalist. What will be will be. Now talk to me about how you first came to love me. There are some things a woman never gets tired of, and that's one of them."

That was an easy matter for John.

And Capt. Radcliffe was making love, too; but not so successfully that he could hear any wedding bells in fancy. Mme. Du Val sat in the salon, playing the harp. She had a cynical humor. She believed that she might better play the harp here on earth than risk the chance of not playing one in the hereafter. The captain crept up behind her softly and sprinkled a handful of rose leaves over her handsome head. She simply shrugged and went on with her playing. Some cats like to be fondled; Mme. Du Val belonged to that category which did not.

"You've spoiled a rose."

"It was well wasted," he said, trying to take her hands from the strings.

"You bother me! I am not only playing; I am thinking. And there's a good deal to think about since we saw that locket. I'm wondering how to get rid of that girl. She isn't Hassam Ali's niece for nothing. She is shrewd, and so far as she is concerned we must walk carefully when we come into contact with her. Now, captain, I am not in the mood for love scenes, if you please."

"You drive me crazy sometimes!"

"Hang the bell!" he growled.

He was not pleased to see the visitors, two men of his own class, but business was business. He eyed Mme. Du Val covertly. She did not appear to exhibit any particular regret at the interruption. As a matter of fact, the sight of her visitors relieved her. Radcliffe was a persistent wooer, and rebuffs seemed to have no other effect than to redouble his ardor.

She ordered the footman to take away the harp and bring the cards and card tables.

"While we wait," she said, "we might as well while away the time pleasantly."

BEFORE THE WINDOW APPEARED THE GHOSTLY FORM OF A WOMAN.

TO TAKE A KNOWN DIAMOND AND MAKE IT AN UNKNOWN. WAS HIS MAIN TRICK.

The fountain tinkled as usual. From time to time Mme Du Val sent a glance toward it. All at once the jet of water flew at a tangent. Radcliffe rose and touched the knob, lifting the panel which disclosed the secret elevator. Three hard visaged men stepped into the room, blinking after their long burrow through the dark tunnels. One of them was dressed in the flashy manner so dear to our native product—the gunman. His name was Gyp, and, though he was not aware of it, he was on the short road to a certain unenvied chair. There was something in his eyes that reminded you of the hyena. But a trained hyena has a marketable quality.

"Ike," said Radcliffe, "when you enter this house, take off your hat. The next time I'll mash it down over your lamps."

"All right, Cap. Th' light blinds me when I comes in here, an' I forget. Well, we're ready."

Mme. Du Val shrugged and crossed over to the gem vault. She despised these tools; but in crime one has to take what tools one can. And there was always the possibility of these low brutes speaking incautiously during some drinking bout. She brought the little box of gems back. Then Radcliffe drew the sign on a piece of paper—a heart with a dagger running through it. This was a kind of key that could open a certain door. The initials of each were then written within the heart, which was surrendered to Gyp. This sort of business was after his own heart. He did not like directness except when he struck, after the fashion of his prototype, the rattlesnake.

About that same hour, half after 8, Detective Hunt was going carefully over a package of partly burnt letters, those rescued from Hassam Ali's house before the fire got beyond control. He was studying each bit of paper with scrupulous care. The door opened. He looked up impatiently.

"I want you to look at this, Hunt," said Storm, producing the burnt piece he had shown Zudora that afternoon.

"Hum! Where did you find it?"

"In the cellar of the burnt house."

"Uhuh." He searched it thoroughly under his magnifying glass. "Haven't come across any mate to it. Come, dig into these and see what you can find."

By and by he came upon a half burnt letter that made him sit up with a jerk. Then he laughed shortly. "Mme. Du."

"John, did Hassam Ali know a woman by the name of Mme. Du?"

"Mme. Du? Not that I'm aware of. But he knew a Mme. Du Val."

"Ah, I see." Then the detective stacked those letters he had gone through and picked up his pipe. "Queer old codger, that Hassam Ali. These scraps of paper prove to me that crooks are the most credulous people in the world."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Well, he seemed to know some of the biggest in the country, and they always went to him when in doubt. Evidently thought he could look into the future and tell them whether they'd go to jail or not. Crooks are peculiar people, believe me, boy. Now let's go out and get a bite somewhere. I've been cramped up in this caboose since 3 this afternoon."

"Nothing about the diamonds?"

"Not an eyelash. But there's a vague mention of a couple of tons of gold."

"What?"

"Gold. But whose it is or where it is, nix. Shop's closed for the night. But there's one thing. There's some fancy diamond smuggling going on and some fancy diamond cutting besides. And your Uncle Dudley's going to nail 'em one of these days."

And that fancy diamond cutter himself was wondering how long this soft snap was going to last. To take a known diamond and make it an unknown one was the main trick of his present occupation. It was good money and little danger so far as he was concerned.

His room was in a garret in a partially deserted tenement. He was rarely disturbed by any one but the janitor, who was old and nearsighted and did not care what his tenant's business was so long as the rent was paid in advance. All about was the expert cutter's machinery and paraphernalia. The door had a heavy bar and chain lock. Hidden in the wall was a small safe. Here he kept his gems and "chips," for a diamond cutter knows the value of "chips." The cutter himself was rather a frowsy looking old chap. He wore a greasy old brocade dressing gown and eyeglasses which resembled the chauffeur's goggles. He finished polishing a stone, locked it up, and left the room. In the hall outside this den was a dumb waiter. From this he took a can of oil and returned. He filled the lamp and lit it. Then he sat down and smoked his pipe in the attitude of waiting for some one.

At 9 three men arrived at the door of the tenement. They stood idly in the doorway for a minute, then ducked inside.

But Jim Baird, who had been following them steadily for an hour or more, was quite confident that somewhere in yonder tenement was the wonderful crook diamond cutter he had so often heard about during his masquerade as Hassam Ali. What a chance there had been for real honest money in that old inventor of diamonds whose shop had been back of the cheese maker's! But he had to go and die.

Baird did not thrill pleasurably at the sight of the gunman called Gyp. He had already, in his capacity as reporter, run up against that murderous scoundrel, and Gyp had sworn he'd "get him." He loitered about, wishing to give the rogues plenty of time. What he wanted was a good look at the diamond cutter's shop. He had no interest in the three crooks who had shown him the way here. Two of them had beaten him up not more than a fortnight gone, so he was perfectly willing to keep out of their way.

The crooks climbed the three flights of rickety, creaking stairs until they came to the lapidary's door. The gunman used the knocker. With his machines humming, the cutter could not hear the sound of ordinary knuckles. Gyp rapped three times and then shoved aside the knocker, revealing a small hole. He passed through a slip of paper—the same Mme. Du Val had given him—and waited.

Presently the door opened—after a slithering of steel bars and clinking of chains.

"Got some candy for yuh, ol' gammon!" said Gyp cheerfully. "You know who sent 'em. Seven shirt lamps, mazda power. Take a tenth of a carat off o' each. Them's th' orders."

"An' I keeps th' chips."

"Sure! Gimme a receipt. They love me, but they don't trust me; an' I ain't wantin' t' make th' tide any higher in East river when she rolls in t'morrer."

"Then there's some one you're afraid of?"

"Surest thing, bo!"

"Hand 'em over. An' say, start 'er up. I never seen a diamond nicked down."

"Jus' to please the ladies!" cried the lapidary, going to his machine.

It took a long time for his friends to come down, thought Baird. Finally he determined to risk meeting them. He entered the building and tiptoed up the stairs. The burr of machinery caught his ear, and he knew that he need not go any farther. He tried the door knob, but only half heartedly. Such a door would never be unlocked. Then he heard voices. All were there yet. If he could but find a rope! He peeked into the dumb waiter and found an unused coil of manila hemp on the top of it. Just what he wanted. Next he hunted around for the scuttle ladder and crept up on to the roof. He tied the rope to a chimney and gently lowered himself down to the lapidary's window. Nothing doing there; blinds were closed. He could see four men, but could not distinguish any features. And what he wanted most of all was one good look at the man who pared fortunes from diamonds, as it were. He wanted this knowledge keenly. Ah! he was turning; the light was striking in his face. . . . . Baird drew himself up quickly, regained the hall, and stole down into the street. If Hunt's private rogues' gallery held no likeness of this cutter then it was a find, a scoop. He set out for Hunt's office at once, knowing that he had a fair chance of catching his friend doing a little night work.

Sure enough, Hunt was at work. Storm had gone home, and Baird was rather glad to have missed him. Not that he disliked the young lawyer; rather that he envied him his good luck. Zudora Keene was the kind of woman who led men to great endeavors. Was it not due to her that he had chosen the strait and narrow way and was making good in it? There was one thing: Zudora must never, never know the rôle he played. When Hassam Ali died his double had gone with him.

"Say, Baird, you're just the chap I want to see. Did you ever do any corresponding in that Hassam Ali game?" asked Hunt.

"How do you mean?" returned Baird, rather disheartened. Here was Hunt resurrecting the dead!

"I mean, did you answer or receive letters addressed to him when he was too ill to attend to them?"

"Yes."

"What was the nature of his acquaintance with Mme. Du Val?"

"Rather formal, so far as I know."

"Nothing between them?"

"There may have been. You see, Hunt, it was only toward the last that I really did any Hassam Ali stunts. And I wish to heaven you'd forget that part of my past. I'm trying hard enough."

Hunt put his hand on the young man's shoulder. "Cheer up; I sha'nt mention it again."

"Thanks. Now I've a bit of good news for you. I've seen the man who does that mysterious cutting. I know where his shop is, and I have seen him at work."

"Fine! Wait a minute." Hunt took down a fat volume and turned the pages rapidly. "Here, did he look anything like this?"

"Line for line!"

"I thought so. He's been lying low. If you know where he lives you might take me around there and give me the lay of the land, for future use, mind you."

"Come along, then."

At half past 10 Zudora sat before the fireplace in her room, twirling the bracelet and vaguely wondering why she felt this presage of evil. If she told Storm about the gold he might believe that that stood between them and the altar. So she must still keep that a secret. . . . What was that? She started up with a repressed shriek. Before the window appeared the ghostly form of a woman. It seemed to dissolve into nothing even as she looked. Zudora's cry, however, brought in Mrs. Ramsey, the landlady.

"What has happened, child?"

"I don't know, but either I've seen a ghost or some one is playing a sorry trick on me."

The two examined the window, drew back the curtains, and peered outside. There was nothing to be seen.

"Perhaps you were dreaming?" suggested Mrs. Ramsey.

"I never dream with my eyes open, not that kind of a dream," declared Zudora stoutly. "Some one has attempted to frighten me; and perhaps the best thing I can do is to make believe that he or she has succeeded. I'll have Mr. Storm come over in the morning, and we'll let him think that I have been badly frightened. He'll go hunting around, he'll tell Detective Hunt, and maybe I'll find out who did it and why they did it."

Storm, however, appeared rather skeptical about the ghost proposition.

"Some one's been hoaxing you."

"For what purpose?"

"That remains to be found out. Suppose we run down to Hunt's office and see what he has to say. He's a sensible chap."

Zudora readily agreed to this. Storm called up the detective, who replied that he would await their coming. When Zudora told him about the vision he did not laugh as she expected he would. He began pacing the office. After a while he spoke.

"Do you want my honest opinion?"

"Surely!"

"Well, some one wants to get you to run away. And what some one would this be?"

Zudora thought for a moment. "Some one who knows about the diamonds!" with sudden excitement.

"Right-o! At least, that's my opinion. We're getting warm. Africa is farther away than New York. The secret may be right here in this little old burg itself. Play up to it. Some one will be watching you, and your game will be to let them believe they've got you scared. Confidence in crooks always breeds carelessness."

"That is my opinion," said Zudora.

"You ought to know. Why don't you set yourself to the job yourself?" asked the detective curiously.

"The truth is, Mr. Hunt, I've really lost my grip since my uncle died. I seem to be oppressed all the time. I jump when I hear unexpected noises; I find I'm always looking over my shoulder?"

"For what?"

"If I knew that I could face it without the least difficulty. It's the unknown that rasps on the nerves. I, who, until recently, never knew what nerves were."

"Well, whatever game your enemies are playing, you finesse your cards and see what they've got. They've surely got the ace of trumps; make no doubt of that. Our game is to draw that out on a worthless card. And now you'll have to excuse me. Got to go down to the Red line pier. More diamonds are due. They'll pull the wool over my eyes for a while, but sooner or later I'll get a leetle hole to peek through."

Zudora's enemies did hold the ace, but they did not intend to waste it as Detective Hunt hoped they would. Self-preservation forbade them to let go of it until the last trick.

Said Mme. Du Val that afternoon: "She looked frightened, and she was frightened, but it will take a series of frights to make her feel like running away."

"Well," advised Capt. Radcliffe, "plant a series of frights. Keep her guessing. What's the matter with slipping her a 'heart' once a week with warnings to leave town or suffer the consequences? Send it by mail; leave it under her door; waylay dry goods bundles and slip one in there. If you keep at a thing like that it always wears them down in the end. She may be just as clever as you say she is; but nerves are nerves. Her uncle had a whacking lot of gold in that house. Do you think that Hindu servant got away with it?"

"I rather believe so. If Zudora had that gold she would not be living so modestly. A woman who is used to runabouts and Paris gowns isn't going to give them up unless she has to."

So Zudora began to receive the mysterious heart. She found it in her laundry, stuck in her dressing mirror, on the floor in the hall, in boxes of fruits and candy, and always with the warning—"Beware! Save your life! Leave the country!" And it did wear down her nerves.

But in the meantime Hunt ran down two of his quarries, Ike and Bill. One has to work up to land the chief crooks. You never, or rarely, begin with them. You lop off this tentacle and that, and each operation weakens them.

The final presentation of the mysterious heart made Zudora nearly break down. It seemed to her that her uncle must have had some deadly enemies and that she had inherited their vengeance. But they did not succeed in their endeavor to frighten her to the extent of driving her away. The "heart" failed in its purpose; but the evil star still sailed clearly across the heavens.

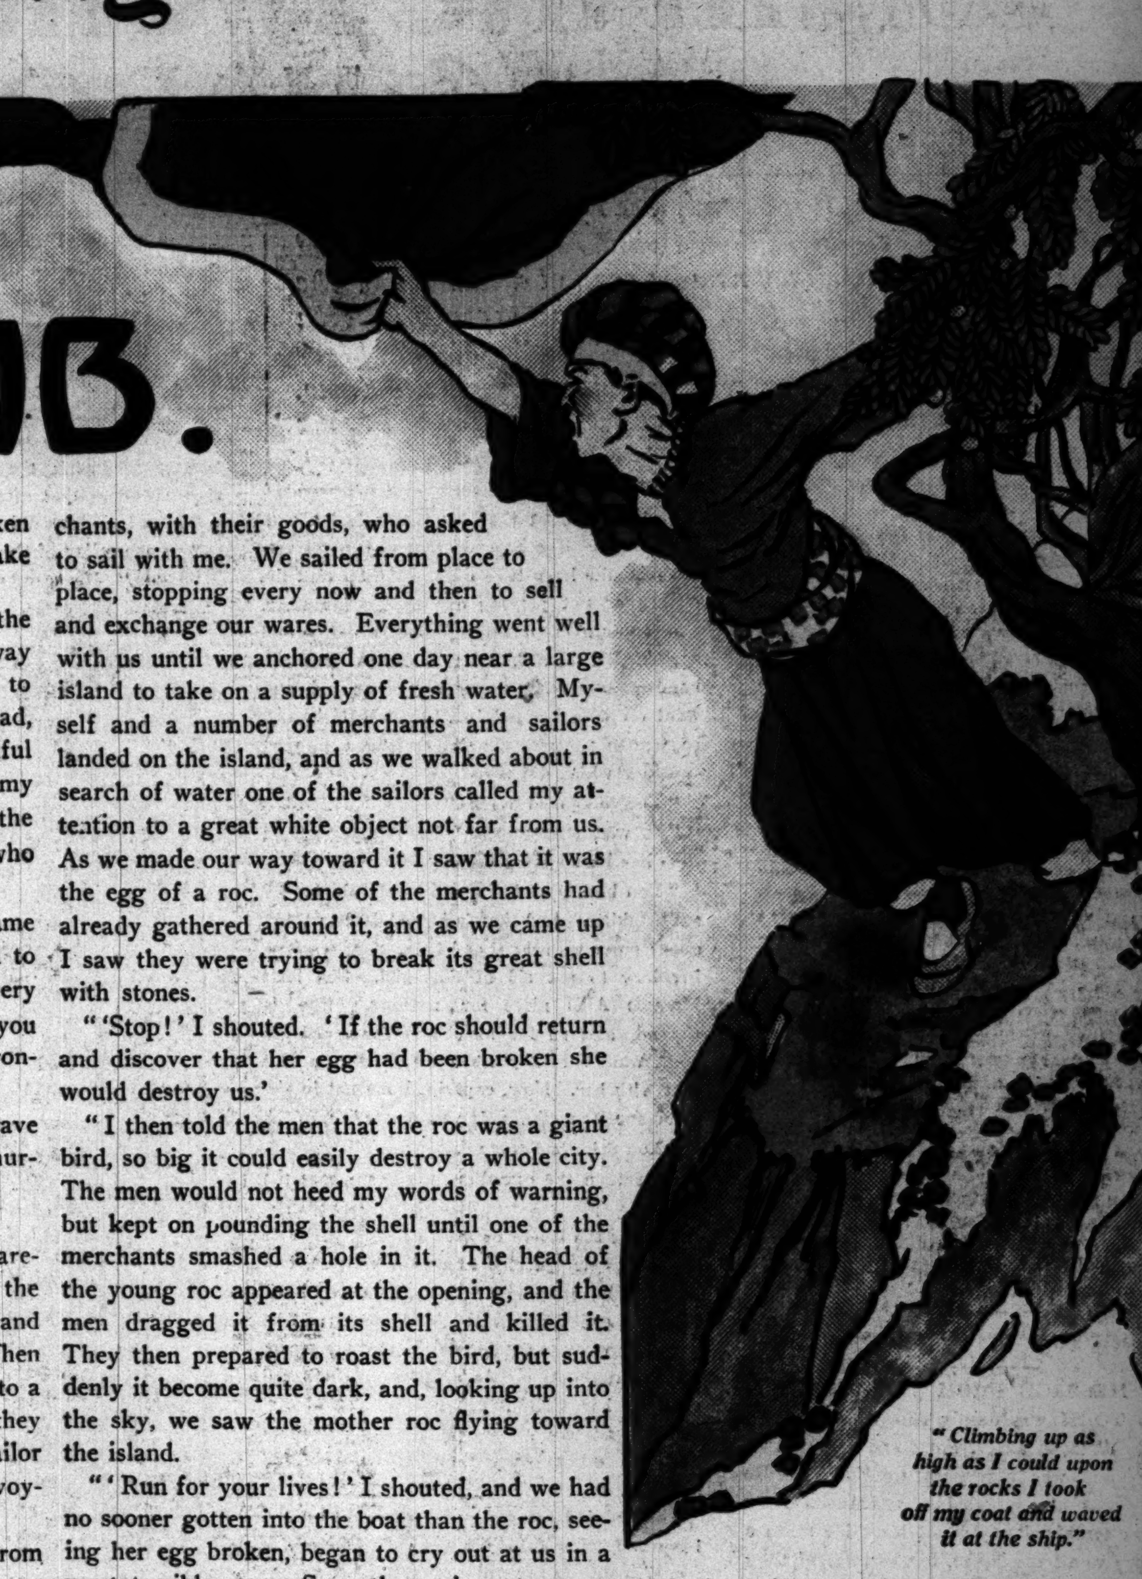
SINBAD ESCAPES from the TOMB.

From the Arabian Nights
by Donahey



"Climbing up as high as I could upon the rocks I took off my coat and waved it at the ship."

SYNOPSIS OF "SINBAD IS BURIED ALIVE."

Sinbad the Sailor, with a party of merchants and sailors, having landed on an island, is captured by cannibals. Sinbad escapes and makes his way to a city, where he is received kindly by the king, and is married to one of the ladies of the court. After a time his wife dies, and Sinbad is buried alive with her body, as was the custom of the country, in a great pit on a mountain side. Later, while sleeping, he is suddenly awakened by something moving near him.

"AS I jumped to my feet I heard the heavy breathing of some sort of animal near me. Not being able to see in the dark, I was filled with great fear, thinking the beast would devour me. As I stood trembling against the wall of the pit I began wondering how this creature had gotten into the place. Suddenly the idea came to me that this animal must have come into the pit by some opening that I had been unable to discover in my wanderings about the place.

"I made up my mind to try to frighten the creature, then follow it to the place where it had entered. Suddenly I screamed at the top of my voice, 'Get out of there, you beast!' and to my relief I heard it turn and run from me. I followed it as fast as I could in the dark place, falling every now and then over the rocks in the mad chase.

"At last I saw a small spot of light ahead of me, and, hurrying on, I found it to be a hole, which led into the outside world. Crawling through the rocks, I found myself on the shore of the sea, where I fell upon the sands and gave thanks for my deliverance.

"I walked along the beach, and soon found there was no way in which I could leave the place except by boat, for the shore was a narrow strip, bordered on one side by high mountains and on the other by the sea. I remembered the priceless jewels that had been buried with the people in the pit, so I crawled through the rock and made my way back to the tomb. And you may be very sure I was careful to remember the path, so I could find my way back again. I gathered a great lot of pearls, diamonds, and gold jewelry from the dead bodies, and, tying them together in my sash, I hurried back to the shore. I carefully watched the sea each day for some sign of a sail. The bread and water I had brought with me from the pit was about gone, and I was filled with fear of starvation.

"On the fourth day I saw a ship in the distance, and, climbing up as high as I could upon the rocks, I took off my coat and waved it at the ship. I was afraid those aboard would not see me, and if they did see me I was alarmed for fear the captain would not stop, as the sea was running high at the time.

"The captain, who proved to be a fine fellow, saw my signal and sent a boat for me. I waded out into the sea with my treasure, as far as I could go, and met the boat, and after a dangerous trip we were at last pulled aboard the ship. Fearing there might be people aboard from the country I had just left, I told the captain I had been shipwrecked. He believed my story and, taking me to the cabin, he gave me a suit of dry clothes, and when I offered him some of the jewels I had brought from the tomb he shook his head and said, 'You owe me nothing, but if you wish you can give a present to the men who risked their lives going after you in the small boat.' I gave each of the sailors who had taken me from the shore enough of the gems to make him rich.

"After a pleasant voyage we landed in the city of Balsora, from which I soon made my way back to Bagdad. My family was overjoyed to see me, for they had given me up as one dead, as I had been away such a long time. Thankful at being back safe in my home and among my own people, I made presents of money to the poor and gave a great dinner to my friends, who all rejoiced at my return."

"Tomorrow, if you will come at the same hour," said Sinbad the Sailor, as he turned to the poor porter, who had been drinking in every word of the great sailor's story, "I will tell you the story of my fifth voyage, which is as wonderful and strange as my other adventures."

Taking a purse of gold which Sinbad gave him, the poor porter bowed himself out and hurried home.

Next day at the proper time the porter carefully dressed himself and again went to the house of the sailor. Sinbad welcomed him and asked the porter to sit down beside him. When the rest of the guests arrived they sat down to a great table, filled with rich food, and after they had eaten the porter reminded Sinbad the Sailor of his promise to tell the story of his fifth voyage.

"Well," said Sinbad, "when I returned from my fourth voyage I thought I would never leave my home again in search of adventure, after the awful time I had on my last trip. But soon I became restless and sailed again. This time I wished to be my own captain, so I bought a fine big ship, and had it loaded with goods to be used in trade. I found I had more room in the ship than I needed, so I took on board a party of merchants, with their goods, who asked to sail with me. We sailed from place to place, stopping every now and then to sell and exchange our wares. Everything went well with us until we anchored one day near a large island to take on a supply of fresh water. Myself and a number of merchants and sailors landed on the island, and as we walked about in search of water one of the sailors called my attention to a great white object not far from us. As we made our way toward it I saw that it was the egg of a roc. Some of the merchants had already gathered around it, and as we came up I saw they were trying to break its great shell with stones.

"'Stop!' I shouted. 'If the roc should return and discover that her egg had been broken she would destroy us.'

"I then told the men that the roc was a giant bird, so big it could easily destroy a whole city. The men would not heed my words of warning, but kept on pounding the shell until one of the merchants smashed a hole in it. The head of the young roc appeared at the opening, and the men dragged it from its shell and killed it. They then prepared to roast the bird, but suddenly it become quite dark, and, looking up into the sky, we saw the mother roc flying toward the island.

"'Run for your lives!' I shouted, and we had no sooner gotten into the boat than the roc, seeing her egg broken, began to cry out at us in a most terrible way. Soon the roc's mate came, and, flying above the ship, cried out at us in a voice more terrible than thunder.

"Boarding the ship, we set all sail, and soon lost sight of the island. The birds flew away soon after we had set sail, but it was only a short time before we saw them again, flying toward us at a terrific speed, carrying enormous rocks in their great claws. Flying over us, one of the birds dropped the rock it carried, which was as large as a house, straight at the ship, but luckily it fell into the sea with a great splash. The other bird's aim was much better, for it dropped the great rock squarely into the middle of the ship, breaking it into a thousand pieces.

THE TEENIE WEENIES GO SKATING

BY DONAHEY

"I GUESS it's going to freeze tonight," said the old soldier, as he looked out through a hole he had scratched in the frost on the Teenie Weenie window pane.

"Yes, sir, I think in will freeze, good and hard," added the General.

"Oh goody, goody," yelled the Dunce, "we can go skating in the morning."

"Yes, yes—let's all go skating," cried several of the Teenie Weenies. And catching hands they danced around the table in the center of the Teenie Weenie sitting room, singing as loud as they could,

"We'll all go skating tomorrow,
We'll all go skating tomorrow,
We'll all go skating tomor-r-o-ow!
And have a lot of fun."

"Well, I think it's about time we were all going to bed," yawned the General, as he got up from his easy chair and stretched himself before the Teenie Weenie fireplace.

"Why, it's 9 o'clock," cried the Doctor, as the Teenie Weenie grandfather's clock in the hallway struck nine.

"Come on, now—everybody to bed," commanded the General. "Cook, will you see if the back door's locked?"

"Aye, aye, sir," answered the Cook.

Very soon the house was all dark and the Teenie Weenies snuggled down into the warm comforters.

"Jimminy," said the Dunce, as he sat straight up in bed the next morning, "I—I dreamed I was skating in a pitcher of ice water, and fell in!"

After the Teenie Weenies had eaten their buckwheat cakes and maple sirup, they hurried over to a place beside a house where the water had dripped from a faucet and made a lovely skating place.

The Teenie Weenies skated about the pond, to the music of the Scotchman's bagpipes. The Old Soldier chopped up some matches and a leadpencil and made a roaring fire, so the crowd could warm their Teenie Weenie toes.

At lunch time the Cook brought over a basket of sandwiches and cookies and made hot coffee in his biggest coffee pot.

They skated all day, having a glorious time. Not a single Teenie Weenie nose was frosted, not a finger or toe was nipped, and at night they all went merrily home, happy, but so very tired that lots of them tumbled into their soft warm beds without a thought of dinner.

"Ladies and Gentlemen."

ANOTHER OF THE SERIES OF PEN AND INK SKETCHES BY CHARLES DANA GIBSON WILL APPEAR IN THE TRIBUNE NEXT SUNDAY.

The Love Letter of a Soul

THE following is an exact reproduction of a love letter published in "The Chicago Tribune" Nov. 16, 1902. It was the prize winner in a love letter contest conducted at that time by "The Tribune." From time to time requests have been received for its republication, proving that this Love Letter of a Soul left an indelible impression on its readers. It was out of these repeated requests that the idea for the popular love letter contest I am now conducting grew. I believe it to be one of the most remarkable love letters that have ever been written. DORIS BLAKE.

"THE LOVE LETTER OF A SOUL."

[Winning the Bachelor's Prize.]

A tangle of lilies of the valley will be strewn on a grave in a Chicago cemetery today. Thus will the "bachelor's prize" of $25 for the "best love letter" be awarded.

Mary is the only name by which the readers of "The Tribune" ever will know the author. One year ago she wrote the letter which tells a story as old, as tragic, as heartrending, and yet as noble as any in the world's great library of human emotion and experience. This was the swan song of her soul, and she went to "him who understands" as the pen fell from her quavering fingers.

The man to whom it was written is—mercifully—still blind and deaf; unless his eyes have been opened by a vision of the past or a voice from the grave. But:

"I have hesitated about sending you this letter," wrote Mary's friend who has the dying girl's epistle in her possession, "as I have held it sacred. I have finally decided to do so for two reasons, one of which the letter will reveal to you, and the other is the hope that words may reach the eyes of the man for whom they were intended and awaken him.

"I am not aware of the conditions necessary to entering this letter for a prize—indeed, that is not the motive, for nothing would I accept, except perhaps a handful of flowers for her grave should the letter meet your ideal of the love letter."

Beloved: It is the twilight hour; outside the lake is sobbing and moaning in rebellious protest against the deepening shadows. The wind, too, is in plaintive cry against my window, as if in fear of the cold and night's coming. All without seems a part of myself, so full in accord with its turbulence is my own heart this hour.

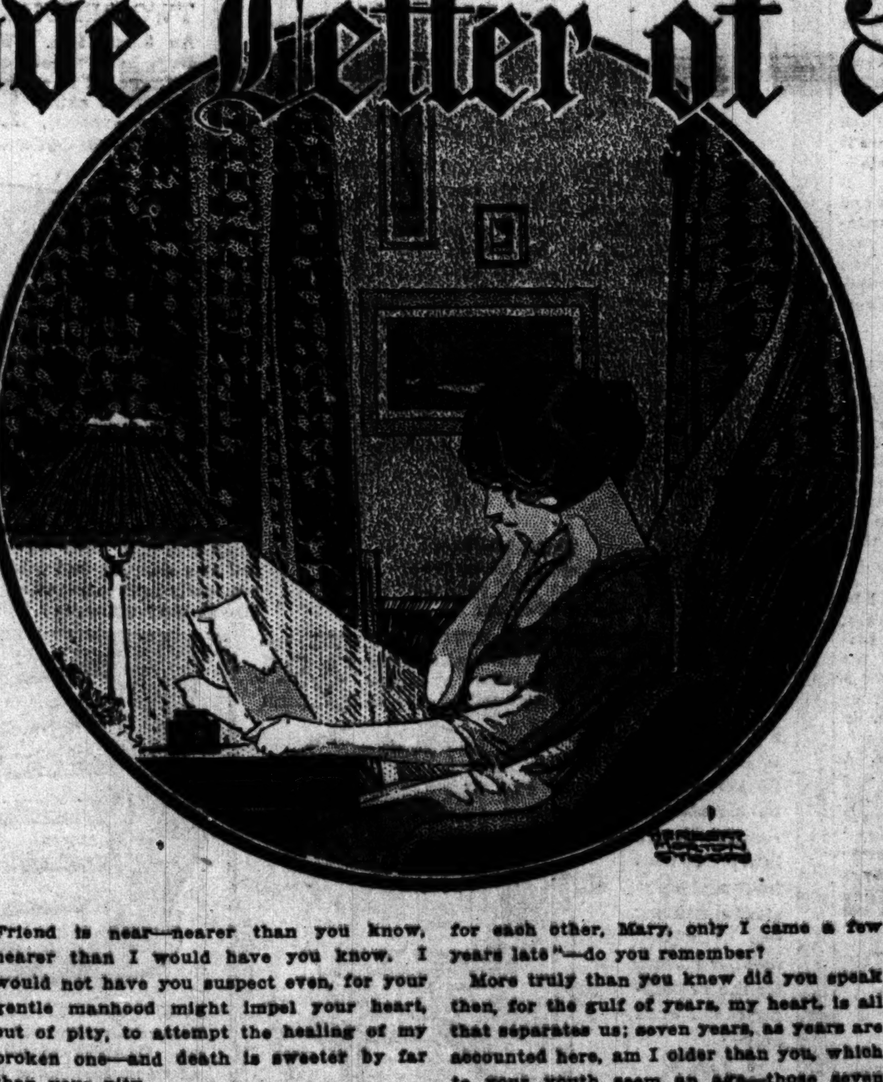
Within the fire has sunk to ember glow—the breath of dying violets is upon my face—your violets, dear; my books, piano, the very pictures upon the wall, seem under the spell of some mystic silence—that sort of hush when one's own heartbeats seem too loud. The long gray shadows have engulfed all—no, not quite. Above my desk (your gift, dear one) hangs a pictured "Christ in Gethsemane," which stands out with startling distinctness—and it is all symbolical—of me.

If you, my heart's heart, can picture the storm without and the Gethsemane within, you have the condition of my soul.

They say that a woman never writes letters to the man she loves—she writes only records of her moods and fancies—the evolution of her emotions. This you know I have never done with you—indeed, I doubt if I could have done so even had your love been mine—my love in the deed rather than word, and the flame glory of it could not have been molded in words even had you wished it, dear heart—and you never did.

But now, when I feel the end is so near, I will for the first and last time write out to you all my heart—it may still and ease the pain therein—and you—you it will not hurt, dear love—you will not even know or understand. If by chance you should feel even a glimmer of comprehension and pain of it all, forgive me the writing of it, dear—I would give my life to save you pain, even momentary regret.

If you had ever loved me, or if you had won me by a pretense of it, all would be different—but remember this through all eternity: there is no blame upon you—none—and I have loved you but the more for your honesty. That all the pain and bitter lonliness have been mine is a lesson of God's, the meaning of which will be mine, too, some time, somewhere—and it will not be long now. The little ring of remembrance you gave me is upon my finger, and its ever increasing willingness to escape my finger shows me plainly that the Great Friend is near—nearer than you know, nearer than I would have you know. I would not have you suspect even, for your gentle manhood might impel your heart, out of pity, to attempt the healing of my broken one—and death is sweeter by far than your pity.



You know, dear beloved, I've loved you always—always—not alone in this age, but through all the ages of evolution—from the "beginning which was the word," and on and on through the various forms of consciousness and experience gathering our souls passed through until we reached the consciously divine human form; then on through all the primitive human incarnations I know, beloved, I know our oneness even to the present time; but somewhere in the ages I lost you by outgaining you in knowledge—or was it some jealous goddess put sleep into your love eyes that you do not awake from yet—until in this life, as you once quaintly said, "We were made for each other, Mary, only I came a few years late"—do you remember?

More truly than you knew did you speak then, for the gulf of years, my heart, is all that separates us; seven years, as years are accounted here, am I older than you, which to your youth seem an age—those seven years caused your pride to close your heart to me—unconsciously, perhaps—and yet in all other phases of love save the one you have turned to me as a flower to the sun; to me you have given every thought, hope, and desire; to me you look for response to all your varying moods; I've been the spur to your ambitions, the receptacle and confidant of all your sorrows and joys—the pilot of your life ship and "the guiding star of your soul," as you once called me.

But just because of the years—you do not love me! Your honor impelled you to show me that as if something that lay beyond words made that necessary even to a woman seven years older than yourself. Strange it is! You do not love me, and yet you have often wondered why it is no other woman or young girl ever interested you. You do not love me? And yet you have never been happy an hour in another woman's presence—it was home to get back to me, you said. O, my blind, self-deluded heart you are!

You do not love?—you who have kissed my lips and held me close, you do not love me?—you do not love me?—you who wear upon your soul that "jewel beyond price," a woman's soul? No, you do not love me—you for whom I shall wear throughout eternity the "scarlet letter."

It is true, O my heart's heart, that you never asked my love or my soul—I gave them wholly, completely; and why? Do you ask in wonder? Because, true heart—just because we are one and it was inevitable—I am you and you are me. Could I do otherwise, even if I were conscious and you unconscious of the great meaning of the underlying fate in it all?

I would not change it even now if I could. My love for you (pain crowned only as it is) has glorified my life here, and in the life beyond I know God will forgive the sin, if there be any, because of my utter unselfishness and glad abandonment to the crucifixion of my life for love's service, and your happiness—yes, and welfare, too. Could woman's love be more—could it nearer reach divinity than to give all and ask nothing? Ah, beloved, great has been the gift to you. I've wondered at times that the very greatness of it did not give you a glimmering of the truth—I've spoken no word to awaken you, no plea to have you see. But, blessed, my one prayer through all these long years has been that your eyes would be unsealed—that God would touch your vision with the glory of the truth and that your love would leap to life from sleep and claim me before man, as I am before God, your wife.

But the waiting has been too long—I am heart weary and soul spent; I shall be so glad to rest—until you shall come to me in some bright, beautiful beyond where there are no veils of flesh keeping you from me.

You know, dearest, you have often wondered why I would not accept the honor and love other men—and noble ones—have offered me; I was "too good and beautiful and pure to miss the reign of home," you said. Ah, the stab of that you will never know! How could I desecrate my great reality for worldly position or conventional honors—I who am as much a part of you as God himself? I could not answer you then, and you will never know until it is too late; then your heart will awaken and call for me—then will you realize, as I have always, that I am your own very soul—all in all.

But do not grieve, my loved one—do not sorrow, heart mine, for there as here I shall be all and only yours; there as here my one and only thought will be you; there as here my prayers and tears will ascend to God interwoven with your name until at last we are again consciously united in oneness.

I do not blame you, heart mine—never have I—and you must not reproach yourself once, even. You could not help your blindness, could not know; and I—I could not speak to awaken you—I felt it to be a part of an all wise, planning God; I dared not interfere—I could do nothing but live and love for you wholly.

That you hold me pure I know—you have brought mother and sister to me and on every occasion you have shown your pride in me before the world—they of course did not know—yes, you have held me above all women—even if you did not love me.

You will never marry; no other woman could attain to the love which I've imprinted upon you for a standard—and you, great heart—you could never be satisfied with less—I think you will live for me until you come to me—there——

The shadows are deepened into blackness—I can no longer see to write. Outside the stars are gleaming and beckoning me, heart dear. For all that you have been, are, and will be unto me I am grateful to the God who wove our destinies into one—he has set, too, the stars alight to guide me safely—there—to him and the rest. I must go, and you will come. It's very cold—I am a little afraid and lonely—if only you were here—but here, loved one, is my heart molded into a kiss—the last in life upon your soul—for it is farewell—my heart—my loved one—I go to God. He will forgive because he—understands. MARY.

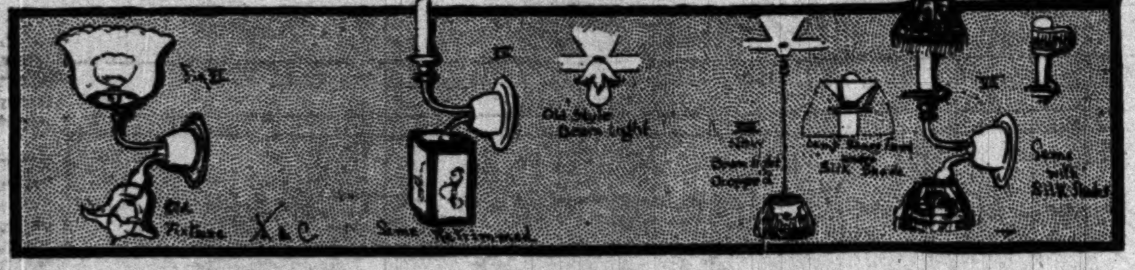
Old Lighting Fixtures Brought Down to Date

Anita de Campi



Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

THE most comprehensive description of a satisfied person I have ever found was this one. "He was a contented man—a man who owned his house and lived in it, and didn't want to sell it." For my part, I am rather skeptical that any such man ever lived, excepting in the virile fancy of the author of those lines.

Owning a house is not the gratifying thing to the owner that those who have never owned one may fancy it to be. It is a fallacy that money expended on fixtures in your own home is well spent, "because they are permanent." There is nothing permanent about them. They are as sure to go out of fashion as the cut of your coat. And then, if you own the place, you cannot transfer your troubles to the landlord, under threat of moving, but have to overcome them yourself or go on living with them.

This year the most radical change is the change in lighting fixtures. The cost of reëquipment throughout a house of average size runs well up into the hundreds of dollars. The type of fixtures that has gone completely out of style, and that is to be seen in almost every house which is ten years old, or older, and has not been remodeled, is the sort of center fixture combining gas and electric lights in opaque or art glass shades, that jut out, upward, and downward, from a common center.

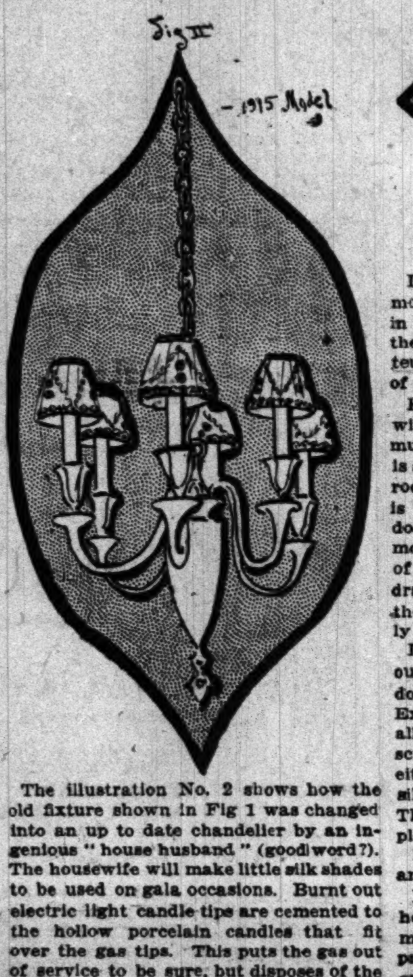
Same as Fig I Retrimmed

The accompanying illustration shows a cluster light (Fig. 1) that was quite up to the mark ten years ago, and below it (Fig. 3) a simple fixture of the kind at present in vogue.

Art glass and cut glass are in disfavor. Candles take their place in all cases. "Take that combination electric light and gas fixture out" is the decorator's first injunction. I don't believe it is always necessary to do that. Nearly all of these combination fixtures are in separate parts, and clusters of these parts can be inverted. Where the lights jut out and down their radiating bracket arms, in nine cases out of ten, can be turned straight up without the assistance of an expert. They are only screwed on. The glass shades may be unscrewed then, and electric candles with bulb ends, that come ready made, may be screwed right into the sockets, over porcelain candle saucers that will hide the connections.

Fig II



The illustration No. 2 shows how the old fixture shown in Fig 1 was changed into an up to date chandelier by an ingenious "house husband" (good word?). The housewife will make little silk shades to be used on gala occasions. Burnt out electric light candle tips are cemented to the hollow porcelain candles that fit over the gas tips. This puts the gas out of service to be sure, but disposes of the necessity of altering the gas part of the fixture. The fixtures, it must be remembered, are seen as much by day as by night.

The only electric light breakable shades that are now permissible are the types that are copied from old fashioned real candle shades. A hall fixture remodeled at home is shown in Figs. 4 and 5. Prisms like those hanging from the No. 4 fixture may be bought already mounted on rings. The shade is an old fashioned crystal one—so old that it is new fashioned again. On the passé fixture (Fig. 5) is a cut and frosted globe and two cut glass side shades.

Decorators cry down the idea of remodeling old fixtures instead of putting in new ones, but the sketches here show the difference accomplished by an amateur in simply readjusting the trimmings of old fixtures.

Have you beamed ceiling lights? You will be told that they must go. "Too much like cheap apartments." But there is a way around this. The average dining room with electric lighted beam ceilings is usually further equipped with a glass dome to hang over the table. Now the mode of having the table in the center of the room has changed. Tables are drawn towards the window instead, so there is no further need for an accurately central light.

Let us part with the glass dome without regret and drop those ceiling lights down to, say seven feet above the floor. Extension wires and sockets are sold by all dealers. They have simply to be screwed into the old beam fixtures, and either a little candle lantern or a small silk shade may be placed on each light. The effect is gay, the room being completely transformed.

Figs. 4 and 5 show the parts before and after transposing.

If the dining room is furnished in mahogany, silk shades would be best, matching the prevailing color of the wall paper, but if simple furniture of the art crafts type is used, cube shaped little wooden lantern frames may be made and lined flatly with paper or linen. They will be found to accord delightfully with other structural features of the room.

Figs. 6 and 7 show two of the commonest types of combination fixtures remodeled at home by a change of shades. No. 8 is a home made shade, suitable also for use in lights dropped from the beamed ceilings. Common gas globes must be parted with.

In next SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE will be found illustrations of a number of shades which may be made at home, together with a description of the materials employed, and some simple instructions as to how they are made.

Replies to Queries.

H. C. H.: General advice in furnishing a bungalow would be to use any type of furniture that is unpretentious. Avoid carved pieces and large, overstuffed pieces. Wicker is excellent and attractive, especially the fumed wicker. Fumed oak is also good; painted cottage furniture is delightful, and old fashioned furnishings of the primitive sort, such as splint bottom and Windsor chairs, are suitable and useful. For floor covering, if the bungalow is to be used as a summer home particularly, nothing could be better than Japanese matting. If the place is small, it is well to have it all done in one sort of furniture.

W. F. W.: I should advise repeating the color of your side wall on your inside window draperies, using some sunfast, rather lightweight material. Have a narrow valance across the top, and let the side curtains be narrow as well, so as to shut out as little light as possible. Under these have simple muslin curtains hanging straight down, quite close to the window pane. Arrange those so that they may be drawn back easily.

E. C.: If you wish me to tell you how to arrange your pictures in the library, living room, and bedrooms, will you furnish me with a descriptive list of the pictures that you have and give me a general idea of what sort of rooms they are to be placed in? This is a subject on which it is almost impossible to generalize, excepting in the broadest way. A good rule to follow is to have but one picture to one wall. This, however, cannot be made a binding rule, as different wall spaces call for different treatments.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle.

Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective.

They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Did You Ever Make a Mistake That Nearly Cost You a Divorce?

Would You Have Told Your Husband First.

When we were first married my husband took me to a little town to live for a few months while he completed a contract. As we did not expect to stay long, we did not take a house, but lived at a hotel. This mode of life left me with nothing to do.

I went out with my husband on rare occasions when he could go; I went alone; I went with any of the women who had time to spare from their housework and children, or I went with the men I had met. I was young. I did not feel "married" and I did not realize fully how quick the world is to criticize a married woman seen too often with men other than her husband.

The man who had charge of the boathouse at the club where we were members was a big, jolly, boyish looking fellow, handsome in a way. I thought he was about 18. One afternoon "Mac" tried to tell me of a place where I could find a certain sort of a flower, and when he failed to make me understand offered to go with me to show me. It was only a few minutes' paddle, and we were back almost right away. I was going in for the day, but a man with whom I often went out was at the landing and he persuaded me to go out again with him.

As we came in I noticed on the balcony of the bathhouse watching us a woman I had often seen before and asked my escort who she was.

"That's Mac's wife."

"Mac's wife?" I repeated. "Don't you mean mother? That boy surely isn't old enough to be married."

Imagine my horror when next day's mail brought me a letter from this woman saying she would name me in a suit for divorce, and bring in all my "disgraceful actions with other men" to prove my bad character. She said she knew the name of every man I had been with at the boathouse that summer and how often I had been out with each and how long we had stayed.

Innocent as I was, I was dreadfully frightened by this letter, and my fear drove me to make an awful mistake. Instead of handing the letter to my husband and letting him decide what to do, I said nothing to him, but took the letter to "Mac" himself, asking him to explain to his wife how mistaken she was.

I was about to go home to my mother for a visit and I went, but I had not been gone more than a week when Tom came to have a serious talk with me. It seems Mrs. Mac really filed suit for divorce and named me, but the lawyer, knowing my husband well, had called him up and told him how things were. Of course, Tom believed nothing against me, and yet there was the letter—I had taken it to "Mac" instead of him, my natural protector.

He was terribly shocked to have his wife's name dragged into this scandal, but, thank goodness, his love did not fail me. A. E. J.

He Laughs No More.

We went to the show, lover and I, and, as it was a funny play, I laughed out loud; he laughed, too. Now we are married, and at another show when I laughed he turned to me and said: "Cut it. Do you want to wake the dead?" A. E.

She Has No Hero.

Before marriage my husband was the most attentive fellow one could wish to meet. He would go to any extreme to save me from any embarrassment, but after we were married he and I had spent the evening at his sister's, and while waiting for a car he discovered he only had a nickel and five pennies. Then my hero turned to me and said, "You get on the car and give the conductor the five pennies, and I will get on and give him the nickel." As we were quite a distance from home I did not care to walk, but my hero! I have none. L. B.

BRIGHT SAYINGS OF THE CHILDREN.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The stories may be sent in either by children or their parents. The only condition is the story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

The 5 year old son was being taken to the summit of Mount Washington by his parents. The ascent seemed to make a great impression upon the child. As they neared the summit they passed from bright sunshine into misty clouds. As they alighted from the car nothing could be seen in the thick mist, and with an awe stricken voice he got hold of his father's hand and asked almost in a whisper: "Papa, where is God?" S. B. R.

Four year old Calvin, on hearing the baby crying in the next house, asked the cause, and was told that the baby's stomach hurt him. "Why," replied Calvin, "I should think a baby would feel fine, 'cause everything's new inside of them." W. F. F.

Potatoes were usually served in some form or other at the midday meal. One day they were omitted, and little Mary, who evidently did not enjoy the repast, sighed, saying, "My, mother, but it's lonesome without potatoes." A. N.

Robert, who is 3 years old, stayed at my house over night. In the middle of the night I was awakened by a scream, and I found him crawling on his hands and knees across the bed. He was just about to tumble off. In the morning I called him to account for screaming during the night. He said, "A cow was chasing me!" Just to tease him, I said, "Robert, I'm surprised at you. A big boy like you, afraid of an innocent cow." He opened his big blue eyes wide and said, "Well, the cow had a gun!"

Little Francis Moffett, aged 4, approached his father's guest whom his father called by his first name and said, "You're Fred ain't you?" "Yes," answered the guest with a smile, "and who are you?" The youngster's eyes sparkled as he proudly answered, "I'm Mr. Moffett." F. R. P.

Emily, age 4, was scorned as a companion by her sisters, 8 and 10. One day when the sisters were locked in a room having a gay time, Emily rapped sharply on the door. Immediately the laughter ceased, but no one offered to let her in. Finally she rapped again, saying, "Taint me, it's mamma. Let me in!" H. M.

Ezra, aged 4, and his older sister were sent to a matinée. Sister had a ticket, but it was thought Ezra, being small, could go in free. He objected to this arrangement, and said: "If the man won't let me in without a ticket, I just know sister will say, 'Good-by, Ezra; I suppose you know the way home.'"

When Edward was 5 years old he played with a boy named Adolph. One muddy day they tried to run across my clean kitchen floor to get a ball. I chased them out and afterwards heard them talking out on the front porch. Adolph said, "My mother doesn't care if I run across the kitchen floor." After a long silence I heard Edward say, "I wish I had a nice, dirty mother like yours." F. E.

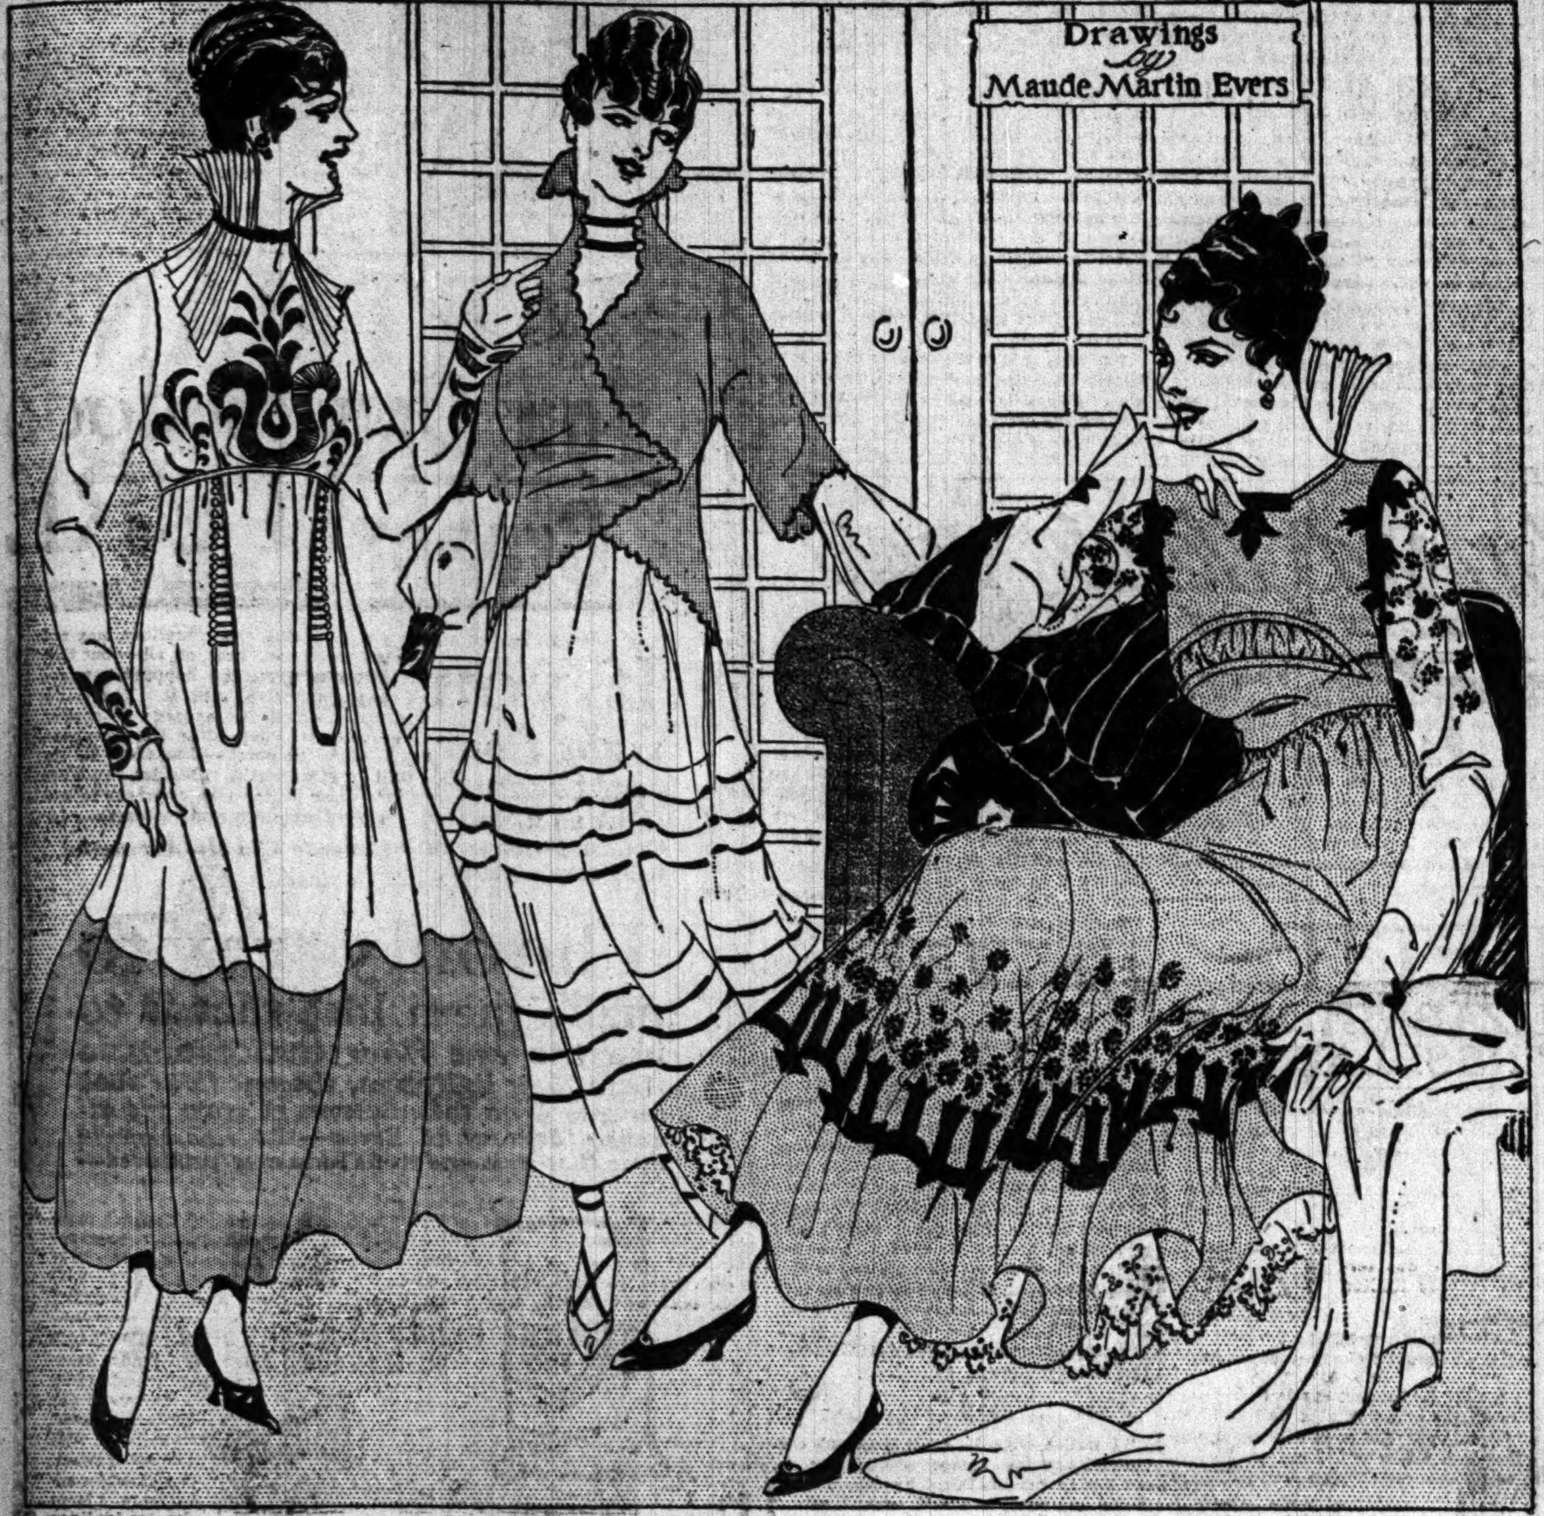
FIRST FROCKS OF SPRING SHOW STRONG EMBROIDERY NOTE

by LOUISE JAMES



Drawings by Maude Martin Evers

Spring frock of white voile with embroidered motif in Bulgarian blue. The braiding down the front of the skirt is of the same blue shade and the satin band about the hem is also identical in tone with the embroidery.

Cords and scallops add distinction to this full skirted frock with the bolero jacket which sharpens the line of the waist.

THE woman who longs for individuality and self-expression in dress this season is going to find it. If she inclines to the ultra simple and is averse to many furbelows and trimmings she will find abundant examples to follow in designs that are of the latest mode. If on the other hand she has a secret preference for the bizarre in dress and enjoys hovering dangerously near to the edge of good taste she can discover plenty of good excuses for so doing. For there is a galaxy of stunning styles which are shortly to be thrust upon the waiting public, and they are made up in handsome materials as well as in handsome designs. And right here it might be of interest to know that a great number of the prettiest and most attractive materials for spring and summer, silks as well as cottons and linens, and some exquisite laces, are being made in this country.

Many of these new silks shown are of pastel coloring and those finished with a satin surface are particularly well liked. The vogue for the full skirt is going to increase the vogue for the soft silk. Soft taffetas are perfect to make up into the new bouffant effects, adapting themselves equally well for cordings, shirrings, flouncings, and ruffles. Suede satin is another material which is excellent made up along these lines. It comes in all colors, but is perhaps the most exquisite in the peach and creamy shades, combined with laces of the same tone.

It is interesting to note that, owing to the impetus given to American manufacture of textiles, many of the new shades for spring are given American names. There is the Palm Beach sand shade and then the Newport tan, which is a few shades lighter. Again there is the Rocky mountain blue, which is clear and medium in shade and likely to be popular in linens and dimities. Paris is exerting her energies in violets and grays and it is established that black and white in frocks will be stylish.

I have already seen some of the most charming of imported models in black and white stripes with perhaps a tiny sprig introduced. There are handsome radium silks in this same black and white stripe effect. Occasionally the black and white stripe is livened up by the introduction of a hair line of color which is exquisite. The stripe note and the embroidery note seem to be competing for favor on the newest models. In silks the stripes are of every shade and every width. A plain stripe alternates with one of shot coloring; blue and violet, cream and pink, black and white are all of them attractive combinations.

There is nothing prettier for a simple party dress than one of the shimmering ivory taffetas embroidered in dainty flower sprigs, sometimes a number of different colors reflecting the brightness of spring. Hand blocked designs are pretty, too, in floral effects on frocks of crêpe, radium, cotton, voile, and taffetas.

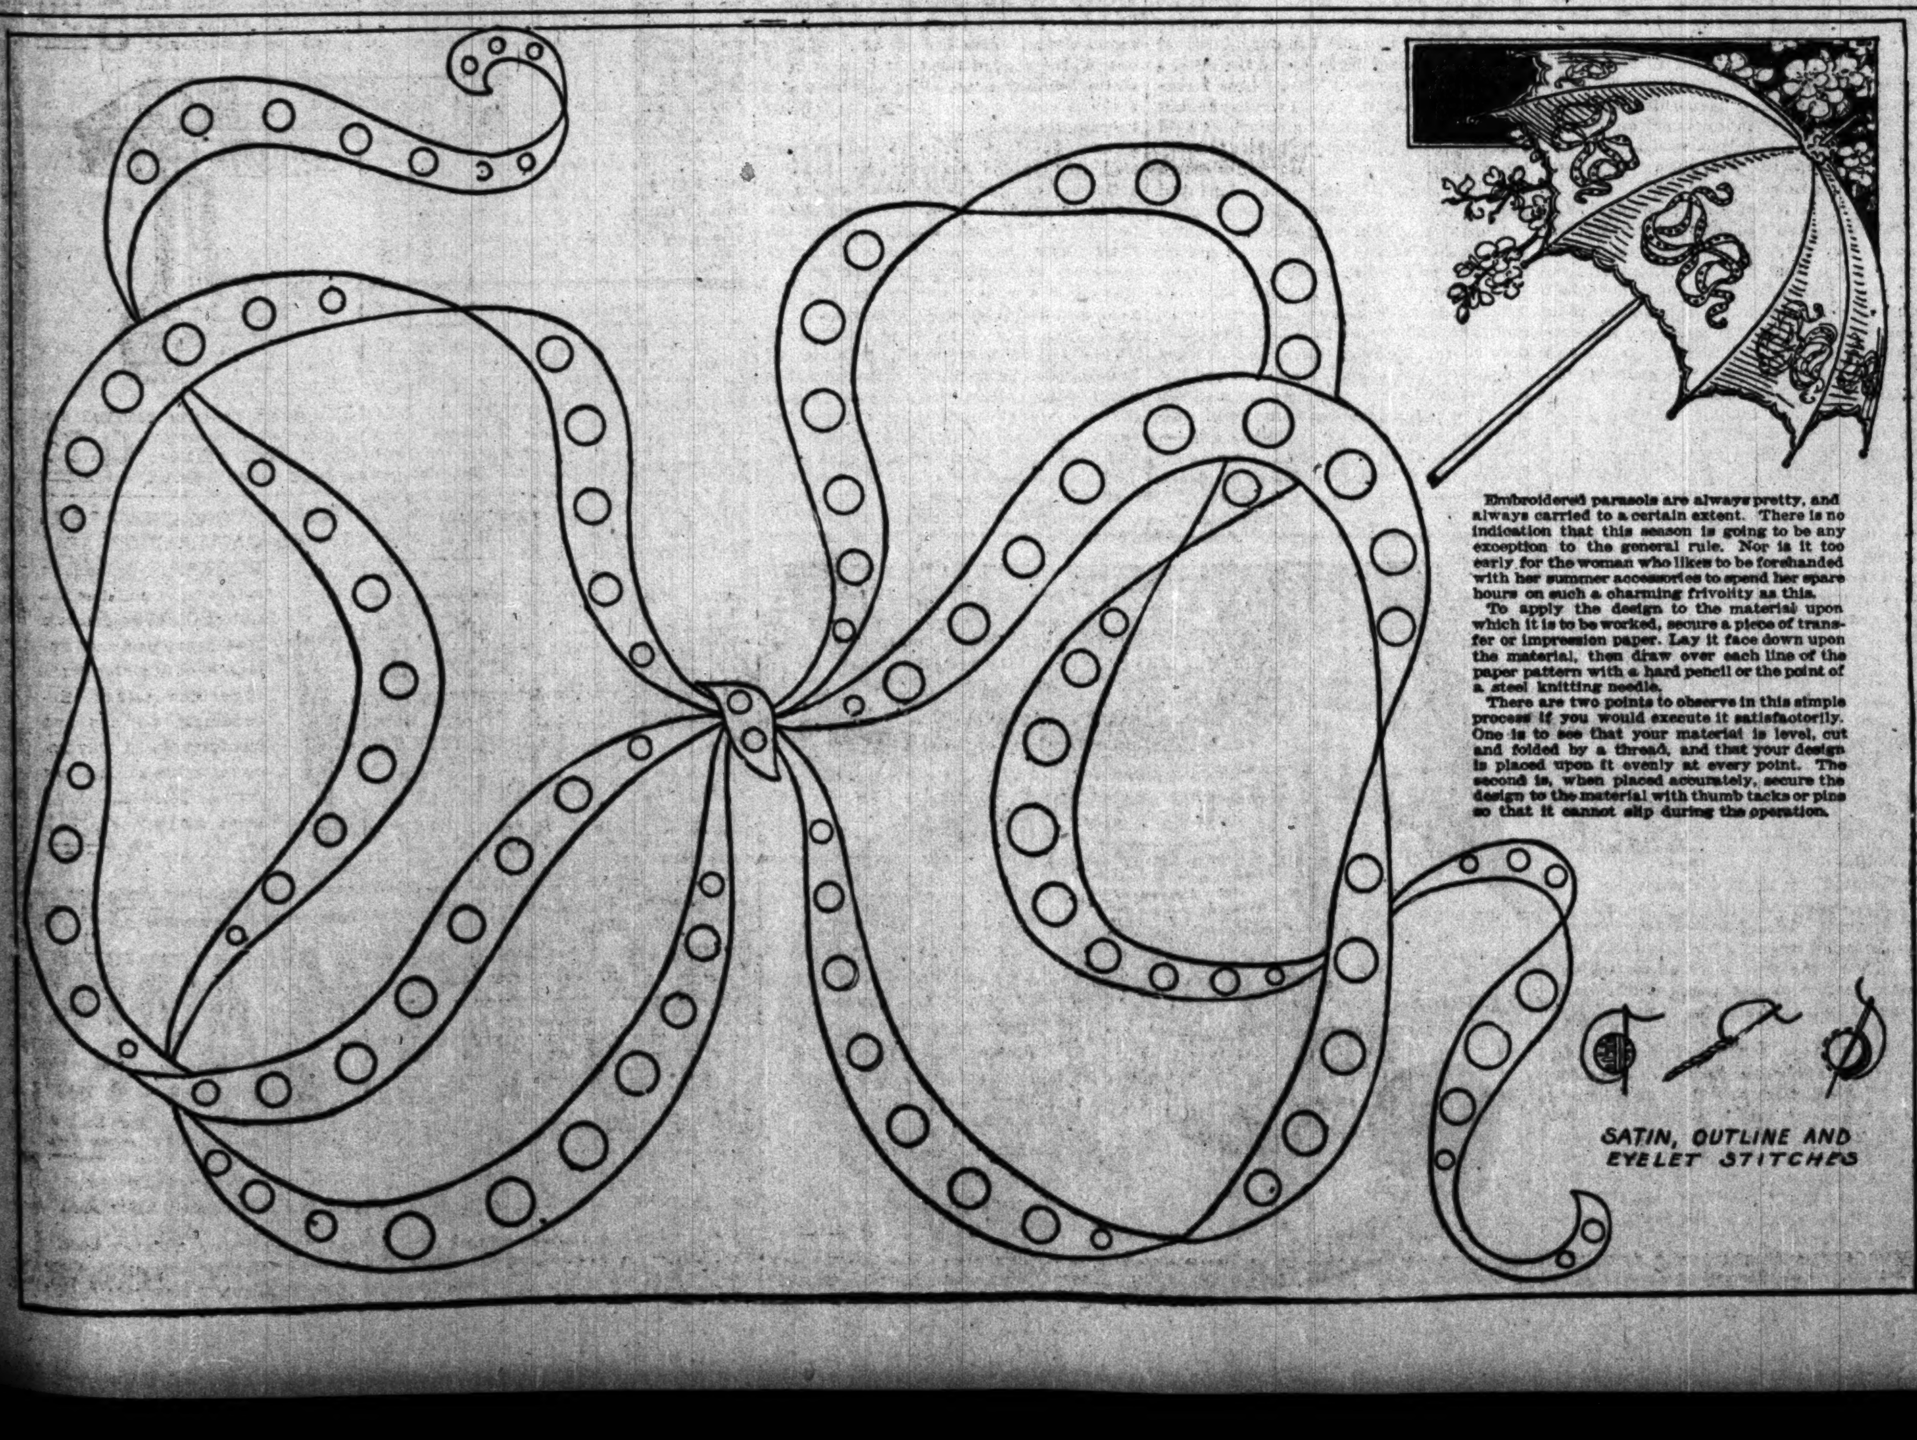
The cotton gabardine, which is offered in a number of handsome colors and is softer than linen and consequently more calculated to adapt itself to the new skirt fullness of spring, is going to be extremely popular. It is of domestic manufacture and launders well, and altogether proves itself satisfactory when thin cotton is not desired.

As for cotton voiles, they are multiplying in almost fabulous fashion. Stripe designs again show themselves in demand and there are pretty border patterned voiles in dainty sprigs or dots with a wide border about the bottom in satin. When this wide satin border is seen on a frock a wide girdle of the same material and shade may be prettily used.

EMBROIDERED PARASOLS FOR SUMMER USE.



Embroidered parasols are always pretty, and always carried to a certain extent. There is no indication that this season is going to be any exception to the general rule. Nor is it too early for the woman who likes to be forehanded with her summer accessories to spend her spare hours on such a charming frivolity as this.

To apply the design to the material upon which it is to be worked, secure a piece of transfer or impression paper. Lay it face down upon the material, then draw over each line of the paper pattern with a hard pencil or the point of a steel knitting needle.

There are two points to observe in this simple process if you would execute it satisfactorily. One is to see that your material is level, cut and folded by a thread, and that your design is placed upon it evenly at every point. The second is, when placed accurately, secure the design to the material with thumb tacks or pins so that it cannot slip during the operation.

The TRIBUNE COOK·BOOK

EDITED BY JANE EDDINGTON

Cut these out and paste them in your scrap book. Cut them out by the single column, as at times the cook book will be printed in two columns and at other times more.

Jane Eddington's articles are printed every day in "The Daily Tribune."

A CORRESPONDENT writes: "Could you spare us a lesson on waffles before the winter is over? Perhaps you have already covered this and I missed it. I have tried dozens of recipes and can produce waffles as substantial as a mattress. My man of wrath would call me blessed if I could make waffles crisp and delicate, to be resolved to nothing at one crunch. I have eaten such elsewhere, but the makers never got farther with the recipe than the 'yellow bowl' stage."

Here is a suggestive letter. There is so much to a recipe besides the cold facts that I would rather be punished severely than to commit myself to any one formula for a concoction of any sort where the element of skill, and chance as well, plays so important a part in the finished product.

As to waffles. A perfectly good batter made according to a perfectly good recipe may be so baked as not to resemble a mattress but a pad. If the iron is not hot enough this may easily happen, while if the iron is too hot, and not well greased, the result presents all sorts of trials. Getting the batter into the pan requires a quick hand. The professional uses a pitcher and pours the batter into the center and lets it flow quickly outward, then he closes his iron gently and turns it within thirty seconds, sometimes.

The waffle batter should be thin, and yet have such lightness that it rises, even as it flows on to the iron. The top part of the iron must be sufficiently hot and closed down before a skin can form over the batter. If it is not, one side will be light and the other heavy. Before opening the irons to grease them, and put on the batter, it is a good plan to turn them so as to have the hottest side for the cover. It is practice and observation alone that will produce the exquisitely light waffle.

The trouble with most of the recipes in the book is that the quantities given make too thick a batter. In practice it is hard to tell how much flour to use, because flours differ. The composition of the waffle is flour wet up to a batter with water or milk or cream, with eggs added. The more eggs whipped lightly, the lighter the waffle, within reason of course, but even with two eggs it is not necessary to use baking powder, if a lot of air is whipped into them.

The model for the waffle is a rather large family of charming French cakes, the "gaufres" and "gaufrettes." These are like compressed meringues in some cases, compressed in the iron or gaufrier, which is sometimes called "le fer à gaufres" (the iron for gaufres), in the same way that we speak of the waffle iron. The gaufrettes may be closely like our waffles, but are usually made mostly of egg, sugar, cream, and a bit of flour. What we used to call champagne wafers are really cream filled gaufrettes.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

Waffles.

An old fashioned American recipe for waffles is the following: Two cups of sifted flour (several siftings and a little drying help), milk enough to make a thin batter or about two cups, about a tablespoon of melted butter, two eggs beaten light, and a little salt. The eggs may be separated and the whites added last. As most of these batters seem to behave better if allowed to stand after mixing, the whites may be saved and whipped and added just before the baking, while the batter made with the rest of the ingredients stands for an hour. Mix the milk with the flour gradually, until a smooth paste, then the salt and melted butter and the yolks of the eggs, with the whites added at the last moment before cooking under any circumstances.

If the batter is not smooth and free running it may be put through a strainer or sieve to make it so. Those inexperienced in beating liquid into flour sometimes cannot get as smooth a batter as they would like. Heat the irons slowly and as hot as a griddle for cakes, and butter them well. A piece of fat on a fork or a greased rag on a stick or some butter or butterine can be used. If butter is used put it in the middle and it will run out to the sides. A new iron especially must be thoroughly greased. The butter should sizzle well and the batter be added before this can burn and discolor the waffles.

The batter should flow to cover the points, then the top put down gently. If the top is hot enough the cake may be left to cook two minutes on one side before turning, or the iron may be turned as soon as the batter is in. Sprinkle sugar over waffles as soon as cooked.

Waffles are made with all sorts of griddle cake batters. The difference is in the baking. Rightly baked they are puffy and light and crisp, wrongly baked the best batter will be heavy. At the best they impose a heavy task on the digestion, and at the worst!

French Waffles.

It would be hard to fail with the following recipe for "gaufres royales." It has been translated, adapted from a cook book of one of the royal pastry makers of Brussels, Belgium, which contains nine recipes for gaufres and six for gaufrettes. The latter are true sweet cakes, while the former may be sweetened and flavored or used as waffles are.

The following recipe has been tried once with the waffle iron making heart shaped cakes, and the result was certainly good enough for a valentine party: Sift one cup of flour at least twice with one tablespoon or less of powdered sugar. Separate four eggs, beat whites and yolks separately, and add the yolks with from half a cup to three-quarters of a cup of cream to the flour and mix thoroughly. When smooth add one-quarter of a pound of melted butter, or a good deal less would answer, and finally fold in the beaten whites of egg. If you want these for a dessert, flavor them with vanilla—a scant teaspoon. If the batter is not thin enough to run rather quickly, thin with more cream.

Another French cook book says, about cooking gaufres: "A little practice teaches the degree of heat and time." About two minutes to a side is sufficient when the iron has the right heat.

The recipe preceding this in the book from which it was taken had the title "Gaufres de Bruxelles," and was just like this one, except that milk was used instead of cream. The final directions are: Powder with sugar and serve on a hot plate.

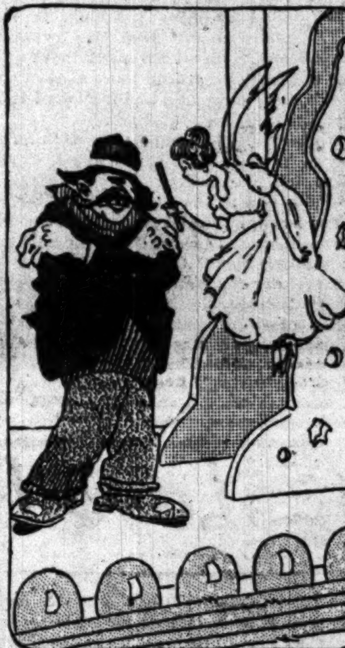
Fairy Failed to Flit.

A few years ago I was in a little spectacular play. As I am very slight and small I was chosen to play the part of a fairy, to be suspended on invisible wires. In the second scene, where the "bad man" is storming around, I was supposed to float lightly about and touch him with my wand, disappearing above almost immediately.



At length the scene took place and he cried dramatically: "What is this light touch upon my cheek, as though an angel's wing brushed by? I see nothing." At that moment the pulleys refused to work, I failed to flit, and instead I hung suspended in air before his very nose.

"Booed" Too Soon.

One day, hearing a rap at the door and thinking it was my husband playing a joke on me, I said, "Come in." Another rap and I thought: "Well, sir, if you think you can fool me, I'll just scare you a little." So, gently I tiptoed to the door, thrust out my head and cried: "Boo! you little devil, I know who you are." Picture my embarrassment on seeing the new minister instead of my husband.

Here's My Biscuit, Sir.

The most embarrassing moment of my life occurred shortly after my marriage. My wife thought she could make biscuits, and every time she served them I managed to swallow one, and, fearing to say anything that might hurt her feelings, surreptitiously thrust the others into my coat pocket. Just the other day I met a man, a dignified man, on whom I wished to make an impression, and you can picture my embarrassment when I handed him, not my card, but a biscuit!

Thought Her Thirsty.

I am a very young married woman. I had been downtown shopping and on the way to take the elevated I noticed my bag open and the little coin purse gone. I was frantic. I had no money to get home on and knew no one I could ask for carfare. And even though I lived five miles away, I decided to walk. After walking about two miles in a strong wind a fine rain started. I was a miserable, forlorn looking object, with my hair blowing in my face and my wet plumes. Well, I finally decided to ask some one for a nickel, and seeing a big, good natured looking policeman, I presented my bedraggled looking person before him and told him how I had lost my purse and wanted a nickel to get home on. He looked at me and in the most sarcastic voice said: "Gee, kid, are you that thirsty?"

TO BOB, or NOT TO BOB: —THE LATEST WOMAN'S QUESTION.

by LILLIAN RUSSELL

[Copyright: 1915: By Lillian Russell.]

IS IT true that woman—lovely woman, fickle woman—after years (maybe eighteen, twenty, thirty, forty, or fifty) of cultivating a luxuriant and shining crown of glory will in a moment of fashion hysteria take shears in hand and with one swift clip separate her from her most adorable badge of loveliness?

Will this will o' the wisp of fashion leave America shortly confronting an army of female "bobbies" instead of the fascinating bits of charmingly coifed femininity we have with us today?

This is the live woman question of the hour!

All because one day a few short weeks ago a little dancer with a reputation national and whims most tempermental and not much hair to lose snipped off her hair and strutted down Fifth avenue.

Every woman who passed her—young women and matrons, fat women and lean, plain faced and uglier ones, block headed women and ape headed women—nursed tender visions of looking "just like that." A few of them waited not for a sober second judgment. They dived directly into the first barber shop and emerged with silken tresses in their hands and a new world to conquer.

Fortunate, indeed, for the few if they were unusually pretty, young, chic, and slim, with a personality that fits and a naive insouciance that fascinates no matter what the style adopted! For this is the only type of girl for whom the cropped coiffeur is possible. And even she may live to rue it. For hair does not grow overnight. And tomorrow's fashions are never today's. And nothing is more unruly and unattractive than half grown hair.

For general adoption the "bobbed" coiffeur is a fashion to be cried down as vigorously as trouser skirts.

Imagine a Juno of six feet or nearly, or a short woman of 200 "obese pounds" adopting this boyish coif! They'll do it—if the style is popularized! 'Tis the way of womankind to follow no matter what the prank that fashions plays with them.

I am glad to learn that Chicago women have not succumbed to this irresponsible coiffeur to any great extent. I was told by one of the most prominent hairdressers here that the actual clipping off of the hair has been done only in a limited number of cases—and those mainly professional dancers or theatrical folks.

JANE BARTON The Home Dressmaker

Separate Waists for Spring.

THE first spring sewing on which the home dressmaker should start is to make herself most of the separate waists she will need during the coming season. These are as popular as ever for utility as well as more formal use, and the girl who has a generous supply and some well cut skirts will look well dressed for all daytime occasions.

The new waists are quite different from those of last summer. They are more tailored, the sleeves are usually long, tucks are revived, and the collars are trimmer.

The earlier models emphasize the high collar effect introduced this winter, but it is doubtful if American women will stand for them when the hot weather approaches. The open neck not only is more comfortable, but it improves the shape of the throat. There is a compromise collar that can be worn buttoned close to the throat or turned into shallow V and revers. This is an excellent choice for the sport waists that are used for exercise.

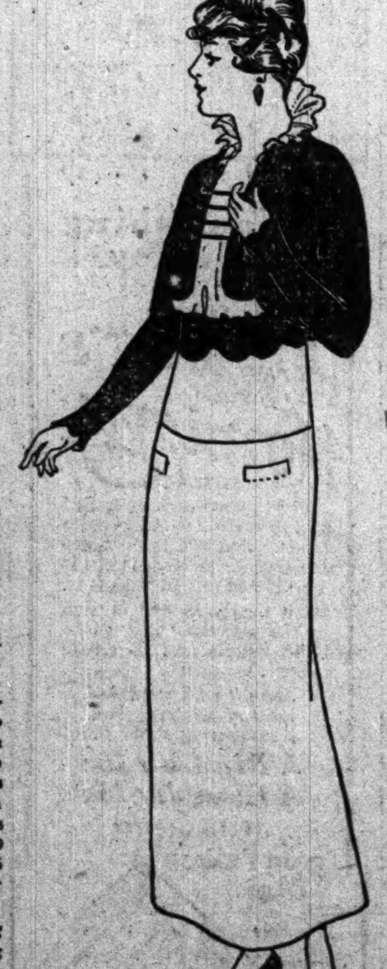
When the neck is cut open it is in a much more shallow and narrow V than last summer, and the collars fit closer to the back of the neck. Another method is to have the high soft collar of the material buttoned to a collar band not more than a quarter inch deep. For hot weather this permits the neck being turned into a V to which are pinned soft turndown collars.

Another feature of the new blouses is the shoulder yoke. Generally this is from three to five inches wide, but sometimes it extends across the back and is brought two inches in front of the ordinary shoulder seam.

Machine hemstitching is in as great vogue as ever. It is especially good on the dressier silk and crêpe blouses and on sheer chiffon, handkerchief linen and batiste. This gives a professional look to the waist, and the extra cost is less than for other trimmings. Another advantage is that much sewing is dispensed with, as careful basting is the only preparation needed. Prices differ for different places and materials, but the usual cost is 10 cents a yard for all cotton materials, 15 cents for silks and crêpes, and 18 cents for chiffons, net and tulle.

In preparing a blouse for hemstitching baste all seams as if to sew by hand, using rather closer stitches. Do not press open the seams. This is done for all regular seams and for yokes. For the armholes and cuffs leave the seams open or the work cannot be done. For the large armhole, however, this is unnecessary. Hems are turned twice as if for ordinary stitching, but are basted rather more closely.

When the material is gathered to the yoke, as is popular this spring, it is safer to stitch the [illegible] first on the machine [illegible] after the hemstitching is finished the seam is cut as close to the stitching as the material permits. A loosely woven fabric that frays easily must not be trimmed too close.



A blouse with one of the peplum belt at the waist line. The belt and the jacket are of Rocky mountain blue taffetas, with the sheerest organdy forming the under vest. The skirt is of serge of the same shade, with yoke and pockets.

Olive Oil and Afternoon Nap.

I gained twenty-five pounds in two months by taking a tablespoon of olive oil after meals and just before retiring. I also managed to sleep eight hours out of every twenty-four and an hour's nap afternoons. I also feel better in every way since taking the olive oil, so it acted as a medicine as well as making me plumper. M. S.

"For the most of us women dressing within our incomes is like dressing in an upper berth."

When Walking.

"Dear Miss Blake: When out walking in the evening with a gentleman friend is it proper for the lady to take the gentleman's arm or the gentleman to take the lady's arm? JERUSHA JANE."

There is no necessity for walking arm in arm. The man should help the woman across the street and give his aid whenever there is an obstacle in the path, but he should not take her arm continuously nor should she take his.

She Is 3 Years His Senior.

"Dear Miss Blake: Do you think it would make any difference if the woman was 24 and the man 21 and they wished to marry? We love each other dearly. Would you give your reasons, please? Does the course of true love run smooth? "E. F. H."

If you truly love each other it won't make any difference in your happiness. The trouble with most marriages where the woman is the older is that she grows old before the man does. It is natural for a woman to be a little older in her actions than a man of the same age. She has the responsibility of the home upon her shoulders. If there is true love in the hearts of both the man and the woman, though, they won't let the few years' difference in their ages make them grow apart.

Married Men and Autos.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am the only stenographer in a rather large department store and am known to the buyers. I live quite a distance from the store and am obliged to take the car to work. On two mornings of the week one of the buyers goes downtown in his machine, and if he sees me while I am waiting for the car he always asks me to ride to work with him. He is married and I am single, and therefore I am in doubt as to whether it is proper for me to do so. He has always been very kind to me and several times I have ridden over with him, but I don't want to lose my reputation just for the sake of an auto ride. F. R. B."

It is most unwise for a girl like you to put yourself in a position that would jeopardize you, such as riding frequently with this married man. When a girl works she has to be doubly careful in her attitude toward men, and toward married men particularly. The world's tongue is not kind. You can't afford to set it wagging about you. Tell the man this, if need be, and he will respect you a hundred-fold more for your moral courage.

Who Gets the Money.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been reading the love letters printed in the paper and am quite interested in them. I also noticed the statement that THE TRIBUNE will pay $5 for any interesting love letter printed. Does that mean they will pay you $5 for having them printed or me $5 for sending them? I have several love letters in my possession and will send them to you if you will answer my question. I think they will interest any one who reads them. Write, if you can, and tell me about the letter, will you, please. "N. D."

The $5 is paid to the senders of the love letters that are published in THE TRIBUNE. I shall be glad to receive and consider for publication the love letters you have in your possession.

Marion Harland's Helping Hand

By Marion Harland

Marion Harland's Helping Hand Corner appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I DO not know to whom to direct this letter, but I send it to the Corner and hope it may be put in the right place. I am an invalid and have not walked a step in twelve years. I can't even stand alone, for I am drawn and crippled by rheumatism. I am a poor widow, my husband having been dead eight years. I saw in the paper that some one offered to send any shut-in a piece of embroidery for working and I do wish it might be give to me! If I could choose the stitch to work I would prefer the solid stitch and I would be glad of anything of the kind any one would send me. I cannot get out except when some one rolls me out in a chair. I can take a turn in a rolling chair in good weather, but in the winter I can't get out at all because I suffer so badly from the cold and from rheumatism. "MRS. L. E. B."

This seems to me a touching letter, but then I always feel deeply the sadness of the old and lonely. When the young are solitary they can always cheer themselves with the hope that "life and love will soon come by," but that is over for the old and the promise of the joys of the world to come are not always sufficient to offset sorrow and suffering here. The spirit may be willing, but the flesh and the heart are often weak. I wish I could recall who it was that promised the piece of embroidery to the shut-in, or that our correspondent had thought to send the signature appended to the offer. As it is, I hope that the kind friend with a thought for the lonely invalids who wish employment for their fingers may see this letter, or that some one else may be moved to vouchsafe a similar kindness. Mrs. L. E. B. does not ask for cheering letters, but I am sure she would be glad to receive them or to get an occasional picture post card or something of the sort as well as the embroidery pattern and materials. I shall be glad to give her address to any one who wishes to undertake to bring a gleam of brightness into her life during the long winter days when she cannot leave the house or get a glimpse of the outside world except through a window.

Wants an Ear Trumpet.

"I notice that B. L. M. has two ear trumpets to give away. Will you please ask her to send me one for mother? She is old and needs one very much and we don't feel able to buy one. A. G."

Unfortunately, the ear trumpets had been given away before this letter was received. Ear trumpets are always in demand, and I am happy to say they are frequently offered. Has not some Cornerite one that is no longer needed to pass on to this applicant?

Other Copies Supplied.

"I will send copies of 'The Cold Chilly Winds of December' at any time the old song is requested by the Cornerites or, if you wish, I will send you several copies and you may dispose of them as you desire. The song has been a favorite of mine ever since my early childhood. My mother played and sang it for me often. I especially wanted it when I was ill, strange as this may seem! E. A. S."

The address you ask for was sent by mail and I put your offer of further copies of the song here that others who wish it may write to me for your name. This is better than sending the copies of the song to me. My correspondence is so large that I like to avoid any complications I can in the way of being made a medium for forwarding songs, pieces, etc.

Suggestions for Washing Flannels.

"The following suggestion for washing flannels may be of help to some housekeepers: Prepare two waters of the same temperature, warm, but not hot. Make of one water a good lather with any good white laundry soap. The second water make slightly soapy. Wash the flannels thoroughly through the first water, squeeze but do not wring them, then rinse well through the second water. Lift the articles from the water and hang them up in the sun and air, dripping wet. In bad weather I stretch a line across the bath tub and hang the flannels, also other woolens, blankets, bath robes, etc. I have followed this course for the last year and find it to be the only way. N. C. A."

This will interest us all. The idea of hanging the flannels out dripping wet is novel to me, although I knew, of course, that they must be rinsed in water of the same temperature as that in which they had their first washing and that they must be squeezed, never wrung. I wonder just what is the philosophy of omitting this squeezing. Can any one tell me?

ETIQUETTE by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

GOOD manners have so much to do with everyday existence they are the oil that keeps life's hinges from creaking too loud, so that one wonders that we practical Americans, with all our many inventions for making everything more convenient, don't make more of a point of cultivating and insisting on good manners.

A cheerful good morning to each member of your family, to the maid, if you have one, who serves your breakfast, a friendly nod to the elevator boy in your office building, will evoke an answering cordiality and good will which will unconsciously flavor the whole day.

Street car conductors have more opportunity for spreading sunshine than any other class of men. A good natured, courteous conductor can directly affect the spirits of hundreds of people a day if he has the will to do so, sending each passenger on his unknown way with a warmer sense of the brotherhood of man. But each one of us can do this to a less extended circle if we will. The best bred people are usually the best mannered.

VIOLET S.: I would not do it, if I were you, on the occasion of a first call. If, however, your visitor is a more or less intimate friend it is not out of the way to serve light refreshments—especially if you have been playing cards or pursuing some other form of recreation together.

Love Letters

Optimism in Bohemia.

Submitted by E. McC., Peru, Ind.:

"Dearest Harriet: I am happy tonight, darling, as happy as I can be, considering the 2,000 (or is it 3,000, it seems a million?) miles that separate me from your presence. For today, O happy mortal, I sold a sketch to a publisher, sold it for the magnificent sum of $10. And in spite of his I-am-helping-a-poor-artist expression I cannot help but believe the sketch was not unworthy.

"So presently my fellow artist, M. Louvon, and I are going out to dine; even now, in his 'apartments' below, he is bawling out the 'Marseillaise' right lustily, whether in anticipation or not I cannot tell. It might well be, though, for I am sure the poor fellow has dined on nothing more substantial than bread and bananas for the last three days.

"Never have I seen so much ambition, abject poverty, and hopefulness gathered together in one place. Illustrators, reviewers, artists, writers, and poets infest this district about Soho square, to a degree that shocks the staid and respectable Londoner, accustomed as he has been to this sort of thing for generations. And they say Bohemia is no more.

"Ah, our dear landlord has put a stop to the sweet warblings of mon ami Edourd; an unappreciative brute, who reviles us, freezes us, and accepts our rent money with splendid impartiality.

"How I wish that you could walk with me through Chelsea, past the house where Rossetti lived for so many years, past the coffee stalls, and the blessed book stalls, where so many read but so few purchase. Always one hesitates between the desire for a dilapidated volume and the necessity for a meal.

"But M. Louvon grows impatient and I must go. You will not become tired waiting for me? Already I can feel the faint breath of success.

"Good night, sweetheart. J."

Would Memories of Bygone Days Rebuild Your Shattered Romance?

Submitted by O. H., Chicago:

"My Dear Husband: I wrote you on Wednesday night—but that letter is torn into a thousand tiny pieces, and I sit here shaken to the very soul of me when I think how much the accident of chance has to do with the shaping of human destinies.

"But I'll begin at the beginning. When I left home to come to Chicago to meet Beatrice I decided that I wasn't coming back to you. It seemed to me that to live on in the atmosphere of discord you and I have been living in for two years was soul destroying. There was nothing to be gained—no spiritual areas opened. I was going to do what was far harder to me than to remain with you—leave you for the good of us both. I could not tell you, for I would have broken down utterly.

"When I arrived I found a telegram from Beatrice that she would arrive a day later than she had expected. All day I thought things over, and that night I wrote my letter telling you that the parting of the ways had come. But I did not mail it then, for a flood of memories swept over me. I remembered twenty years ago, when you and I came to this hotel on our wedding trip. Patti was singing here and you tried so hard to get tickets so I could say I'd heard Patti—but you couldn't get any. And we sat in front of the grate fire in the parlor—I sat before it last night—and dreamed dreams of our future life together. That day we found we had spent all our money and were panic stricken (because we were just 20 and 21), and you had to wire home for money.

"O, Rodney, dear, I thought my heart would break as I recalled our youth and the dear, sweet memories of our maturer years, and the griefs and trials we have borne so bravely together. What has come over us both that we have changed so? Is it that you and I in our individual soul development have found the other a blighting influence? That's how I reasoned it out, anyway, and I wrote you, but for the sake of these old memories I held the letter over till morning before mailing it. And then Beatrice came, and almost the first thing she said—she who loved you, too, and whom you almost chose—"And is Rodney the same dear, faithful lover of old?" And I just couldn't shatter her faith, so I lied and said yes.

This morning I said I would mail that letter at last. But—your letter came an hour ago, and the world is a shining place once more. You say that even this brief separation has opened your eyes and life isn't worth living with me gone, and you want me to hurry up and come home, and we're going to be as we used to be, and——

"O, that's why the letter I wrote on Wednesday is torn in a thousand pieces. I'll leave tonight for home. Lovingly, "VIRGINIA."

HOME WORKERS' BLUE LIST.

NORTH, EAST, SOUTH, WEST.

"Am I too far away to earn money at home?" is an oft-repeated question. Briefly answered, NO. WHEREVER you may live and WHATEVER you can do, take heart and join the several housand Home Workers who have "found themselves" through this advertising medium. Here are a few from the four points of the compass who will speak for themselves.

Not long ago a wideawake southern woman from Fort Bliss, Texas, advertised the ever-in-demand "dainty dresses for baby," and she received very satisfactory orders from as many localities. At Ishpeming, Michigan, lives a Tribune Home Worker who has been very successful selling lace trimmed undergarments; she writes, "Every time I advertise, orders come on every mail and for weeks afterwards." Even out west in Colorado crocheted yokes brought excellent returns to the advertiser who lived there. Biddeford, Maine, must end this short mental trip, but the stops that could be made within these four points are innumerable. It must be added, however, that Chicago women number their customers both in and out of "the states," so that it is always wise to include a street address in your advertisement unless seeking only local trade.

For further information regarding advertising in this department call or write Room 534 Tribune Building, The Home Workers' Blue List, care of The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

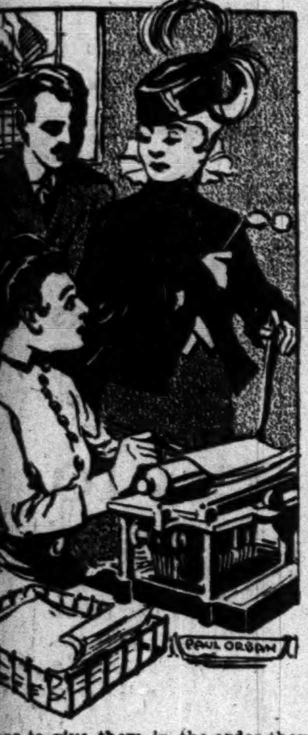
Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

How to Ask for a Position.

So many girls are self-conscious about writing letters of application and worry so much about the matter that they make it a difficult task for themselves. They spend hours trying to compose letters that they think will make a favorable impression on a prospective employer and write reams for fear they will overlook some particularly good point about themselves that is all important.

A man who is at the head of the employment department of a large concern gives several rules which he says would simplify matters for the employer if applicants would follow when answering an advertisement.

In the first place, he thinks letters should be written with pen and ink unless the position is purely stenographic, and then the typewriter may be used. In the second place, the applicant should note the information the advertisement asks for and then give it clearly and briefly. It is a good idea when answering questions to give them in the order they are asked. This is not absolutely essential, but some business men prefer that form. If she has one, it is well for a girl to give a telephone number, so that if necessary the applicant can be reached in a hurry.



Perfumed note paper should never be used, as most men abhor it.

The following letter, I think, is an example of a good form to use in answering an advertisement which reads: "State age, experience, and amount of salary expected."

"Gentlemen: In answer to your advertisement in today's TRIBUNE I wish to state that I am 20 years old, and for the last three years have worked for a publishing concern doing clerical work and acting as switchboard operator. In my last position I received $10 a week, and would expect to start in a new position at the same salary. I can give references from my former employer. I should be pleased to be granted an interview."

The writer of a letter like the foregoing would, I think, receive an answer asking her to call. The letter gives the necessary information, and the man who receives it will be impressed by its businesslike form.

It is only the high salaried, important positions that demand long, detailed letters of application.

Here is a letter from a stenographer, who writes of a rather uncommon annoyance:

"Dear Miss King: O how relieved I feel at this moment to know that I can work the rest of the day in peace! Why? Because my employer has gone home with his wife, who came downtown today to help (?) him in the office. She is of the opinion that her service is invaluable to his success in business. She is a very sweet dear woman, very kind, but most inconsiderate of those whom she believes below her. I liked her very much from seeing her call on him in the office. But when she decided to come down every day of the week I began to feel that I had two bosses. Well, I studied stenography, and my employer tells me I get along fine in everything I do in the office. I have worked for him four months now and believe that I could show Mrs. B. a thing or two about matters here. Yet she wants to dictate her own peculiar ideas to me. It is a joke sometimes, and again I have to summon a great deal of courage to realize the humor of it at all.

"I get along famously with Mr. B., but he himself feels that there is something in the air when his wife is around. She questions my every act, and I believe she wonders why he has given me permission to do certain things. Whenever she is here she is of the opinion that things cannot get along without her finger in the pie too. Her curiosity embarrasses her husband intensely at times.

"I think a woman should be able to distinguish between interest in her husband's business and curiosity. The way some wives act is unfair to their husbands' employés.

"Kindly understand the spirit in which I write this.

"Thanks for your good articles. Without Sunday's TRIBUNE the day would be no day of rest.

"ANTI-WIFE OFFICE HELPER."

It is hard to say who is more deserving of sympathy, you or your employer. Certainly the interfering wife must be a severe trial to you both. It is strange that a business man would tolerate such interference from his wife, but maybe he feels that he cannot ask her to let him run his business without her help for fear of hurting her feelings.

It seems to me he could keep her out of the office by using diplomacy. He might suggest that it worries him to have her bothering her head about his business affairs when she has household matters to take care of, and that he is afraid she might overtax her strength trying to carry so many responsibilities.

If this does not occur to the man himself, though, there is not much that you can do, as you could not well call his attention to the fact that his wife is a perfect nuisance.

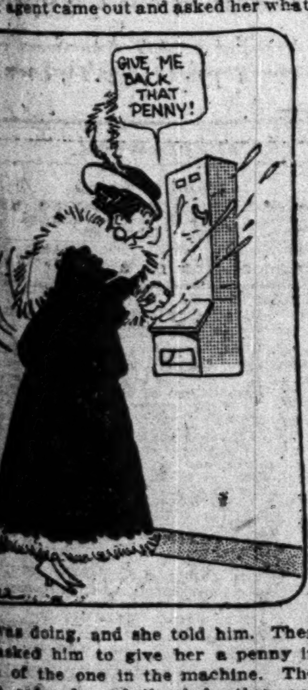
Seriously, it is a pity that you have to tolerate such an annoyance, but if you want to keep the position the only thing you can do is to refuse to let your employer's wife bother you. Try to think only of the humorous side of it and console yourself with the thought that you do not have to put up with the woman's interference all the time, as your employer does.

Do You Know a Tightwad?

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on the subject of "The Greatest Tightwad I Ever Knew." Address your letters to the Editor of the Tightwad Contest, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Write on only one side of the paper. No manuscripts will be returned.

"Beat Up" Gum Machine.

A well-to-do lady of our city dropped a penny in a gum slot machine in the Illinois Central depot here, expecting to get a stick of gum; but the slot machine was empty, and no gum was forthcoming. The lady pounded on the machine, and attracted so much attention that the ticket agent came out and asked her what she was doing, and she told him. Then she asked him to give her a penny in place of the one in the machine. The agent refused, and the lady then appealed to the policeman, and he told her he could do nothing, so she finally decided to write to the gum company and ask them to send her either a stick of gum or her penny. MISS E. L.



GIVE ME BACK THAT PENNY!

Nothing Small About Her.

A woman came in the drug store and asked the clerk for two bottles of perfume. She added that maybe she would want to bring them back. "You see," she explained, "they are for prizes at my party and mother and I nearly always win the prize, and if we do, I shall want to return them for the money." H. B.

Begrudged the Grasshoppers.

The greatest tightwad I ever knew was an old captain of the civil war. He would sit on his front porch in the summertime with a continual grouch because, he said, his neighbor's chickens were eating his grasshoppers. MRS. B. J. P.

Charged he Pallbearers.

The greatest tightwad I ever knew was a wealthy man who lived in Iowa. His wife died and some of the men who were to act as pallbearers came from a distance and were obliged to eat a meal with him. He later charged them 25 cents for the meal. G. S.

The Queerest Boss I Ever Worked For.

"The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for each letter published on the subject of "The Queerest Man I Ever Worked For." Address letters to Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

His Office a Beauty Parlor.

He was of the Beau Brummel type, polite and fastidious, and spent hours in his private office dolling up, massaging and beautifying his complexion. He had a swarthy skin, possibly of Mexican or Spanish descent, although it was rumored that he had colored blood in him and was trying to bleach his skin white. To accomplish this he kept a small dish containing vinegar or some acid in which he soaked copper pennies for a number of days, then used the solution to make himself as fair as a lily, but we were never able to notice any difference. J. M. C.

He Had Cold Feet.

The boss was an old man who had a habit of taking off his shoes and socks and putting his feet in a basin of hot water before he sent for me. While dictating to me he frequently asked me to get more hot water from the faucet. As I always got a good salary, I did not mind this. E. G.

The Message of the Rummage Sale

I AM your friend, "The Rummage Sale." For years I have come to you in these semi-annual visits, leaving a trail of money-savings wherever I went. I have been the friend of women who needed wearing apparel, or hosiery, or underwear, or yard goods, or notions, or curtains—I have been the friend of men who needed clothing, or shirts, or ties, or sox—I have been the friend of children who needed dresses, or shoes, or hats. I have been an important factor in making Chicago families happy by enjoying these great economies. Every year I have been growing better. This year I will be at my best, for The Fair has ransacked every nook and cranny of their store to find Rummage bargains. I will be here Tuesday, February 9th, in the Bargain Basement of The Fair. I will be fully announced in tomorrow's evening papers. So, in your buying and planning, think of me and wait for me. EFFECT OF THE WAR UPON IMMIGRATION TO THE UNITED STATES.

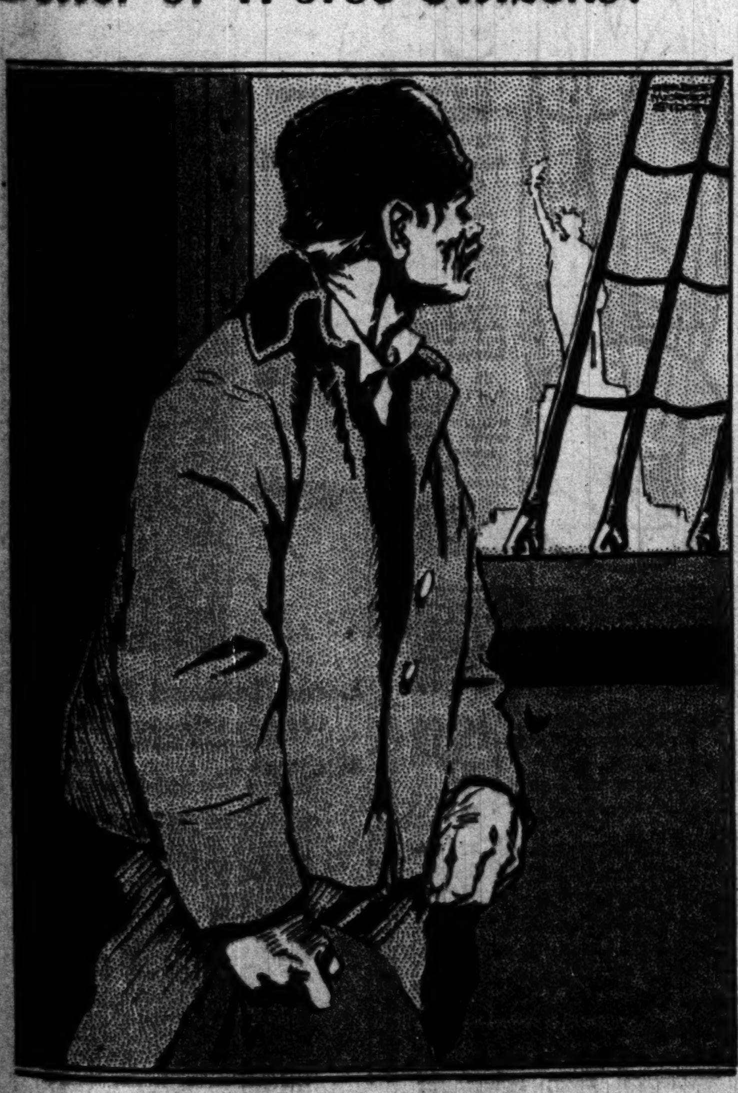
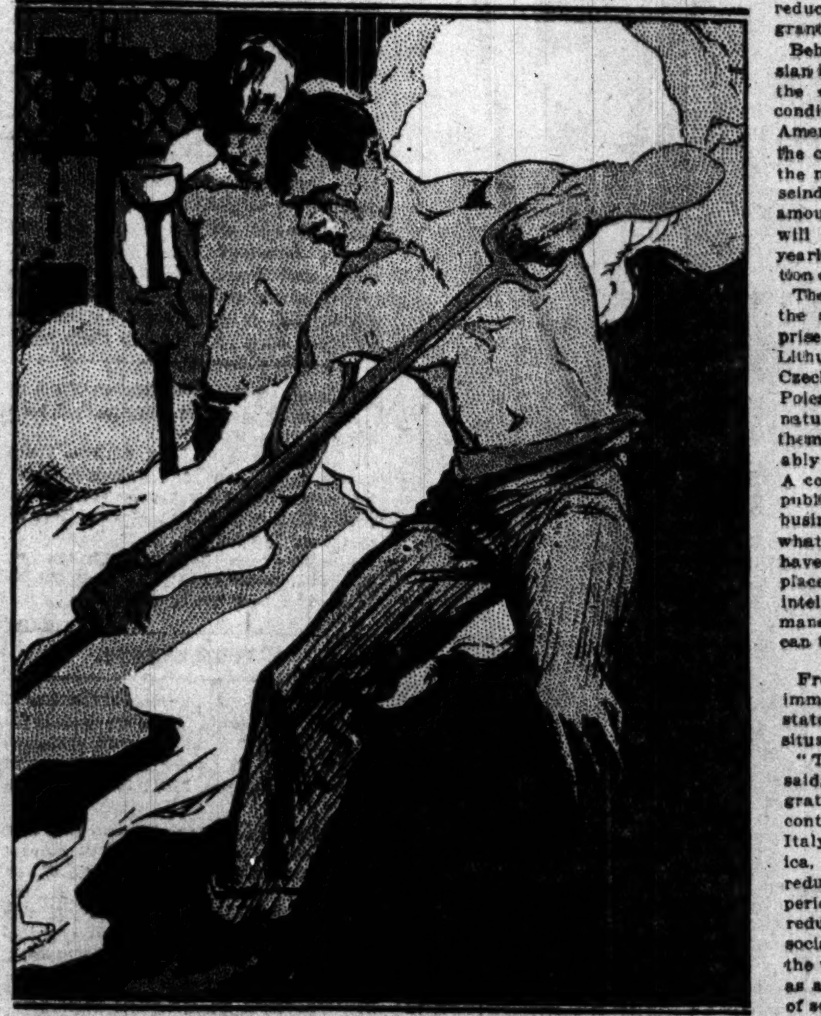
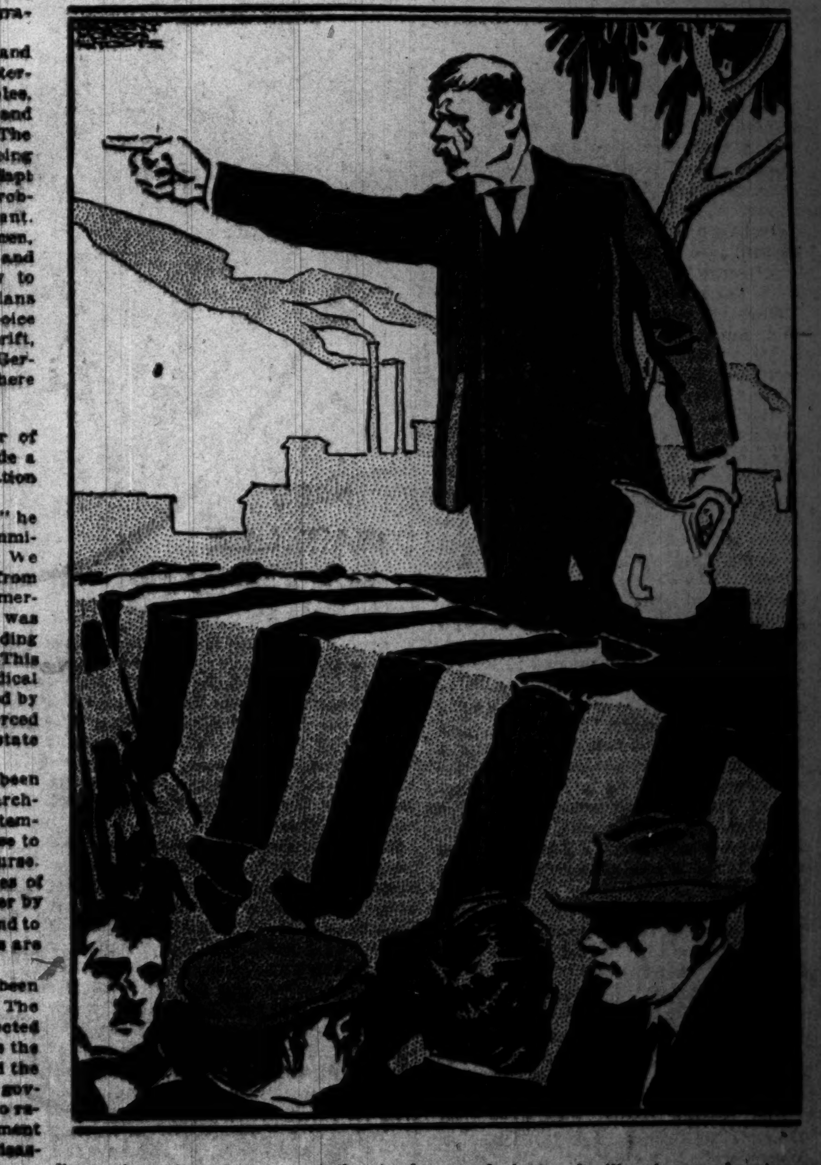
Will the Change Caused by the War in the Type of Immigrants Bring the U. S. Better or Worse Citizens?

Problems Employers Will Face; Story the Recorder's Office Tells About the Foreign Element in Chicago.







By Burton Rascoe.

REPORTS from the immigration officials in Washington show that the vast, nondescript, leaderless army of 1,300,000 men, women, and children from all parts of Europe which annually invades the United States has decreased nearly 80 per cent since the middle of August.

This is the preliminary effect of the war upon American immigration. The ultimate effect, stretching over several generations during the period of reconstruction in the war stricken countries, will afford an interesting, and probably difficult problem for the employers of unskilled labor in the United States.

The factors to be considered in the problem are these:

The war stricken countries, after the war is over, will offer special inducements to keep their citizens at home.

Economic conditions are ultimately to be bettered in the stricken countries owing to the enormous amount of work that will have to be done and the decrease in the number of employable men.

Russia already has granted concessions to the Poles and Jews with an aim to insure their support and to prevent their emigration. Since emigration from European countries has depended almost as much upon social and religious reasons as upon economic causes, it is believed that these former reasons for emigration will be lessened if not done away with.

The European countries, because of the loss of men, will be in need of unskilled and skilled men from the United States, a need that will be supplied at a cost of labor to American capitalists, but to the advantage of the United States in lessening the army of unemployed.

The class or types of immigrants will be radically changed, to what effect it is hard yet to estimate. Certain it is that the proportion of German, Polish, Bohemian, Austrian, Slovenian, Belgian, Russian, and French immigrants will be less in comparison with the Italian, Sicilian, Scandinavian, Dutch, Irish, Portuguese, and oriental. The question involved here for the employers is: Will the new types make as valuable laborers as the types prevalent before the war? For the American citizen it will be: Will the new types develop as valuable a citizenry?

An immediate effect will be felt in Chicago, a cosmopolitan city, where one may walk from Italy into Greece, thence into Turkey, and by taxi or street car visit Sweden, Germany, Poland, Hungary, and a score of other nations in miniature.

To illustrate the significance of immigration in its relation to Chicago the following statistics may be more pointed than dull:

On a Monday—a dull day, by the way, in the marriage license bureau—of a total of thirty-eight marriage licenses issued from the county building in Chicago, nearly half of the contracting parties were Slavs, with Poles the predominating strain of the race.

The classification, which is not exceptional, but generally obtaining, was as follows:

Poles (and other Slavic branches)	16
German	6
French	5
Swedish	3
Italian	3
Irish	3
Antecedents born in United States	2
Total	38

The Italian proportion as a rule is higher than the above, ranking usually next to the German and Swedish, but the other proportions are almost daily maintained.

The county recorder's office is the source of more interesting facts. That the list of burial permits issued at the county building is radically opposite in the proportions given above is significant. The greater number of the deaths are of persons whose antecedents were born in the United States.

The Italian death rate, largely of babies, is high; but the birth rate of the Italians outstrips any foreign element in the city. The fecundity of the Poles and Bohemians ranks them next to the Italians, although the number of burial permits for persons of Polish or Bohemian descent is not alarming.

From these statistics it will be seen that in Chicago, at least, the Poles maintain a birth rate out of proportion to the death rate, and that if marrying is indicative of conformity to community morals, they are a creditable type of citizens.

The recorder's office further substantiates the last statement if the acquisition of property is a sign of a thrifty, intelligent, and otherwise desirable people. From one day recently the nationality of individuals who acquired property, as shown by the list of real estate transfers was as follows:

Poles (and allied Slavic branches)	26
German	17
Antecedents born in United States	15
Swedish	10
French	10
Irish	9
Jewish	8
Italian	5
Others	4

By way of citing the relative proportion, these figures of the real estate transfers listed at another date in the same week are given:

Poles	20
Swedes	10
Jews	8
French	8
Irish	6
Italian	4
Others	5

A casual glance over the list of building permits printed in THE TRIBUNE will show that generally Polish, German, and Swedish names appear more frequently than others.

The war for a generation or two hence will change this situation, according to the immigration authorities. The probable independence of Poland and the almost inevitable lessening of the economic, social, and religious pressure which has caused Polish emigration in Europe will reduce the proportion of Polish immigrants into the United States.

Behind the German, French, and Russian immigration, as well as the Austrian, the conscript law vies with economic conditions in sending vast hordes to American shores. It is conceivable that the conscript law will be made to lessen the number of years of service if not rescinded, and added to the extraordinary amount of work to be done these branches will not be so well represented in the yearly figures of the national immigration authorities.

The unskilled labor of the steel mills and the stockyards and in other big enterprises is done almost exclusively by Poles, Lithuanians, Slovenes, Bohemians, and Czechs—all branches of Slavic races. The Poles, Lithuanians, and Bohemians, being natural linguists, learn quickly and adapt themselves to American conditions probably as readily as any type of immigrant. A consideration of the roll of aldermen, public officials, real estate holders, and business men of Chicago will show to what extent the Poles and Bohemians have ensconced themselves into the choice places of the municipality. Of the thrift, intelligence, and desirability of the Germans and Swedes as immigrants there can be no question.

Frederick C. Howe, commissioner of immigration at Ellis island, has made a statement relative to the immigration situation.

"The immediate effect of the war," he said, "was practically to eliminate immigration from Russia and Germany. We continue to receive immigrants from Italy, Spain, Portugal, and South America, but in a single month the total was reduced to 53,000, while a corresponding period last year brought in 136,000. This reduction is brought about by the radical socialization of the countries affected by the war. We find the governments forced as a military necessity to declare a state of socialism.

"This state of affairs might have been expected of Germany with its monarchical form of government and its systematic habits, but it comes as a surprise to find England pursuing the same course. A large proportion of the industries of these countries have been taken over by the governments. Such measures tend to keep the people at home. All classes are affected.

"The great wars of the past have been followed by periods of depression. The energies of the people must be directed into new channels. With war comes the wholesale destruction of wealth and the means of producing it. The European governments will exert every influence to retain their citizens and find employment for them to keep the countries from disaster."

Mr. Howe believes that a grave problem will confront the United States if no restrictions are placed upon the immigration of widowed women and their children. To permit the thousands of women and children who are not self-supporting to enter the United States, he says, will mean that untold misery will follow and disaster to the commonwealth. He believes that after the war not the sturdy men of the foreign countries but the defenseless women and children will be the greater part of the immigrating thousands. He advises measures to prevent this.

Of the soldiers who survive the war he says: "The nature of the soldier's life unfits many to resume the prosaic, humdrum existence which contented them before the war. They have acquired the wanderlust and will seek new adventures. For such a type America exerts a strong attraction. There probably will be an immigration of this class which has not been equaled in numbers since the fall of the Roman empire."

Mr. Howe differs from the writers on immigration in that he believes that the United States will benefit by the decrease in the influx of immigrants from northern and the increase from southern Europe.

Comment by Mme. X.

By Mme. X.

THERE is no more chic, altogether desirable and distinguished form of entertainment than a musical given by a veritable connoisseur of music, whether it be an afternoon or evening affair.

Such an occasion was the musical given last Tuesday afternoon by Miss Helen Birch. It was not a large company. Chairs were not placed in rows, but were distributed about so that every one sat comfortably and had a good view of the artists performing and of the rest of the assembled guests. Lights were shaded pleasantly. A few big vases of roses were placed here and there.

All the accessories for the perfect enjoyment of music were preëminently there, but the great feature of the occasion was the character of the program. It was, for the most part, the "dernier cri" in music, interpreted by Rudolph Reuter and Joseph Schreurs. The composers were not all modern, but their compositions were, and that was where the hostesses' taste and knowledge came in.

It is interesting to note the nationalities of the composers in that part of the program devoted to the ultra modern Debussy (French), Granados and Ravel (Spanish), Busoni (Italian), Schoenberg (German), and Dohanyi (Hungarian). Ravel has lived so much in Paris that he is claimed by the French and Busoni is for a similar reason annexed by the Berliners, but both came out from races more distinguished for artistic development than commercial or military power, which helps along a gradually growing realization in the world that neither of these goals of great nations seeking power—commercial and military supremacy—is a good medium for fostering that genius which is after all the ultimate measure of civilization. Out of the smaller, weaker people come as a rule the great painters, sculptors, musicians, and writers. This is a sortie into a speculative realm rather alien to a society column, but it will perhaps "give to think."

With rare discrimination Miss Birch selected Brahms and Chopin as the established and recognized composers whose music struck the note that harmonized best with these ultra moderns. Mr. Reuter, the pianist, and Mr. Schreuers, a artist of the symphony orchestra, gave a sympathetic interpretation of the program. The Schoenberg piano piece evoked the puzzled laughter his music usually elicits. The same laughter, perplexed, exasperated, yet friendly, once greeted Duchamp's "Nude Descending the Stairs."

Miss Birch, herself, is a composer of unusual attainment. A group of her songs was sung at a recent entertainment at the Fortnightly club. She has that unusual combination of the musical and poetic, and her songs are as noteworthy for the words she selects to set to music as for the melody and accompaniment.

The atmosphere of the Birch residence has always been distinctly musical. The late Mrs. Hugh Birch was an accomplished pianist and a devoted patron of everything that makes for the highest development of music. She was one of the founders of the Amateur Musical club and from its inception was one of the important supporters of that famous organization, which we still like to call, the Thomas orchestra.

The first of the two sonata evenings given by Mrs. John Casserly and Nikolai Sokoloff at the residence of Mrs. George Isham last Thursday was a great success from every point of view. The idea was to give an intimate quality to the enjoyment of music, to remove it from its usual harsh, unsympathetic surroundings, and so release the ordinarily overstrained imagination to a relaxed enjoyment of melody.

Under the exceedingly energetic and able management of Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. C. W. Ely, and Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis the Lafayette Fund society is rapidly taking form and shape. Headquarters have been donated to the association in the People's Gas building. A committee of formidable social preëminence has been formed to foster the aim and end of the undertaking and an entertainment of some unique kind to raise a goodly sum looms up on the distant horizon.

Besides those mentioned, others on the committee are Mesdames Ogden Armour, John C. Black, Watson Blair, John Borden, Harry Channon, Joseph G. Coleman, Richard T. Crane Jr., Kellogg Fairbank, William G. Hibbard Jr., George Isham, Bryan Lathrop, and Frank Lowden. A gallant cohort of men is also aiding and abetting the women on the board, to wit: Robert Allerton, Hobart Chatfield-Taylor, Colin Fyffe, Howard Gillette, Julian Mason, Roy McWilliams, Potter Palmer Jr., George F. Porter, Clive Runnells, John Spoor, and Bertram Winston.

What appeals most to the dyed in the wool American in this Lafayette fund affair is the opportunity to prove our patriotism, our gratitude as a people. The revolutionary war has marched right out of the obscure background of a remote past. Washington and his ragged continentals, in their cheerless camp at Valley Forge, seem to be looking at us to remind us that the supplies that the French furnished the struggling American colonists at that time enabled them to carry their eight years' war to a successful conclusion. The French claim that it was to Rochambeau that Lord Cornwallis surrendered his sword at Yorktown. This statement is inscribed on a statue of the great French admiral erected in his native place in southern France.

The promoters of the first evening of the Chicago Fashion show, whose proceeds are to be devoted to founding a building fund for Emerson house, are straining every nerve to make the occasion a great success tomorrow night at the First Regiment armory. The entertainment is modeled on a similar one held at the Ritz-Carlton in New York a month or so ago.

There is no doubt that one of the most imperishable of feminine attributes is a profound, ineradicable interest in that intangible, indescribable, inescapable thing called fashion. Almost the last thing to die in a man or woman is an interest in the personal appearance. So the show tomorrow night appeals to one of the strongest instincts in humanity and should evoke a widespread interest.

Mrs. George Hixon, Mrs. Lockwood Honoré, Mrs. Richard Fox, Mrs. Kay Wood, and their coadjutors are the organizers of the enterprise, and their jury to pass on the model gowns is certainly well chosen. It consists of Mesdames Joseph G. Coleman, Potter Palmer Jr., John Borden, John Carpenter, Morris Johnston, George Clarke, and Lockwood Honoré. A varied program of exhibits, dances, and songs will fill up the evening.

That very alive body, the Chicago Equal Suffrage [illegible] When M. Brieux was lately here this society gave him a reception and one enterprising woman asked him if woman suffrage was fashionable in France. He said that it was not, though what is called the "feminist movement" was. If suffrage is fashionable in Chicago—which it decidedly is—it is largely due to the propaganda of the C. E. A., which is officered and run by socially prominent women.

It aims to prepare women for citizenship and its achievements in this direction have been far-reaching and efficient. It now works through the central municipal citizenship committee of the Women's City club, which it helps largely to finance. This committee last year published over 200,000 leaflets in seven different languages, giving in simple and condensed form an enormous amount of information about the various campaign issues and the machinery of voting.

This year this association is offering a course of lectures for the benefit of the organization which will attract much attention both because of the topics and speakers. Mrs. Medill McCormick opens the course on Wednesday afternoon of this week by an address on "Suffrage from a National Point of View," at the residence of Mrs. Richard T. Crane Jr., 1550 Lake Shore drive. Hutchins Hapgood comes next on the list with two talks—the first at Mrs. Edward Blair's on Feb. 16, when his topic will be, "The Feminist Movement," and the second at the residence of Mrs. Samuel E. Barrett on Feb. 23 on "The Meaning of the Radical Movement." Miss Jane Addams will speak on "Wider Aspects of the Equal Suffrage Movement" on March 2 at Mrs. George Isham's residence. The last two meetings at Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh's and Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick's will be on the issues of the aldermanic and mayoralty campaigns and will have much bearing on the spring elections.

Chicago has done much to make itself a more acceptable and interesting asylum for a growing leisure class of wealthy people. The poor, deserving and undeserving, we have the gift of attaching to us by our sympathy and compassionate generosity, but the unemployed rich do not, as a class, find Chicago attractive. One by one we lose our distinguished and prosperous citizens and citizenesses. The latest additions to a long and impressive list of these deserters are Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Crane, who are going to make New York their headquarters hereafter instead of Chicago.

There are several reasons why New York allures them. The famous Russian choir there is one of Mr. Crane's chief hobbies. He imported it from Moscow at his own expense. It is the best of its kind outside of Russia and Paris, and is a really remarkable organization. Another even more absorbing reason for Mr. Crane is the biological laboratory near his summer home at Woods Hall, Mass.

This is one of the most famous institutions of its kind in the world. Starting from a nucleus of scientific men who gathered for summer recreation and pursued their researches with crude implements and under most primitive conditions, it has, thanks to Mr. Crane's sympathy and generosity, developed into an important and widely recognized institution.

All of Mr. Crane's children, except his youngest son, make their homes in the west. One daughter is married and lives in Madison, Wis. Another, Mrs. Robert Leatherbee, lives in Lake Forest, and his son, R. T. Crane III., resides in Chicago. So there will be certain strong ties to bring the Cranes back here, but the lure of the immediate east is evidently strong for many of our citizens who sever themselves from the active business life of Chicago.

The Casino continues to be the focus of much social gayety. It is growing in favor as a setting for small luncheons. Tables are placed in front of the pleasant long French windows overlooking the skating rink, and the excellent cuisine and service are much appreciated by the members, especially by those who have been skating. For at last a part of the territory devoted to the rink has yielded to treatment, and the south half of the inclosure has become a good skating parlor. It is illuminated at night now and will rapidly develop into the club's most popular feature. Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. Frank Hibbard, Mrs. John Carpenter, and Miss Isabelle McBirney are among the enthusiastic skaters. Various ice fêtes are being planned.

Meanwhile the big dinners at the Casino are coming thick and fast. Tomorrow night the Hamilton McCormicks give one to over 150 guests. Last week the Warren Salisburys, Edward Carrys, William J. Chalmers, and Richard T. Crane Jrs. all gave large affairs. The Stanley Fields, Frederic Bartletts, and various others are hurrying to get in similar dinners before Ash Wednesday's bells toll the knell of formal and conspicuously large entertainments.

Social gayety no longer stops when Lent begins, but it changes its appearance, indulges in smaller, more intimate gatherings, and enjoys heartily the restrictions convention and custom place on it.

Two of the excellent philanthropic enterprises that flourish under that broad, maternal wing, the Chicago Woman's club, are to be the beneficiaries of the concert of old time music to be given next Tuesday afternoon at the Blackstone theater, under the direction of Mrs. George B. Carpenter. The program consists of "Songs of a By Gone Time" in appropriate costume and with suitable stage setting. The two enterprises to be benefited are the emergency employment bureau, which the woman's club has been most successfully running since last November, and the Civic Music association. The latter is designed to encourage the understanding and study of music and to develop musical talent, principally by providing free musical entertainment and instruction at small parks and playgrounds and other civic centers.

The emergency employment bureau has placed over 800 women in positions and given daily employment in the emergency sewing room to seventy women. Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter has for three months devoted practically the whole of every week day to superintending the work of this bureau.

CORSETS AND THE New "Military" Shape

WITH all due respect to those fashion writers who assert that "there will be no important changes in corset shapes this season," we beg to state that there will be—and very decided changes.

The new "Military" shape is here. We have already told you about this. So far, the waist-line is not much accentuated; but, before the lilacs bloom, you will see a marked increase in this respect.

Spring modes in dress will compel the wearing of corsets with higher bust. This is certain. Corset-skirts will gradually grow shorter.

This doesn't presage the "hour-glass" figure, but simply a rational return to corsets that are real corsets.

SENSIBLE women will not regret the passing of the so-called "corsetless" mode. It has done untold physical harm, and has ruined thousands of figures.

They have welcomed these new Nemo Corsets with the "Military" shape, because they restore the graceful curves and symmetrical lines; reduce the rolls of fat over the gastric region, due to the corsetless mode; give perfect physical support.

NOTE.—Always wear these corsets pulled down so that ends of curved front steels extend to lowest point of abdomen.

News of the Chicago Woman's Clubs

By Inez Travers.

THE Mother's Relief association is now in its fourth year. Though it is identified in the public mind with many pleasant social events, it is a purely philanthropic organization. Its work was commenced by a small band of women who decided to do what was in their power for those among the needy who are overlooked in the rush of "charity."

These women found that there were all manner of organizations devoted to the welfare of children and the protection of youth, but that those devoted to the care of the old were not so numerous, and that the number of old women who needed financial help and did not need to go to homes was appalling. It was therefore decided to devote the energies of the new organization to the care of aged women.

The assistance is given in various ways. Small sums are donated monthly in several cases to supplement insufficient incomes, in other cases coal, clothing, food supplies, and rent money are given. Several old women have been given beds in homes, and literature, amusement, and small luxuries are donated to almost all of the club's charges. At present the club is supporting twenty-three women, at a cost of $200 a month.

Its membership is now nearing 700 women. Its funds are procured by dues and by entertainments given for the benefit of its charities.

The club holds a general meeting once every three months to discuss plans, etc. The investigating committee is charged with the duty of finding women who are deserving of the club's aid. The quarterly meetings are held at the Blackstone hotel, the annual reception is held at the home of Mrs. D. Harry Hammer.

The officers for the year are: Mrs. D. Harry Hammer, president; Mrs. Edward Sylvester Smith, first vice president; Mrs. Valdemar Michaelson, second vice president; Mrs. Benjamin Craycroft corresponding secretary; Mrs. Fred A. Palmer, recording secretary; Mrs. Oliver Belmont Sargent, treasurer. The directors are: Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mrs. William Molt, Mrs. H. A. There is nothing dead about this FASHION SHOW. There will not be a dull moment.

One hundred living models—each one physically perfect—will parade each afternoon and evening wearing up-to-the-minute apparel.

There will be moving pictures in which all the latest modes will be displayed in an amazingly interesting manner by living models on the street, at the beach, at the opera, at the club, etc., etc.

There will be educational exhibits showing actual processes of manufacture—the making of hosiery, hats, thread, and other peeps behind the scenes of the garment trade.

There will be lectures that will interest and instruct, such as the series on the textile industry by C. D. Heller, manager of publicity for Marshall Field & Co.

In short—it will be the very best entertainment in all Chicago this week; and it will be an advance showing of authoritative styles which no well dressed woman can afford to miss.

WELCOME MERCHANTS!

This dress is made of new shade green chiffon taffeta, handsomely embroidered front and pockets. Double action button collar—can be worn either as a high or low collar. Suitable for street and afternoon wear.—Manufactured by Herman Spivek & Co., Chicago.

Herman Spivek & Co. manufacture the famous "Hesco" line of dresses and skirts, selling not only to the merchant of the medium size town but to the largest of retail stores as well. They cover all territory west of Cleveland. Their line is known as a high class popular priced line.

The "De Welles" convertible dress is the only dress of its kind ever shown. Smart, the last word in simplicity, it answers every purpose of a stylish street dress, as well as an all-purpose house dress. Two buttons adjust entire dress; no openings below waist line, no skirt to flare open, no buttons to tear off, sleeves to pull out or rip.

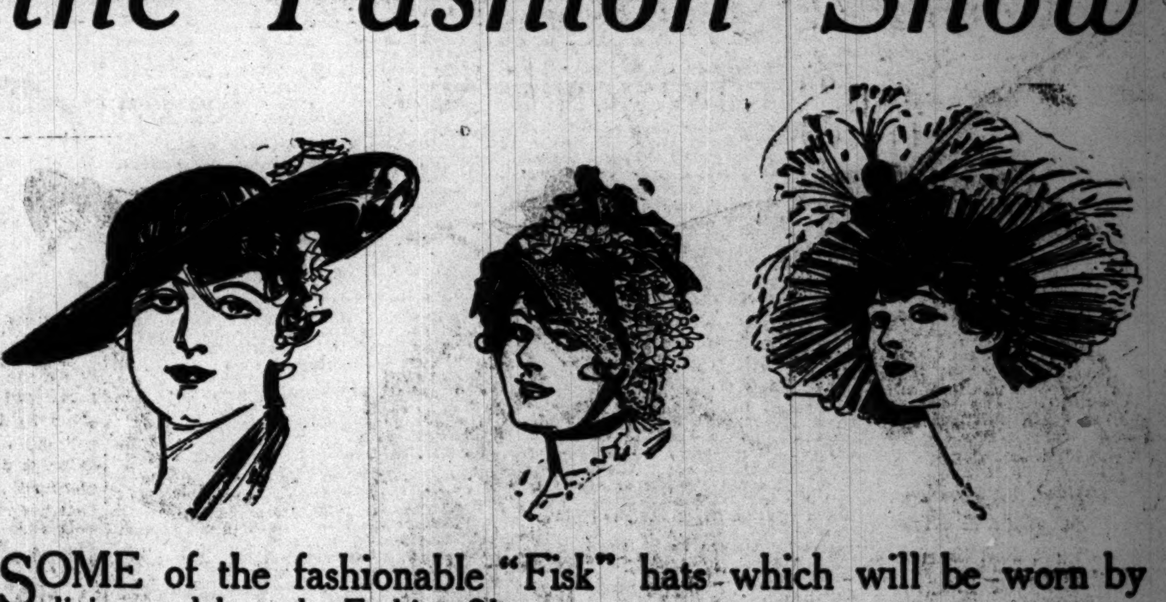
This "Dansant" Frock is made of pink chiffon taffeta. Empire waist has low neck off shoulder, puff sleeves trimmed with hand made apples and lace. Full skirt smocked at waist, finished at bottom in deep points, fine lace petticoat. Designed and manufactured by A. H. Flanders & Co., Chicago.

A. H. Flanders & Co. manufacture high class street, afternoon and evening gowns to sell at popular prices. The Flanders trade mark—Bryn Mawr—is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific and back as a symbol of correct style combined with quality, and as a "high class but not high priced" line.

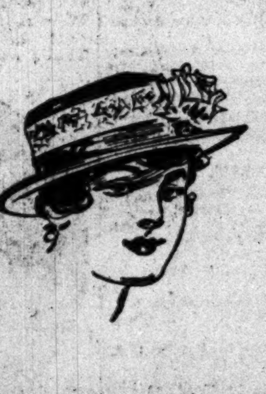
Blouse of striped crepe de chine with convertible collar trimmed with Chinese buttons, "Country Club" style. Manufactured by Sterne & Klein, Chicago.

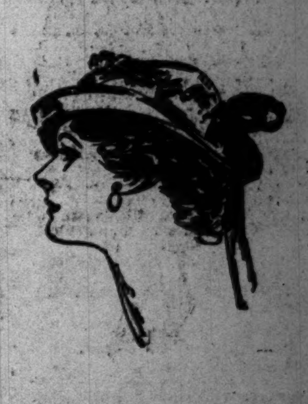
Sterne & Klein Co. manufacture the well known brand of "Blouse Craft" waists and "No Rip" petticoats which are guaranteed for six months wear. See this entire line at our exhibit. Popular prices, good value and service is our motto.



SOME of the fashionable "Fisk" hats which will be worn by living models at the Fashion Show.

There will be other hats and other living models at the booth of D. B. Fisk & Co., which will be THE Millinery Exhibit of the Fashion Show.





There will also be an exhibition of the various processes in making a Fisk hat. There will be the raw straw—the woven braid—the braid sewed into a rough hat form—the form after sizing—the shape, roughly blocked—the finished shape—the trimmed hat.

Scenes will be shown from the manufacturing departments in the new D. B. Fisk & Co. Building, the largest in the world devoted exclusively to the manufacture and jobbing of millinery goods.

ONE of the most interesting exhibits at the Show will be that of SUBSILK, the "New Thread," which replaces silk and displaces cotton. Free samples of this wonderful thread will be distributed at the exhibit of the Henry Myer Thread Manufacturing Company.

SUBSILK—the thread with the guarantee label—is used by ninety per cent of the better class of garment manufacturers—because:

—It is stronger than sewing silk of equal size.
—It is so soft, pliable and elastic that experts cannot tell it from silk after it has been stitched into the fabric.
—It will match any cloth, being manufactured in hundreds of colors and shades.
—It costs no more than good cotton and will save two-thirds of the thread bill.

SUBSILK is used in nearly all the alteration rooms of establishments large or small, because it matches the threads already sewed in the fabric.

SUBSILK is shown at this exhibit in all stages of manufacture—the raw cotton—the rovings (the first process of thread making), and the finished article in hundreds of beautiful shades and colors.

URERS SSOCIATION OF CHICAGO

NEWS of the RELIGIOUS WORLD

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

IT has been said that ministers ought to be poor and humble; the Lord has undertaken the task of keeping them humble and the church of keeping them poor.

This ideal is not to be reversed by the plan of the Methodist Episcopal church to raise an endowment of $10,000,000, the interest of which is to be added to its other sources of income in order to provide for old age or disability of its 18,000 ministers, as the time comes for each one to go on the retired list or in event of death to provide for the widow and dependent orphan children.

In 1913 of the 3,181 retired ministers and the 3,135 widows only thirteen received more than $500 and less than $600, and 679 received less than $50 each. The exact tabulation is:

1,200 received from 101 to 200
1,171 received from 201 to 300
411 received from 301 to 400
13 received from 501 to 600

The tabulation will be somewhat changed by the report of the secretary, Dr. Joseph B. Hingeley, which will be made at the annual meeting of the board of conference claimants which will meet in Chicago next Wednesday, but relatively the figures will not be much modified.

It will take the entire $10,000,000 added to funds already in possession to bring the income of the retired ministers to the point where the line of dependence will be lifted to the standard of respectable support. There is no possibility of disturbing the ideal of poverty coupled with humility if a minister remains in the ranks of the regular ministry.

The two important characteristics of the $10,000,000 campaign are the participation in it of the entire Methodist Episcopal denomination numbering nearly 4,000,000 members, and the nature of the appeal which is for a dependable pension as a minister's right instead of a plea for charity.

There have been appeals for endowment funds for retired ministers made hitherto in different sections of the country which have been of the nature of skirmishes, but the present movement is a battle along the entire front involving an engagement of the whole church army capable of mobilization.

Of equal significance is the active participation of others of the leading denominations in campaigns for the same object, but projected according to their peculiar forms of administration.

In order to quicken the interest of all the people in the movement a national convention will be held in Chicago April 22 to 26. The convention will open with the presence in Chicago of the board of bishops on April 22, who will occupy the pulpits of the leading churches of the city and suburbs in presenting the cause of the retired ministers.

The bishops will also be the speakers at the convention on Monday. On other days there will be representatives of several different denominations, officials from large business corporations who have adopted pension systems, and leaders of the $10,000,000 campaign. The Chicago Methodist Social union will give a banquet in the Auditorium hotel as the closing event of the convention.

The 100th anniversary of the death of Bishop Francis Asbury, the first bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church consecrated in America, which falls on March 31, 1916, is to be the date of the "round up" of the results of the big canvass for funds. This event will precede the opening of the next general conference of the denomination on May 1 in Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

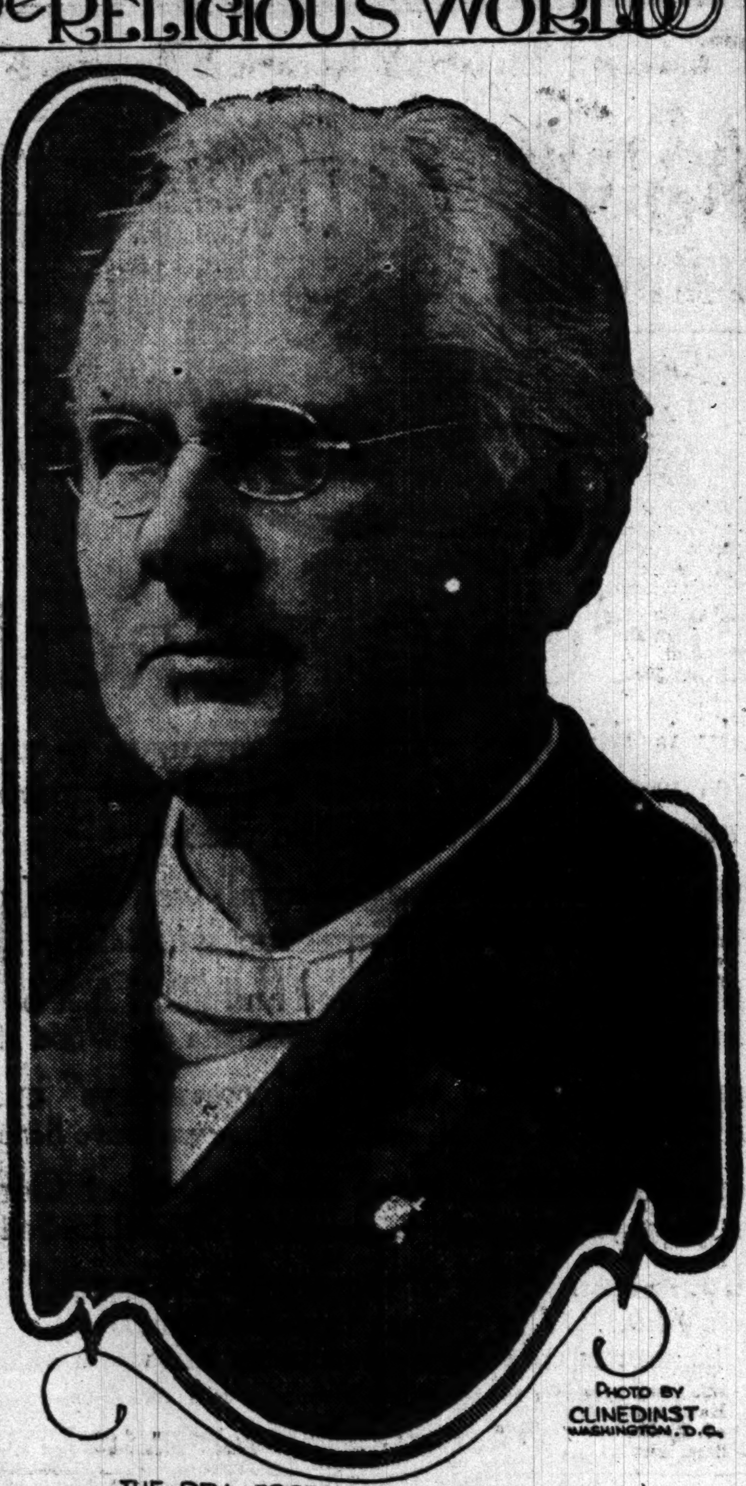
Next Wednesday in Chicago at the national headquarters, 1020 South Wabash avenue, will be held the annual meeting of the board of conference claimants, at which plans will be perfected for the coming convention and the further conduct of the quest for the $10,000,000.

When the campaign was inaugurated in Washington, D. C., last fall it was described as a $5,000,000 campaign. Since then the total pledges made by the various conferences total over $12,000,000, so that the sum now set is ten instead of five million dollars.

Last week one subscription was made by an unnamed donor in Portland, Ore., of $20,000, and Mrs. G. F. Swift in Chicago gave a pledge of $10,000 on condition the local subscription totaled $100,000 by Dec. 31. These amounts are expected to be duplicated several times over in all parts of the country before the end sought is reached.



THE REV. JOSEPH B. HINGELEY, D.D.

The Rev. Joseph B. Hingeley is corresponding secretary of the board of conference claimants of the Methodist Episcopal church, which is conducting a campaign for an endowment fund of $10,000,000 for the benefit of its retired ministers, widows, and orphans. The annual meeting of the board will be held next Wednesday at the national headquarters, 1020 South Wabash avenue. Bishop W. F. McDowell is president of the board. Dr. Hingeley and Bishop McDowell both live in Evanston.

What Illinois Women Have Done with Two Years of Suffrage.

By Marion Walters Lovett.

WHEN the Illinois legislature gave the women of the state the right of suffrage two years ago the men of the state hurled this question at the new voters:

"You've got the right to vote, but what are you going to do with it?"

The men voters of the state jumped at the conclusion that the wet and dry issue would be the only one that would demand any attention from the women. The men were mistaken. Let's see what the women of Illinois have been doing in the two years they have had partial suffrage in Illinois.

True to the dominating feminine instinct, the women turned their attention to the political and governmental unit closest home to them—their home towns. In many of the towns and cities of Illinois the women mapped out programs for the reduction of taxes, more efficient municipal government, better care for the poor, better working conditions for the women who work, and study of the social evil and other problems of the lives of persons in the cities which never occurred to the cold blooded business minds of the men. In fact, the women are trying to give the cities in which they live the atmosphere of homes.

In several of the Illinois cities the women have started strenuous campaigns of commission government—a form of government which they assert will do away with petty politics in city affairs, free the city of a lot of feeders at the municipal treasury, and thus cut the taxes of the property owners.

Peoria presents a situation which the women feel that they must deal with. The vice situation there is considered a disgrace to the moral element of the city and to the state. Mrs. H. M. Brown and Mrs. Julia Parker White have organized the women of that city for the purpose of putting men in office who will enforce the laws.

The women are not making this fight alone, but have joined with the men in organizing the men and women of the city into ward and precinct organizations. The fight between the liberal and vice elements and the good government classes will reach the climax at the spring election. Already the women have obtained the appointment of a law enforcement member of the city election commission and the mayor of the city has ordered the closing of the "red light" district.

In Freeport the women also have joined with the men of the city in working for a commission form of government. The Men's league invited Miss Katharine Porter, president of the Woman's Club of Freeport, to meet with the league. Later it elected Miss Porter vice president of the men's organization.

Every precinct is being organized with a woman chairman and every block has a woman "guardian" who coaches the women in working for the city improvement measures. The women already have passed a registration ordinance in the city and speakers on new, more efficient, and more economical methods of managing a city have been brought to the city by the women.

Belvidere men called Mrs. Minnie Starr Grainger, former president of the Illinois Federation of Woman's clubs, into their conferences when they were considering plans to make Belvidere a cleaner city. Besides voting the saloons out of the city the women have selected the candidates which the city will vote on at the spring election. The male politicians of the city refused to put candidates in the race that were not approved by the women.

Evanston women are working for a commission form of government. In Greenville the women put through a new bond issue for a new high school and through their activities in the city's affairs the candidates for city offices at the coming election are pledged to give the city a sewerage system. Back of the women's activities in improving the city is Mrs. Frank Watson. She has organized the women so thoroughly that the men take the women into their conferences on city affairs.

Charleston women have taken an active part in the government of the city. Women have been made judges and clerks of elections and have obtained pledges from each of the aldermanic candidates to support the town betterment program of the women. The Charleston women elected one of their number to the city council and were instrumental in electing the Municipal court judge.

In addition the women have established free dinners for the poor school children of the city and service to the sick is also given by the women of the Civic league. The women have established an employment agency to aid the unemployed. The unemployed have been divided into classes that want work and those that don't. For those who don't want work the vacant lots of the city have been leased and they will be put to work making gardens in the spring.

The women in Effingham obtained the commission form of government for that city and will elect the five commissioners at the spring election. The men offered the women a place on the commission but the women told them to "elect five good men and we'll be satisfied."

In addition to the larger affairs of city government the women have forced the moving of voting booths from saloons and pool halls to schools and stores.

Corn-Mad? Use "GETS-IT," It's Sure

Makes Corns Vanish Like Magic!

A hard cap of skin makes up every corn. When you put 2 drops of "GETS-IT" on it, it shrivels up and comes right off—and there's your corn—gone, by thunder! Simple as taking off your hat! That's why corn millions have gone wild over "GETS-IT"—nothing like it ever known. Some folks, to this day, putter around with bandages, sticky tape, thick plasters, corn "pulling" salves, gouge corns out with knives, snip them with scissors, make them bleed, and then howl because they can't get rid of sore corns. Use "GETS-IT." There's nothing to do but apply 2 drops. The work is done. "GETS-IT" does the rest. No pain, no fussing, no changing shoes, no limping. It never fails. Try it tonight for any corn, callus, wart, or bunion. Be sure that you get "GETS-IT" and nothing else.

"GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Chicago and recommended as the world's best corn cure by Economical Drug Co., The Fair, Siegel Cooper & Co., Home Drug Co., Ashland Drug Co., W. A. ASTRONOMY.

Comparison of the range in time and temperature of inorganic and organic evolution. The range of organic evolution, measured by millions of years, is only a point in the diagram. (Diagram from Duncan's "The New Knowledge.")

IN the belt of Orion you see three stars. The middle one is Alnitam. It is one of the hottest stars. That is, it is near the starting point in evolution.

In the southern constellation of Argo, which cannot be seen in these latitudes, are two representatives of a hotter type, but in our heavens this sun in the belt of Orion, which is familiar to any one knowing the most conspicuous of the constellations, is representative of the second class, known as Alnitamiam stars.

In the descending scale of temperature which represents inorganic evolution, the process which will permit organic evolution to begin and life as we know it to have its start, Alnitam stands second, with a temperature, indicated in the accompanying chart, of 25,000 degrees centigrade.

Organic evolution is represented as a point in this scale. This point represents the period between which water boils and ice melts. "We measure that point by many millions of years," says Duncan in "The New Knowledge." In the scale it stands as a mere point.

The long line which represents the period of inorganic evolution is divided into spaces marked by stars, many of which can be seen by the ordinary observer. Sirius marks the midway place in this progress in eternity and a glance into the sky will reveal the great diamond point which, as between the hottest star and the earth where organic evolution has had its stage, represents the middle ground.

Arcturus is further along in development. The millions of years which have passed while organic matter took its form here are compressed into a mere point when recorded comparatively on this scale.

In the Arcturian stars are found protocalcium, arc lines of iron, calcium and manganese, proto-strontium, hydrogen, and fainter indications of proto-iron and proto-titanium.

This is approximately the composition of our own star, the sun. The middle star in the belt of Orion, Sirius in the evening sky, our sun, and the vegetation and life about you will represent stages in the evolution of matter from incandescence, through its inorganic and into its organic stages and to completion as we see it.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Alfred G. Vanderbilts Off in the Mayflower to See America First.

by Mme. Y.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt are among those who do not find England attractive as a place of residence at present. Their big apartment on the top floor of a beautiful building in Mayfair is closed. Their country estate is in the hands of the keeper.

Early in the summer Mr. Vanderbilt kept getting disconcerting letters to the effect that Russian troops were being taken across his lands on their way from Glasgow to the front in France. His worry over this situation was absolutely ungrounded, however, as the Russian troops are busy defending their own frontier and have never for a moment been loaned in any fractional part to the western division of the allies.

At any rate, Mr. Vanderbilt has directed his English interests recently from this hemisphere. He has even begun to advocate the at present popular slogan of "See your own country." His first step toward following this cry was to buy from Harry Payne Whitney his yacht the Wayfarer. He then invited a party of friends to accompany him, and he and Mrs. Vanderbilt steamed out of New York harbor with them en route to the Panama exposition. They expect to take on an additional party at Colon and to proceed slowly up the coast of San Francisco.

When Mr. Vanderbilt bought the yacht the first thing he did was to have it done over. None of the rich and great ever missed an opportunity to have things done over. He had a nursery and kindergarten installed. Notwithstanding this, however, two people conspicuously not of the party are Messrs. Alfred Jr. and George, infant sons of the host.

The skipper who has charge of this party is Capt. Walter H. Bevan, who had charge of the boat which a little over a year ago rescued Frederick Vanderbilt and party, including the Duke and Duchess of Manchester, when Mr. Vanderbilt's yacht Warrior ran on a reef in the Caribbean sea. The Wayfarer, by the way, is the Warrior rebuilt. Capt. Bevan is said to be receiving $7,000 a year for his services.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould have not done anything like their full amount of entertaining this winter. Usually by February they have had at least three house parties at their beautiful residence in Lakewood. Women followed by maids with large grips have crossed over in the Twenty-second street ferry leading to the railroad station in New Jersey. Men have wandered into that station followed by valets, and when their eyes have unexpectedly fallen on the women whom they are accustomed to see in ballrooms, they have taken on the racily informal manner which is now good form in smart society—the manner which says: "Well, hello, old top"—and with right hands extended have advanced to greet their friends.

Before the train starts, the railroad station is like one of Mrs. Vanderbilt's teas—bright with the colors of rich women's costumes and noisy with the laughter of the sophisticated wit of the smart set. This is what happened in other years.

Last winter I was one of those in the party that went up to celebrate Washington's birthday. I remember the sure manners and the rather hard, poignant wit of that occasion well.

Mr. and Mrs. Gould have not said why they have failed to entertain. It is not the custom of the rich and great to offer explanation or excuse. They simply have not issued invitations and that is enough for us to know. They have their own purposes, but it is not for us poor mortals in our imperfection always to accurately perceive them in advance.

Last week, however, these erstwhile hosts departed from their present custom and entertained at a dinner in their town residence at 857 Fifth avenue. Sixty guests were present and the entertainment in the late evening was augmented by a numbr of additional members of the smart set who came over to dance.

Their eldest daughter, Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Jr., the young woman who bears the honors of a big social name with sweet, matronly dignity, entertained that evening at dinner and took her guests later to her mother's dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt entertained on the same evening. They gave a party at the Metropolitan opera house, where a program was given for the benefit of the unemployed, and later they were hosts at a supper at their residence at 677 Fifth avenue. Col. Theodore Roosevelt was guest of honor.

When the late King Edward visited this country as Prince of Wales he went to Philadelphia, where he kept hearing the name Biddle. He said "A Biddle, a Biddle, what is a Biddle?" Some one replied, "Two Biddles equal a duke."

Now the engagement is announced of Miss Cordelia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, and Angier B. Duke.

The Harmless Sexuality of Syncopated Music.

By Ronald Webster.

ONE feels momentary wonderment that the gentlemen of the bureau of public efficiency have not already seized upon Mrs. Havelock Ellis and propounded to her the question of music, sex, and the modern dance. As guardian of the public purse it would be but natural of them to point out to the department of morals the scientific solution of this vexatious problem. But she came among us unobtrusively, desired, we are told, to act merely as the high priestess of womanhood, and the men cannot be expected to have appreciated her.

I was more or less familiar with the psychology of those who have sought periodically to pursue and annihilate in detail the three phases of the problem. Various organizations have gone after the popular song, exposed it in the newspapers, and then retired on their laurels. Others have hunted down the dance, and in the firm belief that one touch of nature makes the whole world sin they have sought to eliminate sex also.

They have entered upon the discussion upon every occasion with most reprehensible heat, not hesitating to diagnose on moral grounds or to apply a remedy suitable only to sicknesses of a different kind. One may find a vast amount of literature about the modern dances catalogued in the libraries.

One book is especially cheering. On the cover is printed, "Instructive, enlightening, every moral teacher should read this treatise." And inside there is a picture of two ladies in décolleté gowns, two gentlemen in dress suits, and two little devils in nothing but diabolical grins. It is labeled "Lustful expectancy for the modern dance." The last picture in the book is less interesting, but far more touching. "Alackaday, mamma," is the sentiment, "I have danced." One feels a bit queer to read a little further on: "It is wrong in some Bible histories to represent Moses, full of indignation, smashing the tables of the law in sight of the dancers in close bodily contact around the golden calf."

But the real shock comes when you strike the sentence: "The grace of God will not come to their assistance while they hug each other in the voluptuous waltz." Then you discover that it is not the syncopating one step and the fox trot nor yet the bunny hug which is the subject of inquiry, but the polka, the mazurka, and the Virginia reel.

There is little talk about music in any of these books. It is all sex and the dance. One may read, I have heard said, in the vice commission reports, that mechanical pianos coughed out syncopated melody in dens of iniquity during earlier periods of Chicago's history, but I have found it true that drunken men usually sing "Silver Threads Among the Gold." Ragtime of itself has, I am sure, nothing more to do with sex than the aforesaid sentimental song has to do with inebriety.

And ragtime is the foundation of the present popular dances. This is one case where the music was alive and popular before any one thought of dancing to it. In the delicate process of collecting evidence several persons made the same answer: When we discovered we could dance to ragtime we all danced.

Except for such statements that Chopin's waltzes are absolutely sexless (you can't do social dances to Chopin) and that those of Joh. Strauss are distinctly masculine, you won't find much which concerns the three elements of dance music and sex.

People, of course, have called music all kinds of names, just as they have hurled opprobrious adjectives at social dancing. I think there is record of condemnation of Mozart's music as libidinous. But musicians as a whole

Notes of the Plays and Players.

Miss Blanche Bates has commissioned the business manager of "Diplomacy" to rent for her a cottage in Evanston, where she may live the hearthstone life for the four weeks' engagement at the Blackstone. Her husband, George Creel, the eminent foe of pills and pain killers, will be here with her, as will also her infant daughter, Miss Frances Creel.

Irvin Cobb, who with Mr. McCutcheon and Mr. Bennett of THE TRIBUNE went to the war in a taxi, will lecture on his experiences at the Auditorium on Feb. 20 and 21. He will deny atrocities and affirm the tenderness of the docile Uhlans as manifested in their deportment toward him and his companions.

Further obsequies over "Pretty Mrs. Smith" were performed in Buffalo last week with Miss Fritzi Scheff as the principal mourner. The play had a previous failure with Miss Kitty Gordon in the leading rôle.

Miss Doris Keane, convalescent in the south of France, plans a spring tour in "Romance," visiting those cities in which the play has not been acted. Later she will be seen in a new comedy.

In Winnipeg Feb. 22 that thrifty knight, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, will play "Hamlet" for the benefit of one of the war funds of Great Britain.

Miss M[illegible] behavior at the Fine Arts theater last season pleased or perturbed the local cognoscenti, is to appear in Boston at the Toy theater in the plays of Rabindranath Tagore.

The popularity of "Pygmalion" among Chicago women was attested on Thursday at an extra matinee when Mrs. Campbell played to a house in which there were only twelve seats vacant—and those were in the gallery.

Miss Mary Servoss, who is to be the flower queen in "Alice in Wonderland" at the Fine Arts, was last here in "Consequences." So was Elliott Dexter, who is now of the cast of "Diplomacy."

Large theater parties of boy scouts have been attending "The Dummy" at Powers', attracted thither by the heroic exploits of Ernest Truex as Barney Cook, the child detective.

The name of the new revue for the Winter garden in New York is "Maid in America." It will be submitted experimentally to Buffalo tomorrow night by Mlle. Dalzie, Miss Nora Bayes, Miss Maude Lambert, Miss Blossom Seeley, Miss Belle Ashlyn, Miss Minerva Coverdale, Miss Yansci Dolly, Charles J. Ross, Harry Fox, and others. The book is by Harold Atteridge.

Jules Eckert Goodman's new play "The Man Who Came Back" will be performed by Robert Hilliard. "Our Daily Bread" is the title of a play by Thompson Buchanan soon to be produced by A. H. Woods.

The sprightly commentator who wrote over the pseudonym of "The Playgoer" for the Evening Sun of New York is no more. The lack of enthusiasm in his review of "Marie-Odile" and some suspicious stains upon the hands of Mr. Belasco, producer of that play, are regarded as circumstantial evidence relative to his disappearance.

Bernard Granville, songster and dancer in several of the past La Salle shows, is appearing as the villain in proceedings for divorce brought against him by Mrs. Dorothy Granville in New York. The rôle of the temptress is assigned to Miss Eleanor Christie, a product of the "Follies."

"Scotch Mist," a variant of "She Stoops to Conquer," by Joseph Herbert, is to be played in the variety theaters by Miss Molly McIntyre, late of "Kitty McKay."

Among the memories of J. R. Murray, the old gipsy violinist in "Sari," is that he was discharged from the steel business by Andrew Carnegie; joined the McCall Opera company, also the W. T. Carleton Opera company; played in Gilbert and Sullivan opera; organized the Murray-Lane Opera company, and played in Irish comedies at McVicker's, singing "Kathleen Mavourneen." He has been absent from the Chicago stage for many years.

Miss Mizzi Hajos is a native of Budapest, a graduate from the National Academy of Dramatic Art of that capital, and during the five years of her American career has appeared in "A Barnyard Romeo," "The Spring Maid," and "The Rose Maid." Her manager has not yet made her a star.

The characters in Miss Alice Gerstenberg's dramatization of "Alice in Wonderland," to be presented at the Fine Arts on Thursday, are Lewis Carroll, the White Rabbit, the Mad Hatter, the March Hare, the Knave of Hearts, the Queen of Hearts, the Dormouse, the White Queen, Alice, the Red Queen, the Duchess, and Humpty-Dumpty.

Frank Sterling, who plays Lewis Carroll, says he used as a boy to sit in the pew behind that of Dr. Carroll in St. Savior's church, and that Miss Gerstenberg has reproduced him perfectly.

A telegram from William A. Brady to the Chicago Grand Opera company has disposed of the expectation that his melodrama called "Life" will be given this spring at the Auditorium. March 15 was the date selected in the negotiations ended by the telegram, in which Mr. Brady explains his inability to alter arrangements already made and signifies his intention to take for a Chicago run of "Life" the eight weeks starting Monday, Sept. 1.

Miss Idelle Patterson, the coloratura of the Hopper company, sang Yum Yum for the first time in yesterday's matinée of "The Mikado," and will be heard in the part again this evening, when the company will give its final performance in the engagement. Miss Gladys Caldwell, who sang the part in the earlier performances, resumed yesterday the part of Pitti-Sing, which she had last season.

What of the Debutante? Farewell, Abe and Mawruss.

By Percy Hammond.

FROM time to time the prudent chaperon interrogates this oracle as to whether or not such and such an entertainment is a fit spectacle for the young. It is explained that so common is candor and worse upon the stage that the debutante theater party is become an expedition fraught with hazards, to be undertaken warily. Such fleshly institutions as "The Passing Show" and the "Follies," it is pretty generally understood, are not for adolescence—though I suspect that the forbidding symposium of bare she-joints at the Garrick is, after all, an instrument of morality. But sometimes the incautious protectress finds herself, if not her charges, horrified at an exhibition of impropriety in a play of whose contents she has heard nothing but good.

Of course, it is not feasible for the newspaper critic to thread his discourse with red lights of warning to the young. He cannot interlard the trick maturity of his fleet analyses with admonitions to lady sophomores. And as a rule his callous taste cannot discriminate between the harmful and the otherwise. Should a bud blush in "Pygmalion" at Eliza Doolittle's antipathy to bathroom mirrors? Will she be coarsened by hearing the rude locutions of the female crook in "The Dummy," rough, but with a heart of gold? When the tall blonde of "Sari's" stained glass ensemble insistently exploits her vast clavicular topography, will there be pollution of the nursery? The great lesson of the serious drama is that the wages of sin is annoyance—shall the discomforts of the woman who errs be regarded as the poison ivy in our child's garden of the theater? Do plays treating indirectly with unchastity sully more than plays dealing directly with theft or assassination? Should the spoken drama be censored as are the moving pictures, with everything cut out except sentiment and vulgarity? Shall it be Nietzsche and "Live Dangerously" or Forgan and "Safety First"?

It is a moment for critical humility. In our midst are a triune of specialists who know much—Lady Gregory, wise, kindly, youthful, humorous, poetic; Madame Strindberg, courageous, free, liberal, and human; and Mrs. Havelock Ellis, clinical, prophylactic, surgical. There are many parents with many children and the play is an important by-way in their lives. Shall we not all get together, say at the Little theater, seating ninety-nine, and ponder what is and what is not good for our offspring in the way of happenings upon the stage.

After six months of prosperous playing at the Olympic theater "Potash & Perlmutter" is about to pass to other communities, bereaving us thereby of fiction's most delectable tradesmen, Abe and Mawruss. The pangs incident to the deprivation are lessened a trifle in the case of this playgoer by the fact that they take with them the timid Boris, Russian refugee, composer of a symphony, near bomb thrower, and the sickliest character in all modern drama. I wonder how much longer the season of "Potash & Perlmutter" would have lasted had there been absence of Boris and his soft, damp, dark pink personality. Many a time have I passed the Olympic, eager to go in and again see Mr. Carr and Mr. Bernard's adroit acting as the expedient merchants, but always have I been deterred by the thought of Boris, timorous, shrinking, furtive, mousy, gliding to and fro as humble and placatory as a frightened insect. Perhaps others have not felt so deeply in the matter as I; it may be that with the explicable pseudoblepsis of the habitual theatergoer I did not see Boris aright at the first performance. [illegible] or a fantasm, the memory of him has caused me to avoid the Olympic, and I doubt not that other more profitable patrons have had similar emotions. Any one who appreciated the leading characters and the excellence of their reproduction must have been grieved at the presence of Boris. The unfortunate player who is assigned to this moist caricature may be absolved from blame, but those who wrote it, cast it, and rehearsed it may not.

Theatrical Observations.

Miss Virginia Fox Brooks, daughter of Joseph Brooks, the play producer, is to act in support of Miss Phyllis Neilson-Terry in Anthony Hope's "The Adventure of Lady Ursula."

That De Wolf Hopper made no mistake in reviving "The Yeomen of the Guard" was indicated by a marked increase in the attendance at the successive performances last week. It is to be kept in his repertoire for the remainder of his tour.

The Actors' Fund is to be enriched by the revival of an old device, first employed in its interests about twenty years ago. It is to place a tax of 10 cents on every theater pass. The tax is paid at the box office when the pass is "honored" with seats and turned into the fund by the manager of the theater. The difficulty about the revival of the device is that, theoretically, passes are no longer issued for theaters of the first class.

Mrs. Leslie Carter has gone into the variety theaters.

Miss Billie Burke was compelled last week to interrupt her Boston engagement because of an illness that necessitated a surgical operation. It is the expectation that she will resume her tour in "Jerry" this week.

There is reliable information to the effect that, with two or three notable exceptions, contracts with the singers of the Metropolitan Opera house are being renewed at greatly reduced terms. The exceptions listed are Caruso and Miss Geraldine Farrar.

A letter from Cincinnati requests the publication of the information that a four act play called "The First Brother" will be acted in "one of the loop theaters" on Monday, Feb. 15. It is intimated that the play is satirical, with the present war as its theme. The letter promises that "paid advertisements" will be inserted Thursday next to give more nearly exact information as to play, cast, authorship, and, perhaps, the theater to be used.

Cyril Maude, who is scheduled for March 8 at the Blackstone for three weeks in "Grumpy," expects to return next season to the United States, but under his own management. His contract with the Liebler company, his importers, expires this season. He is being managed now in the interests of the receivership for the Liebler company, but his decision not to renew his contract was made last season, hard upon his appearance in "Grumpy." The returns for that play proved so gratifying that Mr. Maude decided it would be foolish to continue to divide them with any manager one day longer than the term of his contract. It is said that George C. Tyler, the head of the Liebler company, allowed Mr. Maude $2,500 weekly salary and contracted for two years to supply attractions for the latter's London theater, the Playhouse.

Henry Miller recently made up a second cast for "Daddy Longlegs," placed himself in the name part, cast Miss Renee Kelley in Miss Ruth Chatterton's rôle, and went a-touring. The profits to date are said to be in excess of even the very large returns on the performances given by Miss Chatterton. Which makes pertinent Mr. Miller's reply last season to a Chicago friend who inquired of him the prospects for "Daddy Longlegs," then being experimentally acted in small communities. The reply was: "It's trash, and there's a fortune in it."

Arrangement was made yesterday for an added performance of "The Mikado" by Mr. Hopper on Sunday evening at the Auditorium. "The Yeomen of the Guard" will be sung for the last time on Saturday night.

Playbills of the Week.

Auditorium—De Wolf Hopper and the Gilbert-Sullivan Opera company remain this evening to give an added performance of "The Mikado."

Blackstone—William Gillette, Miss Blanche Bates, and Miss Marie Doro in a revival of Sardou's "Diplomacy," which for many years has been regarded by players with much fondness because of its richness in a variety of theatrically effective characters. It is understood that Mr. Gillette—who will be seen as Henry Beauclerc—has edited the Clement Scott-Squire Bancroft adaptation, which has long been "standard" here and in England, with a view of increasing the laughs. Miss Bates will be Zicka, who is very wicked, and Miss Doro will be Dora, who is very good and sadly misunderstood for two acts. Tomorrow evening.

Grand Opera house—"On Trial," an artful utilization of the moving picture processes to give variety to the manner rather than the matter of staple melodrama. It is a hit here, as in New York. Seventh week.

Cort—"The New Henrietta," with William H. Crane, Thomas W. Ross, Maclyn Arbuckle, Miss Amelia Bingham, and Miss Mabel Taliaferro at the head of a cast which plays it con-amore. It's drawing crowds. Seventh week.

Princess—"Our Children," affording Henry Korker a type of part new to him and containing one emotional scene which is capitally acted in the best manner of a good nonemotional actress by Miss Christine Norman. Seventh week.

American Music hall—"The Bubble, with Louis Mann acting in his "big scene" all over the broad acres of this theater's stage. He is quite effective in all the other scenes. Third week.

ERNEST TRUEX in THE DUMMY at POWERS'

Powers'—"The Dummy," an entertaining comic variant of the prevailing style in "crook plays." Fourth week.

Illinois—"Sari," more than the usual thing in modern operettas, with Hungarian "atmosphere" and lovely music. Fiddles, fiddlers, and fiddling pervade it, and Miss Mizzi Hajos eddiefoys herself into much laughter. Third week.

Olympic—"Potash & Perlmutter," which will reach on Saturday the end of a run that started in August.

La Salle—"Rolling Stones," in which two crooks are rewarded handsomely for their criminal skill. Chicago is the locale of this variant of the Wallingford theme. Second week.

Garrick—"The Passing Show of 1914," a revue from the New York Winter garden. George W. Monroe heads the company, which is large and active.

Fine Arts—"Alice in Wonderland," a dramatization by Miss Alice Gerstenberg, will be shown Thursday. Miss Gerstenberg was the librettist of "At the Ball."

Little theater—Three one act plays of Cornish background grouped under the name of "Love in Danger," written by Mrs. Havelock Ellis, are acted by Maurice Browne and his company. Final week.

Imperial—"The Lure."

Crown—"Bringing Up Father."

VARIETY THEATERS.

Palace Music hall—Miss Lois Ewell is headlined, and two popular performers, Emmett Corrigan and George MacFarlane, also will be in the bill. Mr. Corrigan will be seen in a new one act play, "The Red Hate," by John Willard, baritone of De Wolf Hopper's company. Mr. MacFarlane, who sang here successfully two years ago in Mr. Hopper's company, will give a specialty of Irish ditties. Swor and Mack, Duffy and Lorenz, and Ahearn's comic cyclists are others.

Majestic—Karl Jorn, one of the German tenors of other seasons in the Metropolitan Opera house, and Miss Elizabeth Murray, a singer of another school, are the chief contributors. Herr Jorn was the first to sing Parsifal in the United States, and Miss Murray was the first to sing "Play Me That Dublin Rag," also in the United States. Clayton White and two assistants will be seen again in "Cherie"; the Courtney sisters will sing ragtime, and Mullen and Coogan will repeat a "turn" of nonsense which has been effective in the past with Majestic audiences.

McVicker's—W. H. Macart and Miss Ethlynne Bradford in "A Legitimate Holdup"; George B. Reno and associates in "The Misfit Army"; Ryan and Richfield in a sketch of Celtic character; Clarence Wilbur, a grotesque, and the Damann troupe of acrobats are listed.

Colonial—The "mind reader" who calls himself Svengali billtops, with Miss Ruth Roche Francis and assistants in a comic sketch called "He Was a Good Husband" in second place. A musical sketch called "The Land of Make-Believe" will be added Thursday.

Great Northern Hippodrome—Willie Dunlay, who took part in the La Salle run of "The Elopers" last summer, and Miss Bessie Merrill are to head the long program here with a skit which they call "Without Rhyme or Reason."

Columbia—The American Beauties will provide this week's entertainment of specialties and "burlesque."

MR. ELMENDORF'S TRAVELS.

Dwight Elmendorf will this afternoon give his pictured lecture called "Switzerland: A Tramp Through the Alps." "Around the United States" will be his subject Wednesday and Friday evenings and Saturday afternoon.

MISS IRENE POWLASKA in "SARI" at the ILLINOIS

Miss Pawloska is a native of Montreal. This is her first appearance in Chicago. She appeared for one season as prima donna soprano with the Montreal Grand Opera company, and later toured in concert with the French tenor, Clement. She then went abroad to study for grand opera, where she remained for three years, and until she was engaged for "Sari."

"It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary" ....John McCormack
"National Emblem March," "German Fidelity March"......... ....United States Marine band
Sextet—"Lucia"....Victor opera sextet
"Chinatown, My Chinatown," "I Knew Him When He Was All Right" ....American quartet

Notes of Music and Musicians.

Eric Delamarter has written a musical setting for the performance of "Alice in Wonderland," which opens at the Fine Arts theater next Wednesday.

Carolina White, who used to be with the Chicago Grand Opera company, has entered vaudeville. J. E. Allen of the Lahee bureau is responsible for Mme. White's interest in the masses.

A music lover of St. Paul took umbrage recently over the performance of "Carmen" in that city. He wrote to a newspapers there: "I, for one, am disappointed that the people of St. Paul should be compelled to listen to the lascivious, sensuous music and at the same time watch the actions of an unprincipled libertine and an amorous rake."

The Chicago band will give three concerts at Orchestra hall on the evenings of Feb. 16, 17, and 18.

Erich Korngold, the 17 year old composer, who has attracted attention in this country, has written an opera, "The Ring of Polycrates," which it is planned to produce at the Court opera at Vienna after the war.

Paderewski expects to tour America next season.

Boston papers and New York papers are still publishing paragraphs about the future of the Chicago Grand Opera company. The latest report from Boston is that the Chicago company will give twelve weeks of opera here, four weeks in Philadelphia, and four in Boston.

Andrea Sarto, baritone, and Leonora Allen, Chicago soprano, will be heard with the Apollo club in Schmitt's "Forty-seventh Psalm" and Cowan's new choral work, "The Veil," on Feb. 22.

The Philharmonic society of New York has been compelled to forbid knitting at its concerts.

A Wheeling [W. Va.] paper praises Mme. Homer's singing of Alma Gluck's "Orfeo et [sic] Euridice."

Bruno Steindel, cellist, plays at St. Paul's Universalist church this evening.

John McCormack says that he has made enough money and that after this season's contracts are disposed of he will give himself to the work he loves—singing Mozart.

The next concert of the Chicago Chamber Music society will be given in the foyer of Orchestra hall on Feb. 18.

The second of this season's American concerts promoted by Glenn Dillard Gunn will be given by the Chicago Symphony orchestra on Thursday, March 11.

An all-Wagner program, with Mme. Julia Claussen, contralto, as soloist, is the offering of the Chicago Symphony orchestra for its concerts to be given in Orchestra hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. The numbers to be presented include "The Flying Dutchman Overture"; "Hannhaeuser's Pilgrimage to Rome" [Paris version], and "Elizabeth's Prayer" from "Tannhaeuser," with Mme. Claussen interpreting the part of Elizabeth; the "Lohengrin Vorspiel"; "Sigfried in the Forest," from "Siegfried"; three songs: "Schmerzen," "Der Engel," and "Traeume," to be sung by Mme. Claussen; the introduction, love scene, and Brangaene's warning [arranged for concert performance by Frederick Stock], from act 2 of "Tristan and Isolde," and the introduction, Tristan's vision, arrival of the ships and Isolde's love death from act 3, Mme. Claussen interpreting the part of Isolde.

Miss Emmy Destinn, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera house, took out her first citizenship papers in New York last Wednesday. She declared that she is a native of Prague, Bohemia, that she is 36 years old, that she weighs 170 pounds, and that she is going to marry an Arab as soon as the war is over. The Arab is Dinh Gilly, baritone in the Metropolitan company. She told reporters that she had been wanting to marry Gilly for several years and that now all obstacles but the war are overcome. Her fiancé is a prisoner of war in Bohemia and is amusing himself shooting rabbits, according to the latest word from him.

Wagner's "Kaisermarch" will be played by Edgar A. Nelson as one of the numbers to be presented in the organ program at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall this evening. The program will include "Hymn to St. Cecilia," by Gounod; "Grand Offertoire in D," by Batiste, and "Laus Deo," by Dubois. Mrs. Mabel Sharp Herdien and the choir of 100 will sing Mendelssohn's "O for the Wings of a Dove." The offertory solo, "How Long Wilt Thou Forget Me?" by Pflueger, will be sung by Gustaf Holmquist. Two anthems—the "Hallelujah Chorus" from "The Messiah," by Handel, and "Glory to God in Nature," by Beethoven, will be sung by the choir.

Katherine Goodson, the English pianist who at her last recital in Chicago competed with structural iron works outside the recital hall, has been engaged as the soloist by the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra for its concert at Orchestra hall on Feb. 28.

Annual Wagner Production Opens at Metropolitan.

By W. J. Henderson.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Following the premier of "Madame Sans-Gêne" at the Metropolitan the most important incidents of the week were still operatic. Giulio Gatti-Casazza, impresario of the opera, usually keeps his peace, but now yielded to the bullying tactics of a moribund newspaper, long ago deprived of its prestige, its circulation, and its influence, and permitted himself to be reported in its columns as uttering a pitiably weak "squeal" because the other papers had not seen fit to emphasize the fact that the audience was very cordial to the new opera. This journal to which he talked made this point more prominent than criticism. Alas! when "The Pipe of Desire," "Mona," "Ariane et Barbe Bleu," "Germania," "The Girl of the Golden West," and "Julien" were produced the audiences were quite as cordial at the very worst and at the best far more so.

But where are these operas now? No longer in the répertoire. "The Girl of the Golden West" is as dead as Noah. Yet the scenes of enthusiasm at its first performance, when Puccini, Toscanini, Caruso, Destinn, and Amato walked not less than three miles backward and forward before the curtain, far outshone anything observed at the kindly demonstrations over "Sans-Gêne." Poor Mr. Gatti-Casazza has finally opened his mouth and, like the Irishman in the old story, put his foot in it.

Meanwhile it is to be recorded that on Thursday afternoon the annual presentation of Wagner's "Der Ring des Nibelunger." began at the Metropolitan. It is unfortunate that the four dramas cannot be given in close succession. There is a performance once a week till the series ends, and thus all continuity of effect is made impossible. "Die Walküre," for example, will follow "Das Rheingold" next Thursday and "Siegfried" the Thursday after. Furthermore, the impersonators of the rôles are not the same in each instance. Mme. Melanie Kurt, of whose debut I shall write next week, will sung two of the Brünnhildes, and Mme. Gadski the other. There is not even any certainty that the two will wear hair or cloaks of the same tint. Naturally they will not look nor sound alike. We have to bear such artistic ills here because our opera depends for its existence on the whims of fashionable society. The smart set people usually arrive at the opera at or near the end of the first act, and they go away half an hour or more before the performance is ended. In other words, they drop in after dinner, and before Mrs. So.-and-So's dance. It is notorious that they do not read opera librettos and that their notions of what is going forward on the stage are, to say the least, somewhat vague. Superficial passing amusement is what they seek, and they strongly object to very serious or gloomy operas.

They do not like long works, or two act works. They prefer four act operas because these provide two intermissions, and intermissions at the Metropolitan customarily last twenty minutes in order that box visiting may be carried on. The society people dislike operas in which the stage is kept dark for long periods; they wish the house to be bright so that they can see each other and be seen by every one else. It must be remembered that the directors of the opera company which conducts the enterprise are all members of the smart set, and that their social lives are subject to the incessant demads of society women that this, that, or the other shall be done at the opera.

If the influential women of society do not like an opera or a singer then goodby. Now for these people "Der Ring des Nibelungen" is out of the question. They would not stand it. So it is kept out of the répertoire except in the way of a few scattering performances of the separate dramas. "Das Rheingold," of course, having no intermission and lasting two hours and a half, is never given in the evening. And the pressure of the regular evening répertoire is so heavy that successive presentations of the works of the cycle are not practicable.

In the conditions the directors of the Metropolitan deserve gratitude for the number and excellence of the Wagner presentations in the course of the season. The house was sold out for "Das Rheingold," which goes to show that despite the attitude of the smart set New York has plenty of real music lovers. The performance was in the main excellent, albeit the stage management did not pay pious regard to all Wagner's requirements. Johannes Sembach, a tenor new here this season, made a genuine success with his Loge, the best we have had except those of Heinrich Vogl (the original) and Ernest Van Dyck. Mr. Sembach is a great acquisition to the company. Alfred Hertz conducted and in view of his approaching departure the audience made him the object of a special demonstration.

The official statement is that Mr. Hertz feels the need of rest and change of artistic environment. The probabilities are that he is weary of being relegated to the background in order that Toscanini shall receive all the honors. Mr. Hertz has conducted all the productions of American works, which were foredoomed to failure. However, he will always be remembered here with admiration for his splendid interpretation of "Parsifal," which he has always conducted since its first performance.

"Fidelio" was revived at the Saturday matinée after a silence of six years. Mme. Matzenauer as Leonore, Mr. Urlus as Florestan, Mr. Goritz as Pizzaro, Mr. Braun as Rocco, and Elizabeth Schumann as Marcelline were the chief singers in a performance which was noteworthy for its generally fine musical quality and its dramatic earnestness. Hertz conducted it admirably. But one can hardly expect the general public to love the noble old work which is so introspective in its style and so profoundly tragic.

On Tuesday last an American tenor Henry Parsons, who has sung at the Teatro Rossini in Venice, appeared in song recital at the Little theater. It is difficult to imagine him as an opera tenor, but in the recital field he should have much success, for he has a voice of agreeable quality, a free tone emission, elegance of style, taste, and sentiment. He proved to be especially excellent in Italian songs.

New York Receives 'Androcles and the Lion' Cordially.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—George Bernard Shaw, coming constantly into closer touch with his American public, has been especially kind to his admirers in New York. He has written and had published and copyrighted for their especial benefit a criticism of "Androcles and the Lion," and one is given away with each program at Wallack's theater, where the Granville Barker players are now presenting that amusing fable play.

Thus the good American playgoer of casual or settled habit is enabled to estimate at least Mr. Shaw's opinion of his own play, and that the information is of great assistance we cannot doubt when we observe the promising popular success of Mr. Barker's venture. "It is the $1.50 seats in the balcony that go first," proudly announces the management by way of proof that the great middle class has been reached—and touched.

"The author of 'Androcles and the Lion' received one of the worst shocks of his life," writes Mr. Shaw, "when an American editor published its text under the heading 'a comedy.' It is not a comedy; it is precisely what the author calls it, a fable play—that is, an entertainment for children on an old story from the children's books, which nevertheless contains matter for the most mature wisdom to ponder."

And, being of a conformist turn of mind, we are quite willing to admit that the author of "Androcles" does, in fact, know his own work. In Mr. Barker's production, which is picturesque in the extreme, it starts in a green and white calico forest with the most wonderful man-lion that pantomime has yet produced, an intelligent, lip reading beast possessed of more curious and strangely articulate sounds than have ever before come from a lion's skin.

Here Androcles pulls the thorn from the paw of the suffering beast, to the delight of the latter and the disgust of his (Andy's) wife, who, in her great fear of being eaten, still is sufficiently feminine to include in her screaming protests the charge that the gentle natured Greek tailor whom she so thoughtlessly married has always made it a point to neglect her in favor of his other animal friends. With Androcles and the lion pals the scene is simply changed to a street in Rome by the raising of the forest and the revealing of a rather substantial row of pillared buildings at back. Before which we have the procession of a struggling group of Christian martyrs on their way to be gloriously eaten by the lions or killed by the gladiators in the circus. Again we quote the author:

"It is helpful to warn old playgoers that they must not expect 'Androcles and the Lion' to fall into any of the classifications to which they are accustomed and that they will get fun and earnest, history and satire, on the same plate and at the same moment. If it should seem to them that the author . . . is satirizing or making fun of the truths of religion it will be prudent for the scandalized playgoer to consider carefully whether the truths of religion have not become associated in his mind with the mere circumstances and ceremonials under which religion is professed, which is quite another matter. The lady who said, 'Don't be blasphemous' when somebody remarked that the cathedral organ was disgracefully out of tune was no doubt sincerely reverent, but she was rather mixed as to the things that really are religion and the things that are only associated with it by custom."

So we have the scene in which both the martyrs and their guards are warned that being in Rome, and practically within sound of the emperor's voice, they must behave discreetly. The guards must cease their singing of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," good marching song though it is, and must no longer depend upon the women prisoners for the mending of their cloaks and the gentle ministrations of experienced nurses. Rome expects them to behave as Christians and to die, if they prefer dying to sprinkling a pinch of incense upon the altar of any one of a number of perfectly good gods, as ladies and gentlemen. The emperor must be allowed to enjoy a maximum of amusement with a minimum of personal annoyance. Explains Mr. Shaw:

"Some English critics persisted in describing the emperor as Nero, apparently believing that Nero was the only emperor who persecuted Christians. But he is not Nero and not any particular emperor, nor is the persecution any particular persecution. None of the characters are monsters; they are just such people as may be found in the United States today, placed in the monstrous circumstances created by the Roman empire . . . the moral being that monstrous institutions make monsters of quite ordinary men. . . . The author tells you here, as so often before, that you must reform society before you can reform yourselves, and that if you had been an imperial Roman you would have done as the Romans did under the empire, respectable Christian and republican as you now are."

The scenes outside and inside the arena are at once richly humorous and impressively pathetic—the latter no doubt largely because of that traditional religious training that lingers with the most flippant of latter day pagans. We found ourself, for instance, actually laughing through tears at Mr. Shaw, which was an entirely new experience. Spintho, the hypocrite, who expects to sneak into heaven cleaned of his vilest sins by pretending to believe, is here; and Ferrovius, the picturesque giant whom Shaw sees as "a historical symbol of humanity, captivated by the fascination of the Christian doctrine and passionately embracing it, only to discover at the first blast of the war trumpet that his real god is still Mars and his Christianity only an admiration, an inspiration, a glimpse of a higher future after all." Ferrovius it is who, entering the arena in all humility, eager to die a martyr's death, ends by growing quite peevish and killing six of the gladiators sent against him, Mr. Shaw's explanation being as follows:

"Readers of the author's 'Common Sense About the War' will remember the passage in which he calls on the Christian churches to close their doors until the war is over and not to put Mars in the place of Christ on their altars. In this he is obviously holding up the example of Ferrovius in this play, who quite simply and honestly gives up his pretension to Christianity after his sanguinary victory in the arena, and confesses himself a disciple of Mars, whilst retaining his conviction that though 'the Christian God is not yet,' he will have the last word when all our pseudo Christians are dust."

The scene of meeting between Androcles and the lion, who turns out to be the very beast befriended in the forest, is riotously funny. Highbrow and slanthead alike roar with laughter because of the comical antics of the first doubtful, then curious and finally joyful beast who sniffs out his old friend and proceeds to one-step with him to the amazement of the emperor and all others assembled.

And thus "Androcles and the Lion" comes to an end, with the Christians pardoned and everybody merry, everybody, that is, excepting Spintho, who, seeking to escape as an apostate, is mistaken for a nervous martyr by a particularly hungry lion and quietly but quickly eaten off stage.

For his part Mr. Barker, coming as a bridegroom of Art among strangers, and being forced to prove his ability to support the lady in the manner to which she has been accustomed, has enjoyed a happy inaugural week. What he has offered by way of novelties in staging have been enthusiastically received.

He has extended the apron of the Wallack theater stage out over the footlights to what was formerly the first row of seats in the orchestra circle, and he has sacrificed the lower stage boxes to convert them into side entrances for the players. Thus he has gained the effect of a public passageway running directly across the front of the stage. This serves very naturally, therefore, as a street or a courtyard. There are no wings at all.

He has supplied a new proscenium arch, which is set back of the former curtain line and is a square frame of gold, and he has hung a scene curtain of tan shade before the set stage. The lighting is from a new arrangement of side and border lights, and jutting out from the balcony circle are cone shaped reflectors throwing their rays directly upon the front stage.

Sex and Modern Dances.

are not disturbed by morality. They concern themselves frequently with passion, but they are proud of it. James Huneker declares that "Tristan and Isolde" is the last word, the very deification of carnalism. "Not in the sacred writings of the Jews, not in Shakspeare are expressed such frenetic passions. The Songs of Solomon are mildly Virgilian in comparison."

However successful Wagner may have been in transmuting sex to sound, it is difficult to believe that our providers of popular rags have any special grasp of this terrifying and tender emotion. It is just possible that they make up for their musical deficiency in the "lyrics."

It is absurd to declare that sex has nothing to do with dancing. Mary Antin, who is the latest apostle of sex, goes so far as to say that any interest which any man has in any woman is based on difference in sex and the potential results of the difference. It is certain that men (except female impersonators) do not dance with men. They used to. There were (according to one analysis) three kinds of dancing—religious, social, and military. Religious dancing is on the decline, and even in the militarist nations one will not find war dancing to any great extent, though an imaginative person might see it in the German goose step. There is nothing left for the man then but to pick out a girl and dance with her.

But just for the convenience of the moralists I wish Mrs. Ellis, forgetful for the moment that sex is a crime which all but the young do their best to suppress, would tell us what it's really all about.

Tabloid Book Review

by Fanny Butcher

FEODOR JOZEF KONRAD KORZENIOWSKI. That's Joseph Conrad's boyhood name. Did you think that he was a native Englishman? So does almost every one else. He is called one of the greatest of living English writers. Everything that he has done is in English. He is a naturalized English citizen. But he was 21 before he touched foot on English soil or tried to speak English. No modern writer has had a more romantic life than Joseph Conrad. He was born in Poland in 1857. Although he was brought up in a country without a coast, as a boy he had a passion for the sea. He was determined to be a seaman—for some reason an English seaman—and he deliberately decided upon English for his speech instead of the French and Polish that he knew. At 17 he ran off to sea, and in 1878 he saw England for the first time. He was adept at picking up the language and by 1884 he became a naturalized citizen. From then until 1894 he was a seaman. He went everywhere that boats will carry a man. When he finally left the sea, with an unfinished novel, "Almayer's Folly," in his bag, he was as English as any native islander. He lives in Kent now, and he has probably forgotten his un-Anglicized name.

Michael Artzibashef's novel, "Sanine," is said to have aroused such violent discussion in Russia since it was published in 1907 that there grew out of it "Saninist" and "Anti-Saninist" clubs. It is now available in English in a translation by Percy Pinkerton, with a preface by Gilbert Cannon, published by B. W. Heubsch.

An heroic statue to the first American plumber as a companion statue to the figure of the Goddess of Liberty in New York harbor is the suggestion of Barry Pain. He says that he never saw so many bathrooms in his life as he has since he came to America. He has a profound admiration for the man who started the American bathtub movement. Although Mr. Pain is nearly 50, he is making his first visit to the United States. He is famous in England as a contributor to Punch, but he insists that he's not joking at all about the bathtubs. This year sees the first American edition of his work, published by Stokes.

"Mr. Crex of Monte Carlo" (Little, Brown & Co.) is E. Phillips Oppenheim's thirty-ninth volume of intrigue and adventure. And he's only 49!

Two novels which Mitchell Kennerley is publishing are said to be "as far apart as the poles in spirit and execution." Winifred Graham's "Can a Man Be True?" is an old fashioned romance with no sex and—mirabile dictu—no "purpose." Isabel Ostrander's "The Primal Law" isn't.

Troy Kinney, co-arthur with Mrs. Kinney of "The Dance, Its Place in Art and Life" (Stokes), has recently finished a dry point etching of Adeline Genée. Aside from photographs, it is the first portrait for which the dancer has consented to pose.

"The Prince and the Pauper" (Harpers), Mark Twain's little story which has made thousands of American children happy, has been chosen by the war department for use in the public schools in Manila. It will go off to the Philippines to make school children there remember school day reading with joy.

"Makers of Madness," a playlet by Hermann Hagedorn (Macmillan), is a forcible anti-war argument. It tells in vividly dramatic manner how two great nations may be drawn into war despite the elements within them all making for peace. It is all simple and matter of fact, but extremely effective.

". . . So long as on war's walls
We build engines of death that he may live
So long shall we serve Krupp instead of Christ."
—Percy Mackaye's "Kruppism."

Mary Roberts Rinehart has gone off to Paris, with the hope that she will be able to get close to the front by the aid of her skill in nursing. She was a trained nurse, you remember, before she became a writer of books and plays.

"I feel among Americans . . . that I am moving in a world of precocious and inexperienced children, bearing on my own shoulders the weight of the centuries. Yet it is not exactly that Americans strike one as young in spirit; rather they strike one as undeveloped. It is as though they had never faced life and asked themselves what it is; as though they were so occupied in running that it has never occurred to them to inquire where they started and whither they are going. They seem to be always doing and never experiencing." That is what G. Lowes Dickinson, lecturer from Cambridge university, thinks of us. He says that in "Appearances" (Doubleday, Page & Co.).

Mark Twain arrayed in red limp leather is the contribution of Harper & Bros. to the happiness of those who think that Mark Twain was the world's greatest humorist. Two volumes will be published each month in this new edition.

Havelock Ellis in "Impressions and Comments" (Houghton-Mifflin) gives this admirable definition of the best writing: "The best writing must always possess both dignity and familiarity, otherwise it can never touch at once the high things and the low things of life or appeal simply to the complete human person."

Another ideal is shattered by Clayton Hamilton in his "On the Trail of Stevenson" in the Bookman. "There is an illusion that he understood children, and that children loved him at sight," Mr. Hamilton says. "As a matter of fact, Louis belonged to the considerable and not unworthy class of men who always feel uncomfortable in the presence of children who are very young. He didn't know what to do with them. He could write immortal poems in reminiscence of his own childhood, but he couldn't make a baby smile. Small children didn't like him because he seemed queer." These facts were contributed to him by Edmund Gosse, whose three children did not find Stevenson a genial playmate.

The report of the Grand Rapids public library shares the delectable bit of information that only two authors applied for borrowing cards during the last fiscal year. Perhaps Michigan authors are too shy to disclose their identity. It can't be that they are all so prosperous that they buy the books they want to read. In that case every one will be wanting to "go back" to Michigan.

Latest News from Movie Land

by MAE TINEE

Irving Cummings is to make his first appearance in "Beauty" productions under title of "The Happier Man," release date Tuesday, Feb. 16. It is not determined whether Mr. Cummings will continue in "Beauty" productions, but for the time being he will participate in some of these pictures.

Leah Baird of the Vitagraph company received from an unknown girl admirer in Marion, Ind., a book illustrating the story of her life in pictures clipped from numerous publications. The care exercised in the selection of appropriate pictures and the artistic imagination and evident painstaking manner in which the book was compiled make of it a work of love and Miss Baird's most prized possession. The first picture is a remarkable likeness of the moving picture star and is followed by one in which the stork is seen bringing a baby to the Baird homestead. Next come pictures of what might have happened from the age of 2 years through her schooldays; experiences with her first beau, her first appearance as a child actress, adventures while playing in stock after having adopted the theatrical profession as her own, and one representing the first picture in which she appeared as a leading woman of the Vitagraph company are part of the series of interesting illustrations that go to make up this remarkable book. Next follow pictures of Miss Baird's numerous admirers, her marriage, honeymoon, and trip to Europe. From this point the compiler of the book let her imagination have full sway and pictured Miss Baird at 50, at 65 and surrounded by grandchildren, closing the book with an appropriate verse:

"The sun sinks low in a golden west;

After spending three weeks in a sanitarium recovering from injuries received while playing the title rôle of Bret Harte's California heroine, Salomy Jane, Beatriz Michelena, the prima donna, starring with the California Motion Picture corporation, is back with her company again, taking the title rôle in another Bret Harte film romance, "The Lily of Poverty Flat." Many of the scenes in this screen drama are being photographed in the heart of the Santa Cruz redwoods.

Sarah Bernhardt, the famous French actress, received $30,000 for posing in the film movie "Queen Elizabeth." It required about six weeks' work and is probably the largest sum ever paid a legitimate star for such work.

Miss Margaret Vale, who is a niece of President Woodrow Wilson, plays the ingenue rôle in the William Fox picturization of "A Gilded Fool." She is a dark eyed girl and is as much at home in the White House as on the boards. Her first stage appearance was with Mme. Nazimova in "Marionettes." She also was in the cast of "Madame X." She had important parts in "The Maid of the Inn" and "Far Away Princess."

Wallace Reid and Lillian Gish are being featured at the Mutual in a film version of "Enoch Arden." They are taking in all the beach towns in their location tours for scenes.

On Feb. 18—wurra, wurra—Clarence Jay Elmer and Miss Edyth Stroud Anderton, both well known Lubin stars, will be married in the big "daylight studio" of the Lubin plant at Philadelphia. Elmer played the title rôle in "The Patsy Bolivar" series of comedies that the Lubin company is now releasing each week. Miss Anderton is the daughter of Gus Anderton, a well known automobile man of Philadelphia, and a niece of Judge Stroud of the Superior court of Pennsylvania. For some time she played with Lubin's southern company at Jacksonville, Fla., and later was transferred to the Philadelphia company.

Miss Claire McDowell, late of the Biograph company, has joined the Universal company, to be leading woman for King Baggot.

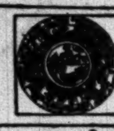
Edna Maison is no longer connected with the "Powers" brand of Universal pictures. In future all pictures in which she appears will be released under the "Big U" brand.

Kathlyn Williams of the Selig company has been honored recently as follows: There have been named after her five babies, the Kathlyn hesitation waltz, "Kathlyn, Dear Kathlyn," a song hit; Kathlyn perfume, Kathlyn cocktail, a Kathlyn cigar (suppressed because Miss Williams didn't know how good or bad it might be), Kathlyn shirtwaist, Kathlyn slippers, Kathlyn style of dressing hair (not for men), Kathlyn baby elephant, Kathlyn puma, Kathlyin lion, Kathlyn pool at the Selig jungle zoo, Kathlyn watch charm for single men, Kathlyn face powder, and numberless kittens owned by loving little mistresses who, with much arduous toil, have written to the gracious Miss Williams that they have named their pets after her.

Evidently George Ade approves of Ruth Stonehouse, who is appearing in the Essanay film version of his "Slim Princess." He says: "She is just suited for the title rôle. Her mannerisms and sweet, smiling face will surely win an audience. Yes, I was more than satisfied with the production, and I believe that those who see it will like it better than they did the play."

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

FEBRUARY



The East Wind.

THE east wind is, in hut happiness, a line drawn under comfort to italicize it. Comfort, tropically, may be a banana and a chance to doze without having a monkey throw a cocoanut on your head. We think of it by contrasts. In summer it is either relief from heat or rest after fatigue—to be obtained out of a cool breeze and a porch lounge. That contrast is not sufficiently vivid. It has the fault of tropical or semi-tropical comfort. The contrast is not sufficiently rigorous.

Comfort is italicized by the east wind when, hereabouts, the lake sends the emphasizing factor hissing overhead with a truly sibilant threat against all who may venture outdoors. All eaves and all fire places do not talk. Some by misfortune of location are silent and not interpretative. This is unfortunate for the dwellers under and by them. Eaves ought to be sensitive to the wind and fire places ought to respond to it.

They serve their esthetic function by reminding you audibly that they furnish cover and warmth and that there is need of both. It is a misfortune for humanity to become too easily acceptive of either. They ought not to be considered as things obtained by paying the rent. That is a total loss of an essential pleasure.

The sense of shelter and warmth, of refuge from rigors, is not to be sacrificed easily and wisely. The east wind blows to remind you of that, skirting in the responsive eaves, tossing the tree tops, rustling the yellow and stubborn leaves of the white oak, whooping and soughing in the chimney.

MENDING A CUT CASING.

NOTHING could apply to the motorist more than the old saying that "a stitch in time saves nine;" it is particularly applicable in the matter of tire repair and tire care, for tires are more abused and more neglected than any part of a car. The motorist may not permit himself to believe that he is careless and that the high cost of motoring comes to a large extent from inattention to the necessity of first aid to the injured tire.

Macadam roads are apt to have many loose and sharp edged stones apparently placed where they will do the most damage possible to a tire tread. They will not cause a puncture or blowout, and they are not apt to cause a let down, but they will cause little and big cuts in the tread. Such little cuts do not cause the loss of air, but they make it possible and probable that the fabric will be exposed, and when the tire is submerged in a pool of water the damage has commenced.

In the first place, the water will gradually loosen the fabric, it will separate the tread from the fabric, and will permit sand blisters—the dirt will gradually creep under the tread and expose more of the fabric to the moisture—with the result that in a short time the inner layers of fabric separate and permit a blowout. And a tire that has been permitted to go until this happens is practically worthless.

Heretofore it has been a simple matter to make a good job of repairing a punctured tube, for this does not come in contact with water, but there have not been convenient repair schemes for taking care of a cut casing. One was exhibited at the automobile show, however, which can be operated from the current of a storage battery or from the electric light circuit in the garage. It was a small affair, in fact, could be carried in a pocket, and designed to be used for vulcanizing either tubes or casings, and requiring only a few moments to do a permanent job. This is the invention of a Chicago man, well known in motoring circles.

A cut in a casing, for instance, is cleaned with gasoline, rubber is placed in the cut, and the vulcanizer attached in a manner similar to that in the illustration. Then the current from the storage battery is turned on and the job is finished, except a short wait while the vulcanizing is going on. In the meantime the motorist prepares another cut, if there is one, and by the time this is ready the first one is ready to release the little instrument.

The most ingenious wrench ever brought to the attention of a motorist has just been brought out by an Illinois man. The mechanic who tries it will find nothing it will not do for an inanimate thing, for it adjusts itself and tightens itself in a most peculiar manner, and will take either a large or small nut, with no danger of rounding the corners of the nut. One mechanic figured that with several such wrenches in his shop he could easily save from 10 to 15 per cent of the time usually put on a car by a workman, but he did not state whether the owner would be given the benefit of this saving. Ordinarily a motorist carries from three to a dozen wrenches in his tool kit, whereas this one could easily replace at least half a dozen of the set.

Missourians are working with a determination to eliminate the impression that their state is nothing more than a quagmire so far as highways are concerned. They have caught the Iowa good roads fever and are now making a neck and neck race with the sister state to encourage motorists to use their roads. Much important work has been completed on the Chicago, Kansas City and Gulf highway in eliminating bad spots and in putting in new bridges, particularly in and about Elmira. Actual work on this highway has been in progress for considerably more than a year, and now it is a good road practically all across Missouri.

In addition the Red Ball route, from St. Paul to St. Louis, is receiving attention, and the report of the state highway commissioner, Frank W. Buffum, shows that before long this will be an ideal touring highway. All along new culverts and bridges are being put in to replace the old ones; low spots are being filled and steep grades lowered; dirt roads are being graded and dragged, and the many miles of gravel roads are receiving attention both in the way of grading and resurfacing.

Mr. Buffum has made a report of the progress in the work so far as his state is concerned, giving this not only by counties but by townships as well, and a summing up of the report would indicate that by the time the touring season opens the entire road from St. Paul to St. Louis will be one no motorist need fear in the least. At the same time just as much work is being done on the road from Iowa City down to Kansas City, and Iowans are working to have every bit of their highways in shape for the transcontinental travel that must cross the state in going to the fair.

Queries and Answers.

"Will you please publish in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE the best and shortest route from Clinton, Ia., to Kansas City, Mo., giving the towns passed through and the distance? Your department is usually the first I look at each Sunday and I have gained much useful knowledge, for which I thank you.

"CARLES A. ASHTON, Clinton, Ia."

At this time of the year go to Dewitt by way of the Lincoln highway, twenty miles; then south to Davenport, nineteen miles; here take the Chicago, Kansas City and Gulf highway to Iowa City, fifty-seven miles; then keep on this highway, which is marked all the way from Davenport, to Kansas City, 397 miles, a total distance of 403 miles. This route takes you through Washington, Richland, Ottumwa, Centerville, Seymour, Ia., and Powersville, Laredo, Chillicothe, Braymer, and Liberty to Kansas City. At Iowa City Robert N. Carson will furnish detailed running directions, but the road is thoroughly marked, as described in a recent issue of THE TRIBUNE.

"Can you lay out an automobile route from Libertyville, Ill., to Fennimore, Grant county, Wis., and would it be possible to cut out Madison, Wis., by going from Oregon, on the Milwaukee road, to Verona, on the Northwestern road? It looks like a short cut, if the roads are passable, that way. I would have to cross the Fox river at McHenry, Ill. I will look for an answer in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

"C. H. KAISER, Libertyville, Ill."

If you mean to make this trip now, the advice is to leave it out of your mind; there is not one chance in a hundred that you could get through. The roads in southwestern Wisconsin are hilly, rough, and poor; besides, before your inquiry was written a considerable quantity of snow had fallen and more since. Some of the places would be several feet deep in snow. You would probably have to be pulled out and you would have every opportunity of breaking up your car. Even in summer the road is none too good, but then, when it is dry, there probably is a road between Oregon and Verona, although THE TRIBUNE does not know it. If an attempt is to be made, however, it would probably be safer to go to Madison and then west on the Prairie du Chien road. From McHenry go to Lake Geneva, then to Delavan, Janesville, and Madison.

"Having but lately discovered your department in THE TRIBUNE, I have read your articles with much interest. If not too much trouble, I would like to get the best route from here to Momence, Ill., where I expect to spend a few days hunting. I am wondering if the roads to Momence will warrant using my Ford car to get there. What kind of roads are they? If one should get caught in a wet spell while there would the character of the roads be likely to greatly hinder the return trip? V. F., Chicago."

You can go there in a Ford as well as in any car and the route through Indiana will be over hard roads practically all the way. If you should attempt to go by way of Chicago Heights and Crete you would find loam roads that would be bad in wet weather. Go direct to Hammond, then Crown Point and Lowell, which is on the old Cobe cup race course at its southwest corner. Anybody in Crown Point will put you on the Lowell road and you cannot get off of it if you follow the hard road. From Lowell you go southwesterly almost directly to Momence. It is about forty miles to Crown Point and thirty miles from Crown Point to Momence. Take tire chains with you; everybody should carry chains at this time of the year, wherever they go.

"Can you furnish me with information as to an automobile route from Chicago to San Francisco? Also will you inform me as to the name of the firm that manufactures the necessary road maps of same? FRANK L. BELLOWS, Chicago."

This topic has been dealt with generously by THE TRIBUNE during the last six months and a complete map of the Lincoln highway from New York to San Francisco was published. The Lincoln highway is marked practically all the way; it will be finished by spring. Then it will be easy to follow all the way. The Lincoln Highway association, Detroit, Mich., will furnish a large map and mileage book for 50 cents; the Automobile Blue book, Karpen building, Chicago, publishes maps and route data.

"We read an article in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE relative to a new discovery, how to make gasoline out of rainwater and secret materials. If you care to, we should like to be put in correspondence with the parties or the source of your information. We are using from 250 to 1,000 gallons of gasoline daily.

"S. K. W., Sterling, Ill."

This is termed synthetic fuel, the invention of John Andrews, a Portuguese-American of McKeesport, Pa., but the process of making and the ingredients are his secret. Recently some important tests were made at the Indianapolis motor speedway, in which Carl G. Fisher, president of the speedway, was interested, as well as Henry B. Joy, president of the Parckard company, and Howard Marmon of the Marmon company of Indianapolis. THE TRIBUNE does not have Mr. Andrews' address, but possibly Mr. Fisher can supply it.

POPULAR SCIENCE

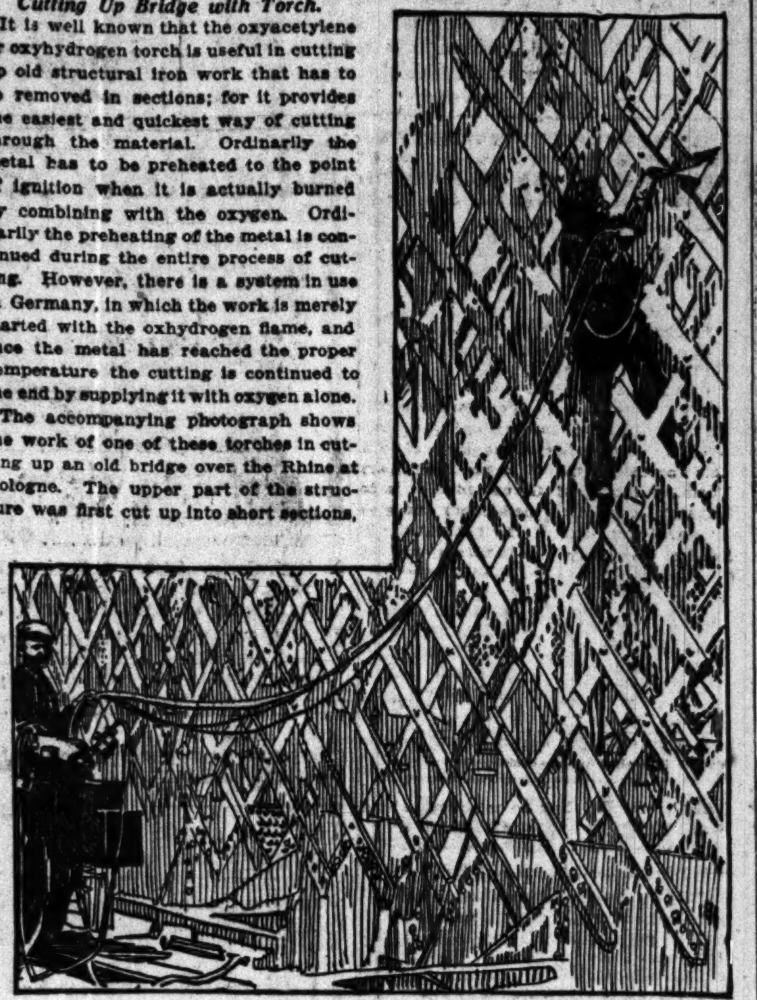
It is well known that the oxyacetylene or oxyhydrogen torch is useful in cutting up old structural iron work that has to be removed in sections; for it provides the easiest and quickest way of cutting through the material. Ordinarily the metal has to be preheated to the point of ignition when it is actually burned by combining with the oxygen. Ordinarily the preheating of the metal is continued during the entire process of cutting. However, there is a system in use in Germany, in which the work is merely started with the oxhydrogen flame, and once the metal has reached the proper temperature the cutting is continued to the end by supplying it with oxygen alone.

The accompanying photograph shows the work of one of these torches in cutting up an old bridge over the Rhine at Cologne. The upper part of the structure was first cut up into short sections, which were removed one after the other, leaving the floor structure intact. After that a pair of caissons were floated under the floor and when the latter had been cut free with a blow pipe water was pumped out of the caissons, permitting them to rise up and lift up the structure. Thereupon it was successfully transported some distance down the river, and finally landed on a neighboring bank.



Cutting up a bridge with oxyhydrogen torch.

Here the floor of the bridge was further cut up into small parts by the use of the oxyhydrogen torch.

Hearing Your Own Voice.

It is a well known and frequently observed fact that many singers and performers on musical instruments exhibit a degree of complacent satisfaction with their own efforts which is not at all commensurate with the amount of pleasure they have given their audience. But the exaggerated view they form of the musical value of their achievements is not entirely due to that vanity to which our poor human nature is so prone. They do not, as a matter of fact, hear themselves as others hear them.

This is particularly the case with a singer. A singer produces and hears a note at the same time, the sound being conveyed through the Eustachian tube of the ear. The external sound, the sound heard by the audience, is not, in the ordinary way, heard by the singer at all.

Donald McHardy, a voice specialist, has invented an apparatus to obviate this disadvantage under which all singers and instrumentalists have hitherto labored. The apparatus is extremely simple, and consists of a half sphere made of metal, connected to a long, flexible metallic tube. The tube terminates in two branches, the ends of which fit in either ear. The sound produced by the performer, after impinging on the open half sphere, travels down the metallic tube to the performer's ears. The sound heard by the performer in this way corresponds exactly to the effect produced on an audience.

Revegetating Kodiak Island.

The eruption of Mount Katmai, Alaska, in June, 1912, covered the agricultural and grazing lands in the neighboring island of Kodiak with a heavy blanket of volcanic ash. Experiments in revegetating this land, carried on by the agricultural experiment station at Kodiak, have made such progress that the government herds of Galloway cattle have been returned to the reservations in the island. It has been found that wherever nitrogen is added to the volcanic ash or where the lower rich soil is mixed with the ash excellent crops can be raised. A special plow for mixing the ash and soil has been devised at the Kodiak station.

Hair in Cows' Stomachs.

Ruminants when licking themselves or their young swallow hairs which agglomerate into balls in their stomachs. Eventually they grow large enough to irritate the stomach, setting up contractions of the latter and the esophagus which result in the ejection of the hair. Sometimes the balls grow too large to pass through the digestive tube, and cause the death of the beast. The exterior of the ball is as hard as wood. The interior is matted like felt.

When You Have Your Car Overhauled

- Don't forget to have the piston rings examined.
- If you have ever noticed poor compression, power shortage for hill climbing or heavy road work, excessive carbon deposit in the cylinders, back-firing or a "knocking" engine, you can lay the blame on the piston rings of your motor.
- You'll find they are worn, badly fitting and with such poor or unequal bearing on the cylinder wall as to leak compression at every stroke. These faults are sure to develop in the ordinary piston ring after a short period of service. None of them will occur in

The LEAK-PROOF is a two-piece ring so designed and constructed as to make gas leakage impossible. Its use ensures you:

FULL MOTOR POWER—Because being two-piece, expansion openings are properly sealed. The halves are interlocking and concentric with opposing centers of expansion so that uniform tension on the cylinder wall is always secured. This is the distinctive and patented LEAK-PROOF feature. It means perfect compression.

SERVICE—Because they are made of special Processed Gray Iron of wonderful toughness that never loses its elasticity and will outlast the motor.

STRENGTH—Because the construction of the sections on the angle-iron principle gives them the greatest strength.

MINIMUM CARBONIZATION—Because surplus oil cannot get up into the combustion chamber either through or past the rings. It is the burning of this oil that creates carbon deposit.

OPERATING ECONOMY—Because they make every drop of fuel count and check waste of lubricating oil.

MAINTENANCE ECONOMY — Because they do not wear or mar the roundness of the cylinder and prevent the deterioration of lubricating oil caused by condensed gasoline vapor getting into the crank case.

Over 300,000 motors are now equipped with LEAK-PROOF Rings

Notes of the Automobile Trade.

By Reed L. Parker.

WHAT satisfactory service can do for the automobile business is well demonstrated by the move which has just been made by L. E. Wilson, president of the Motor Car Sales company, who has just opened a new sales room and service station for Pathfinder and Briscoe cars at 2329 Michigan avenue, the building formerly occupied by the Premier company.

This move, which places the Motor Car Sales company in the finest equipped service station in Chicago and one of the largest sales buildings devoted to automobiles, was made necessary by the big increase in Pathfinder business and by the volume of Briscoe business developed by Mr. Wilson since he came to Chicago six months ago.

In this short period Pathfinder sales have jumped 300 per cent over any corresponding period in the five years that the company has been represented here. The success of Pathfinder business, according to Mr. Wilson, has found its basis in a unique service system. Every purchaser of a car gets with his car a service coupon book which entitles him to free service at any Pathfinder service station in the United States as long as the coupon book lasts. This makes a universal service system. Should the owner find himself in need of attention in a section where the Pathfinder was not represented, the service plan still operates. Upon sending a receipted bill for the cost of the work done on his car to the factory at Indianapolis, together with sufficient coupons from his service book to cover the hours of labor, he receives a check refunding him for the expenditure.

If proper care is given to the car these service coupon books should last the owner several seasons, so they are completely protected against any service charges on the cars for a long time. This service coupon book in connection with the high standard of service maintained by Pathfinder cars is one of the biggest selling assets of the manufacturing company.

Associated with Mr. Wilson in the management of the Motor Car Sales company is W. E. Stalmaker, vice president, who was formerly Chicago manager for the Premier company. Mr. Wilson, previous to coming to Chicago, was general sales manager of the Motor Car Manufacturing company, at Indianapolis, and at present retains the office of sales director for this same organization.

It is the contention of the Motor Car Manufacturing company, builder of the Pathfinder car, that the real field for successful motor car representation lies around the $2,000 mark. Quality production can be carried just so low in the price scale before cheapness must be resorted to in some part of the construction which immediately lowers the high standard of workmanship in the car itself. Automobile building will probably never reach much greater heights in quantity production than those that are mapped out for 1915. Much greater development in the line of high grade cars that would tend toward lower cost cannot be expected.

Transcontinentalists who plan to use a southern route one way will find that a great deal of work has been done during 1914 and much better conditions prevail than is generally supposed.

West of the Mississippi much money has already been spent to make a southern route practicable. Arkansas has let contracts for ten miles of road to connect with the bridge just north of Memphis and eleven miles to connect with the ferry from Trotter's Landing to Helena. New Mexico highway officials are cooperating with the road associations and have constructed a good highway between Las Cruces and Deming. This considerably shortens the route to Phoenix, Ariz., and eliminates the poor stretch into El Paso.

W. E. Anderson, who has been connected with several of the large rubber companies, is now district manager of the Dayton Rubber Manufacturing company of Dayton, O. His headquarters are 2011 Michigan avenue, Chicago, and he will appoint dealers for Dayton airless and Dayton pneumatic tires in this territory.

Reduction No. 3 On Goodyear Tires

Making Total Reductions 45 Per Cent in Two Years To Give Always the Most for the Money

We are glad again—for the third time in two years—to announce a big reduction on Goodyear tires, effective February 1st.

Goodyear policy on price is to give the utmost in a tire at the lowest possible profit. Our reductions are made to that end, without ever reducing the quality.

That always means, with our matchless output, more for the money than any other maker can give.

As rubber came down our prices came down. As our output multiplied, reducing factory cost, our prices came down with it. In two years our reductions—including the present—have totaled 45 per cent.

Last year we increased our output 26.6 per cent. A few days ago the embargo on rubber was modified so that supplies seem assured. The market price for rubber seems for a time established. Fabric costs less than last year. So, under our minimum profit policy, we announce this new reduction.

Only Fair Basis

We consider profit margin on a tire the only fair price basis. We keep that margin just as low as our line allows.

While we do that, Goodyear tires will always undersell any tires that compare with them. That is because we have the largest output. We have a new factory, modernly equipped. And we have worldwide facilities for buying rubber, of our extra grade, at the lowest market price.

For a long, long time most tires have sold much above Goodyear prices. Some have sold one-third higher. A few have sold lower, as some always will, because of less rubber, less quality. But we can and do, under all conditions, give more for the money than any rival tire can offer.

The Best We Know

Goodyear Fortified Tires offer the best we know. They are built to give you the lowest cost per mile. They minimize tire trouble in five costly ways employed by no other maker. And they are always the same, regardless of price reductions.

Most tires will always sell higher, because of smaller output. Some tires will always sell lower because of lower standards. But we promise you that none will ever give better than Goodyear value.

This policy has made Goodyears the largest-selling tires in the world. It will make them more so as more men find them out.

Ask your Goodyear dealer for our new price on the size you buy.

TRAIL of the BOY SCOUTS

BY ONEY FRED SWEET

Questions relating to Scout practice will be answered if addressed to "The Trail of the Boy Scouts," in care of this paper. Inclose stamped envelope if you wish a personal reply.

SIGNAL CORPS OF ENGLISH BOY SCOUTS

In one of my previous articles, you will recall, I touched upon the part the boy scouts in Europe are taking in the great war. I am glad to say the scouts are doing all they can to relieve suffering rather than doing anything to cause suffering.

In England the utility of sea scouting has been amply proved in the employment of boy scouts as coast watchers. A great many of the English troops meet once a week for land instruction in Morse and semaphore signaling, boxing the compass, theoretical watermanship, and land drill in rescue and release for life saving. Then on Saturday afternoons the boys go to their boat and get out on the River Thames.

That the boy scout training and the sea scout instruction give the boys the spirit of bravery and chivalry was emphasized in October, 1913, when the sailing ketch Mirror, belonging to the Boy Scout association, was run down by a coaster in the mouth of the Thames. The yacht was manned by a dozen of the scouts of the Fourth City of London sea scouts. Only the masters and the assistant scout masters were on deck. The yacht was run into and nearly cut in two, and immediately began to settle. The assistant scout master rushed downstairs and roused the boys, and as many as possible got on deck and in obedience to orders got up the rigging a little way. The mainmast soon came down, however, and carried those on it beneath its débris into the cold night waters. The boys stood firmly waiting for orders, and were as calm as if in their own clubrooms. One went down in the companionway up to his neck in an effort to save any one who might be left below. Four poor lads lost their lives. At least one of these four could have saved his own life had he chosen, but he preferred to look after the others. The boys endured their suffering in the water bravely. One scout being asked what he did in the water replied: "O, I just swam about, sir."

The "wenie" is the favorite food for hikes used by the Association house, troop 13, Chicago. Scout Frank Sampson of that organization writes me of a hike that was taken by the troop recently during which their "newly initiated, tenderest tenderfoot" lost himself.

"Our troop held its second hike last Sunday," writes Frank, "and we got far enough in the country to have a great time. We also had along one of our newly initiated, tenderest tenderfoots, who went and lost himself trying to be trailmaker of a trail he knew nothing about. The 'wenie' furnished most of us with our dinner, as it is our favorite food on hikes and something without which we cannot get along. Besides jumping over snowbound ditches, there were three legged races until one of the pair fell plumb into a ditch full of snow and had to be hauled out. We broke camp for home at 5:30 o'clock and came back singing and whistling. And the greenest tenderfoot has thus learned something. But I will not bore you any longer."

Don't be afraid of "boring" me with a letter like that, Frank. I know there's great stuff in that Association house bunch. That time when I went out on a hike a month or so ago there was one of the kids along who gave me a "wenie" and I know just how good they taste after a few hours' tramping through the woods. They are especially good after they're put on the end of a green stick and held over the fire until they start to sizzle.

Through these columns, the First battalion, First infantry, I. N. G., wishes to extend to all Boy Scouts in Chicago an invitation to attend what is to be known as Glenwood night at the First Regiment armory, Sixteenth street and Michigan avenue, Wednesday night, Feb. 17. On this occasion the Glenwood Military Training school of Glenwood, Ill., is to bring its student to the armory and give an exhibition drill. The battalion will furnish ice cream and refreshments for the boys and will give an exhibition battalion parade.

GEORGE E. A.: Yes, from time to time this department will give instructions on camp life. One of these days we are going to wake up and find the spring breezes blowing, and the more the prospective camper knows about how and where to camp the better.

ARTHUR H.: You do not have to be a Boy Scout, Arthur, in order to get a Boy Scout's handbook. The handbook costs 25 cents. I would like to see you join a troop.

ROBERT: I have not heard of the change in smoke signals where "I am lost, help" is signaled by three fires instead of two. As I undertsand it one fire means "Camp is here"; two fires, "I am lost, help"; three fires, "Good news"; four fires, "All come to council." As I say, I have not heard of this code being changed.

BILL: The call of the black bear is the same as the bear—a growl, "Boorr."

The Car You Buy Should Be Equipped With A High Tension Magneto

There are two kinds of ignition—the ordinary battery system and the high tension magneto system.

The battery system is the cheapest.

It is not always reliable though many popular priced car manufacturers still furnish it.

The high tension magneto system is the most expensive.

It is the most certain.

It is the most uniform.

Practically all the highest priced cars are equipped with the high tension magneto system.

So is the Overland!

A Wonderful Showing of Women's New Spring Dresses

The new styles are most attractive, in their charming simplicity. The bodices show high waist lines and jaunty coat effects, buttoned high to neck and finished with dainty touches of silk, ornaments, fancy buttons and fine lace. The skirts are made in full flare and ripple effects; many with several rows of shirring at waist line and deep fold around the bottom.

Second Floor.

The new fabrics are of fine texture and are exceptionally soft and dainty. Prominent among the woolens are the fine serge weaves, poplins, and gabardines, while in the new silks are radium and willow taffetas, failles and rich satins.

The new colors for spring tend strongly to blues and tans. Among the former are the Cunard, Hague and Belgian blues, while in tans are the pretty shades of putty and sand. Othercolors prominently featured are new shades of gray, amethyst and copper.

Kelly Paintings at Art Institute.

At an exhibition of American art at the Art institute there hung, a season not long past, the portraits of two of my friends, one a woman, the other a man. The latter was in a sense of perfect likeness. Each feature taken separately was almost a photographic reproduction of the original, yet as a whole it gave no adequate idea of what the subject looked like. A stranger being told that he was in the room could easily have identified him by the picture, it is true, but to his friends it meant almost nothing, possibly because there burns in his face that which obscures mere features.

The portrait of the woman, on the contrary, was in no sense a likeness of the photographic order. The features taken separately were only daubs of paint. And yet when you saw it you half expected her to speak; you certainly remembered when she looked at you in just that way—you were conscious of her mannerisms.

This circumstance seemed a striking comment on the distribution of gifts. It is the way of artists—one is able to paint substance and another spirit. Seldom is it given to one man to produce a happy combination of the two, and when it does happen he is marked for greatness.

Such seems to be the unconscious good fortune of Gerald Festus Kelly, according to several critics of note who have been watching the young painter closely. He has painted in Spain and Burma pictures that bring views of these countries back to us as truly as they were photographed upon the retina of the artist's eye.

They are mostly pictures of women, for he seems to know that its women more than anything else are stamped with the character of a country. Perhaps it is part of Mr. Kelly's Celtic heritage that he is imaginative enough to absorb the spirit of a people vastly different from his own. This is a gift that over and above his artistic talent should make expression almost necessary to him, and which as a supplement to his ability as an artist should assure his future.

Stan Stanley—What do you mean by interrupting my act?

Man in audience—Well, my girl's up in the balcony and she's got my rubbers and I'm just trying to attract her attention and tell her not to kick the rubbers off the balcony. They're good rubbers. I've had them for three years.

Stanley—Well, don't interrupt.

Man—She's up there with another fellow. We were standing in the lobby and she introduced me to this other guy and said it was her cousin, so I let 'em sit together and I've been watchin' 'em and I don't think the guy's her cousin at all and she's got my car fare home and I don't want to have to walk home. Every time I get a good lookin' girl some guy comes along and cops her.

Stanley—Well, I can't help that. Ladies and gentlemen——

Man—She's got my car fare.

Stanley—Well, don't cry in here——

Man—Have they got a ballroom here?

Stanley—Please don't interrupt. My act is a short act and it only takes me two minutes so——

Man—Throw 'er in high, kid.

Stanley—What do you work at?

Man—Who? Me?

Stanley—Yes, you. What are you?

Man (hesitating a minute)—If I don't get that car fare from my girl I'll be a pedestrian.

MISSOURI

Eighteenth state in point of area, seventh in point of population. Settled by the French, it was a part of the Louisiana purchase in 1803, and became a state in 1821, after nearly 3 years of bitter controversy over the slavery question. This controversy ended in the famous "Missouri Compromise." By the terms of this agreement Missouri alone of all states north of 36 degrees 30 minutes was to be permitted to be a slave-holding state, but though torn by conflicting elements this state stood fast by the Union in the Civil War. Glorious in its history, foremost in wealth, and prolific in resources, Missouri is a state that should be represented in every collection of our State Souvenir Spoons.

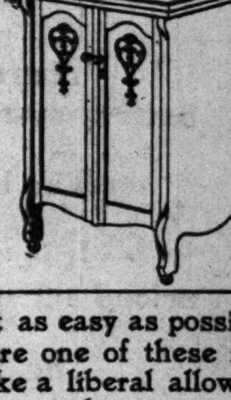
The FREE Sewing Machine

A Beautiful Cabinet Machine That Will Be an Ornament in Any Home



To make it as easy as possible for everyone to secure one of these new machines we will make a liberal allowance for your old machine and you can pay the balance in payments as low as $1 weekly.

Just as the invention of the drop head sewing machine marked a tremendous improvement over the old box top machine, so does this wonderful invention mark such an advance over the drop head machine that it is the supreme achievement in sewing machine history.

It rests on an invisible iron stand and is as rigid as any machine that ever was made. Every part of the machine collapses inside the cabinet, which is as sightly a piece of furniture as there is in any home. It would not be out of place in a parlor. Its mechanical perfection is due to the countless improvements which make the FREE the finest of all sewing machines. It has seven sets of ball bearings to make it easy running. It bears an ironclad guarantee and the famous insurance policy given all FREE machines.

PERSONAL.

PERSONAL—A CHICAGO BUSINESS MAN, in the forties, belongs to two so-called exclusive clubs, having in consequence a number of acquaintances, but with dissimilar tastes. auction bridge, rum, poker, Kelley and cowboy pool are to them exciting winter sports. The advertiser has become tired of being "bank" for the privilege of "being in" on these games, much preferring the theater, with a quiet before or after supper, or bowling. Their summer amusement consists in following a golf ball over a sixty acre lot, at so much per hole. The advertiser prefers "rooting" at a ball game with an occasional week end in the country fishing and swimming, and so it goes ad infinitum. He wishes to meet a kindred spirit up against similar conditions, believing a desirable comradeship would result therefrom. The one to qualify must be a well educated, refined, genial, broad gauged gentleman also in the forties. His business and income must be such as will allow latitude for an occasional time off afternoons or evenings. Prefer that answers be not typewritten and would like age and any particulars given that may be considered essential. Give business address and phone, else cannot reply. Would also like to know whether living on South or North Side. Address T P 351, Tribune.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

Getting Busy

THE NATIONS AT WAR produce one-half the world's food, in times of peace, and the United States one-fourth. While destruction and ruin continue in the warring countries, about one-half the world's supplies must be produced elsewhere. How much can the United States add to its one-fourth? We occupy one-sixteenth of the globe and have one-fifteenth of its population.

UNCLE SAM IS GETTING BUSY. Orders are coming and shipments of foodstuffs are going abroad as never before. We have the acres, the fertility, and productiveness, but need more workers on farms. In connection with the Agricultural Department, notices will soon be posted in all postoffices to find jobs for all unemployed men. Already we produce 68 per cent of the world's corn, 30 per cent of its live stock, and 20 per cent of its wheat; but we must produce more, and with the sustained high prices, never was there a greater incentive to produce.

THE AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT has called upon Michigan to increase her output of potatoes. Beans at $3 per bushel and rye flour at $7.50 per barrel demand more growers in Michigan of these money crops. There are the same requirements for beef, mutton, and poultry. Michigan is famous for these products and the lands in the Swigart tract are especially adapted for the growth of them, also clover, vetch, alfalfa, oats, winter wheat, barley, timothy, 60 day and fodder corn, vegetables and fruits. Prices of these lands are from $10 to $35 per acre and the terms of purchase $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 per month on 40 acres. It offers a real opportunity to men with very little means who seek a vocation that is profitable and healthful, where they can work for themselves.

YOU OUGHT to get busy if you want to own a farm. Spring will soon be here, when a large number of new settlers will move in. Make up your mind that you will choose some land in this tract where 50,000 acres are now on sale, and from this large selection you surely can be suited. Send today for my 72 page free book which tells all about this tract and contains 115 photographic illustrations. Learn all about the insurance benefit which goes with the contract, our seed distribution plan, and corps of agricultural advisers who go among the settlers constantly, directing and advising them. Inquire about the privilege of exchange for other land and other liberal features of my proposition. Call, if you can, and ask also for a large map and see samples of 1914 crops and 190 views which are constantly being shown in my stereopticon room. Office remains open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

An agent wanted in every town.

ARNOLD'S HAIR TONIC AND DANDRUFF REMOVER.

ENJOYED BY HAIR DRESSERS FOR REMOVING ALL GREASY APPEARANCES.

REMOVES EXCESSIVE OIL.

As a tonic Arnold's Hair Tonic is of value in the treatment of the following troubles:

FOR FALLING HAIR.

Falling hair is usually the result of lack of nourishment to the hair roots. This may be due to several causes, but the result is always the same—a distressing fear of baldness. Arnold's Hair Tonic has proven its great value in nearly every case where it has been used. Often after the third or fourth application the falling has materially lessened and the use of one bottle has usually been sufficient to restore the healthful vigor to the scalp and permanently remove the disturbing causes.

REMOVES AND PREVENTS DANDRUFF.

Dandruff is usually the result of a dry, unnourished condition of the scalp. This is remedied by the use of Arnold's Hair Tonic, for this unexcelled tonic is so composed that it supplies just the nourishment the scalp needs. Thus the cause of dandruff is removed and the result—a clean head—is assured. Dandruff checks the hair growth.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy.

SPECIAL VALUES NOW

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been entirely taken apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is as good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performances of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values, these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

SIX CYLINDER LOCOMOBILES

buys approximately $500 worth of value in this type of used car. Used cars originally selling for as high as $5,000 may be bought for a fraction of their actual value. The cars we offer are, to all practical purposes, new cars, which have been thoroughly tried out by use, with all worn parts replaced by the makers. In appearance the cars offered are up to date; they run smoothly, are unusually easy riding, economical in fuel and tires, and are light in weight for the power carried. The following list gives an idea of the cars, which we will demonstrate at your convenience:

1913 38 Little Six Roadster; repainted maroon, electric starter and lights.

1912 6-48 5 pass. Torpedo; repainted maroon, electric starter and lights; fast and stylish.

1911 6-48 Touring and Limousine; ideal all year combination; excellent value.

For those wishing a smaller, lighter car than those above listed we have a few good values in rebuilt, repainted, four cylinder Locomobiles.

In addition to the above cars we have a few very good values in other makes of cars, including Pierce Arrows, Packards, Peerless, Stevens-Duryeas, and Loziers.

Convenient terms arranged.

A deposit will hold your car until touring time.

They Wrote to "The Editor"

As you may know, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE has a world-wide reputation for bringing big results to its advertisers.

Of course it is but natural to expect results from THE TRIBUNE'S enormous circulation of over 500,000 Sunday and over 300,000 on week days, but there is a quality beyond mere numbers that makes TRIBUNE advertising space productive.

This other quality is Responsiveness.

200,386 Letters

from TRIBUNE readers. These letters were from those who sought advice, asked questions, offered comment or competed for prizes, and were only a small part of the total number of letters received by the news and editorial departments.

It is doubtful if any other newspaper in the world receives anything like this number of letters in a year from its readers to its feature editors.

The same responsiveness that inspires these letters makes advertising in THE TRIBUNE pay.
